A report was made on the Bowmanville Boy's Farm to which this Club contributed $670.00 and a representative of the farm explained its objects. The convention was assured that the Government is going ahead with the scheme and only red tape interferes with its completion. Many of the clubs are not carrying out the obligations assumed by them in this connection and in fact Peterborough is one of the few clubs which have discharged their full responsibilities.

Roy Kennedy of Ottawa, suggested that the duty of the preparation of the International Efficiency Contest be taken off the Secretary and given to the vice-president or some other officer who would keep a permanent record of all club activities, addresses, attendances and so forth, with the title 'Club Scribe' or "Club Historian." This was, however, left to the discussion of the individual clubs, but it was urged that each club take part in the Efficiency Contest; not merely for the sake of the competition, but so that other clubs may know what activities are being successfully adopted and carried through in the whole organization.

I am glad to be able to report to you that the report of our activities for the district convention, 1925-26, was the best submitted at the convention. This does not mean that it won the efficiency trophy, which on the authority of the chairman of the contest committee, went to the Yarmouth, Nova Scotia Club because that club "needed encouragement." I cannot impress upon you too strongly that the chairman admitted that there was not a single point on which we had fallen down; there was not fault to find with our report in any way and our record was referred to by Stanley Higman, Bill Cockburn, and other speakers, in the most laudatory terms.

Our exhibit of pictures showing the activities carried on during the past year was at least as good as any. You will have an opportunity of looking over the pictures which show what you have done, and it is intended at a later date to let you see in written form the efficiency report that we prepared in so high hope, a few days ago. Probably the disappointment that we have received in not being awarded any recognition of our efficiency had better be taken in the spirit outlined by Mark Bredin to me on Tuesday night. Mark said, "After all, the people in Peterborough know us for what we are; we are doing the work Kiwanis is intended to do; we do not need to care about recognition that is being given in so hap-hazard a manner as this."

We did not gain the recognition you men deserved for your strenuous summer work, but I do not think we should be discouraged. We came away without honors but with honor. With the esteem in which we are held by the people who know us best—the people of our own Peterborough—and with our own self-respect we are better off without prizes that certify so little of real greatness."

SUITS ARISE FROM PROBE

Dominion Distilleries Being Sued By Government For Taxes.

ANOTHER CLAIM.

MONTREAL, Sept. 24 (Canadian Press).—Two legal actions arising out of the Customs inquiry, and designed to secure for the Revenue Department of Canada more than one and a half million dollars, of which it was allegedly defrauded by the failure of the defendants to pay taxes on alcoholic liquors sold, have been inscribed in the Exchequer Court of Canada, and will be heard later, at the discretion of the court.

The defendants in one are the Dominion Distillery Products Company, Ltd., and the Dominion Distillers, Ltd., both having their places of business in Montreal; and a number of men whose names figured prominently in the Customs inquiry, namely: William J. Hushion of this city; Leo George, Gregory A. George, D. M. George, all of Montreal; and James Cooper of the town of Walkerville, Ont. The amount claimed by the Attorney-General for Canada, in the name of His Majesty, is $830,855.52. Information in this and the Registrar of the Exchequer Court by R. L. Calder, K.C., solicitor for the Attorney-General.

The second case is directed against the St. George Import and Export Company, whose place of business is given as being in the French Colony of St. Pierre et Miquelon, and against the men named in the foregoing list, all principals of the two companies. The claim in the second case is for $686,066.23, and the charge is based upon grounds similar to those in the first action.

The individual defendants are especially indicted under a section of the information which charges them with conspiring to procure the defendant corporations to commit the acts already alleged, and, further, with conspiring to receive and retain the proceeds of the transactions of sale. It is claimed they received and retained these proceeds for their own use, and that the defendant corporations never did receive any part of them.

Tunney New Heavyweight Champion

Outfights Dempsey All the Way Through Ten Round Battle

Former Champion Only Shell of Fighter Who Beat Willard—Eight of Ten Rounds Accorded Tunney By Observers.

BOUT FAR FROM SPECTACULAR AS BOXERS FIGHT CAUTIOUSLY

RINGSIDE, SESQUI-CENTENNIAL STADIUM, PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Sept. 24.— Gene Tunney, the fighter marine, is the new heavyweight champion of the world. He dethroned Jack Dempsey king for the last seven years, last night, by smashing his way to decisive victory in a ten-round match that went the limit and furnished one of the greatest upsets in boxing history.

Dempsey, only a shell of his old fighting self, was outboxed and outfought from start to finish, groggy and bleeding in a one-sided battle that was decided in a driving rain before a record crowd of 132,000 spectators.

This great throng, forming a spectacle unprecendented in sports annuals, paid close to $2,000,000 to witness a match that fell far from the sensational heights expected of it.

Stunned at first by the amazing slowness, the lethargy and lack of old fighting fire in the champion's attack, the dripping throng cheered on the challenger as he steadily hammered and abttered his way to triumph, piling up points that gave him an overwhelming margin and earned him the unanimous decision of the judges.

Out-Generalled the Champion.

Tunney, reaching the pinnacle of a fighting career that started when he was a buck private in the ranks of the marines, fought a masterful battle, out-generalled Dempsey at nearly every turn and out-punched the champion with convincing ease. The battling product of the sidewalks of New York's Greenwich Village, at the age of 28, fairly won his laurels and cleanly demonstrated his right to the purple robes of pugilism.

But the handsome challenger dethroned a man who came to the end of the championship trail with few weapons and less stamina to defend his place at the top.

Dempsey entered the ring a 4 to 1 favorite, backed as heavily as any champion in history. Experts proclaimed him fit, in spite of his three-year lay-off, but except for a gallant stand and a few flases of his old self, he was outclassed.

Dempsey was far from the furious fighter, the "Tiger man" who smashed his way to sensational victories over Jess Willard, Georges Carpentier and Luis Firpo. Gone was the devastating punch, the furious aggressiveness that marked him as one of the most feared men in the ring.

Tunney's Right Decided Issue.

It was Tunney's terrific right hand blows to the head, chin and ribs that decided the battle. This blow, delivered like a ramrod, broke up Dempsey's rushes, opened up cuts about his face and finally, in the last round, closed his left eye completely.

Dempsey was a sorry sight in the final round, as Tunney, realizing victory and the goal of his fighting career was in his grasp, threw caution to the winds and lashed the champion about the ring. Gamely Dempsey, weaving and bobbing, bored in, but he only succeeded in taking a steady stream of punishment. With one eye closed, blood dripping from a gash under the titleholder's right eye, his mouth was cut and he was reeling, his knees wobbly under the furious shower of Tunney's attack.

Desperately as Tunney tried, however, he could not bring Dempsey down. The champion as he had done thorughout the fight absorbed his beating without giving much ground. In a wild sally, he called his own guns into play, the weapons that had knocked out most of the men he ever faced, but this time they weren't loaded.

Won Eight of Ten Rounds.

Tunney won eight of the ten rounds, and by so decisive a margin that no doubt was left of his supremacy, the Associated Press score sheet showed. None of the rounds were scored for the champion, and in only two—the sixth and seventh—was he conceded better than an even break. In both of these it was more a case of Tunney's cautiousness than Dempsey's own attacking success that affected the scoring.

But for his hesitancy to open up and put all his guns into action, Tunney might have won by a knockout or scored an even more decisive victory. The challenger was cautious at first because he feared Dempsey was holding back, purposely shifting his customary rushing tactics to upset the Marine's plan of battle. But as Tunney found a ready mark for his blows, as he discovered himself outpunching Dempsey consistently at close and long range, he became more aggressive, more confident.

Chiefly because of Dempsey's lethargy and Tunney's intermittent cautiousness, the bout had few thrills, few spectacular moments of the sort that have punctuated most of Dempsey's battles since he dethroned Willard on July 4, 1919.

the semblance of any except for one or two occasions when the fighters each slipped on the soaked and slippery surface of the ring.

Spectators Were Drenched.

Tex Rickard's weather luck finally failed, and for the first time since he began promoting boxing's biggest spectacles, but the soaked tens of thousands, including many women, refused to leave their seats. Many had come prepared, but the big majority took their drenching smilingly and stuck to the finish to cheer the advent of a new reign in Fistiana.

The champion had an advantage in weight, scaling 190 pounds to 185¼ for Tunney.

Tom Reilly, of Philadelphia, was the referee, and the two judges were Frank Brown, of Pittsburgh, and Mike Bernsteen, of Wilkes-Barre.

PHILLIES PLAY FIFTEEN INNINGS WITH THE REDS

Game Called on Account of Darkness With the Score 6-6.

CRITICAL MOMENTS.

Braves Defeat World Champion Pirates By One Tally Score.

NEW YORK, Sept. 24 (Canadian Press).—The battling Cincinnati Reds, hanging desperately on the tail of the League leading St. Louis Cardinals, yesterday forced the Phillies to go fifteen innings at Philadelphia, before darkness finally ended the contest, with no victor and the score 6-6.

Carlson was invincible in the pinches, and showed no signs of weakening under attack, although the game went well over two hours. Donohue also held the Phillies scoreless after the eighth inning, when they took the lead by a two-run rally, only to lose it in the same inning by the tying Cincinnati score.

It was a nip and tuck game throughout. Hal Carlson was in a couple of tight places in the overtime innings, but bore down at critical times. Dressen made four of the Reds fifteen hits. Walker had three. Sothern and Pipp hit home runs.

The world champion Pirates fell victims to Boston's late season drive, the Braves defeating Pittsburgh 2 to 1. Singles by J. Smith, Welsh and High, together with an error by Rhyne and Moore's sacrifice fly, accounted for Boston's two runs in the first inning. Traynor's single after Grantham's double in the fifth gave the visitors their run.

These were the only National League games escheduled yesterday.

HAGEN TO PLAY IN SEMI-FINALS

Wields Stroking Which Slashed Difficult Par of Salisbury Course.

WITH THREE OTHERS.

GARDEN CITY, N.Y., Sept. 24. (Canadian Press).—The thin links battle line of the south and midwest broke under whirlwind finishes yesterday and a quartet of metropolitan players, including Walter Hagen, stepped through the gaps into the semi-final round of the professional golf association championship.

Until mid-afternoon, every favorite in the hunt appeared threatened by dogged, determined pursuit, with Harry Hampton, of Memphis, Tenn., and Abe Espinosa of Chicago carrying on in the face of almost unbeatable golf. But in the end they yielded to stroking which slashed the difficult part of Salisbury to shreds and swept Johnny Farrell, Leo Diegel and Johnny Golden along with Hagen to the most impressive victories of the event.

ROYALS TO PLAY MERRITTON IN MIDGET FINALS

Eighth Inning Rally Nets Victory Four Runs and Game.

Stewart Slams Three Safeties and Accounts For Three Runs.

BELLEVILLE, Ont., Sept. 24. — Peterboro Royals won the right to meet Merritton in the finals for the Midget championship by trimming the Kingston Circle Six here yesterday by a score of 7 to 5. The winners trailed throughout, but by a spirited eighth inning rally netted them four runs and the game.

Cripps started on the mound for the Royals, but developed a sore arm and Holmes finished. Matheson hurled fairly effective ball until the fatal eighth. Stewart led in the hitting department with three safeties and accounted for three runs. Woods hammered out the longest hit of the afternoon, a three-bagger to deep left field, in the ninth inning.

Walter Gerow and Vern Weir of this city umpired.

FIREMEN READY FOR HARD GAME

Expect To Force Play-off With Toronto Team in O.A.S.A.

PLAY TO-MORROW.

The Firemen have had a hard week's practice in preparation for the game to-morrow at Riverside, when they meet the Paramount Players of Toronto in the second game of the semi-finals for the Ontario softball championship. It is expected that Dunkerley will start, and Bell in all probability will be on the mound for the Toronto team. The game is scheduled to start at 2.30, as the Firemen expect to go to the Douro Fair after to play the C.G.E. team. The local team is sure of a win, and in this event a third game will be played in Oshawa on Monday, with the winners meeting the winners of the Brantford-Hamilton (Firemen) in the final games for the championship.

GORDON SOCCER CUP FINAL TO-MORROW

Quakers and Thistles Play at Nicholls Oval—Kick-off at 3 O'clock.

The important Gordon Soccer Cup Final between the Quaker Oats and the Thistle will be played on Saturday (To-morrow) after-Thistle have won the trophy and three o'clock. The official referee for this match will be appointed by the President.

During the last two seasons, the Thistle has won the trophy and are determined to keep the cup in their possession for another year; while the Quaker Oats are right after it because they have never gained a hold on the cup since the memorable final at Riverside Park when they defeated the now defunct Canadian Woollens by three goals to one.

The game is at the Oval. Kick-of at 3 o'clock.

LEAD CHANGED IN FIRST DIVISION OF THE ENGLISH SOCCER LEAGUE

Birmingham Takes Place of Leicester City With Everton Victory.

BURNLEY DOWN.

Manchester-Swansea To Be Outstanding Game in Second Division.

LONDON, Sept. 24. —(Canadian Press).— Scheduled encounters in the First Division of the English Soccer League on Saturday do not furnish any outstanding matches, nor are the fixtures of such a sort as normally to menace the position of the leaders. Monday saw a change of leadership in the first string when Birmingham leap-frogged Leicester City by virute of their narrow victory over Everton. Burnley had already been dethroned when they succumbed to Manchester United at Old Trafford, last Saturday.

Birmingham are down to entertain Bury and the home supporters are not anticipating that Bury will do with Birmingham what they did in the same district last week, when they crashed Aston Villa at Villa Park by the odd goal in three. The Villa were no match for the Lancastrians, but Birmingham are a horse of another color. They are running in true championship form. Their only defeat so far was administered on them by the runners-up, Leicester City, in second game of the season and since then Birmingham have enjoyed practically an unbroken series of victories. They had one indecisive encounter a week ago last Monday when they were played to a goalless draw by the Wednesday, but since then they hav taken the scalps of West Bromwich and Everton. The latter was not a particularly creditable performance for Everton are the weakest team in the division just at present and on form Birmingham are worth vastly more than one goal over them. But it produced two necessary points and thus accomplished its purpose.

Leicester City are at home to Blackburn Rovers. The Rovers have been somewhat uncertain recently and their defeat by Sunderland on their own ground on Monday did not raise their stock any. But they have displayed a tendency to win away from home, their victories over West Ham and Bury taking place on visiting territory. Whether they can repeat at Leicester is another question. The runners up, in spite of their imposing position in the league, have won only three of their seven games, the remaining four being drawn.

Sheffield United appear to have recovered from their rough handling at Liverpool a couple of weeks ago when they were soundly beaten by five goals to one. Two victories, one over Derby County and the second over Leeds United, have made them more or less secure even though in both games the margin was a solitary goal. The Blades will be severely tested on Saturday, however, when they travel to the Tyneside and take on Newcastle United. The Northumbrians are ever uncertain. They have been thoroughly defeated on their own ground this season, Burnly handing them a five-one game nearly a month ago, and Bolton Wanderers have also taken their measure, at Bolton, but Newcastle had shown an upward trend since then and, even if they were unable to gather full points from Derby CSounty and Cardiff in their last two games, they at least had the satisfaction of dividing them. Newcastle are in need of a win, much more so than Sheffield, and that they will exert every effort to get it on Saturday goes without saying.

Burnley for a time was the wonder-team of the league, but their stocked dropped at Old Trafford a week ago. On Saturday, they confront Derby County, who came up Wednesday, and in spite of Derby's position near to the tail-end, Burnley will have a fight on their hands The County have played five games and in not one of them has the margin exceeded one goal. Only six goals have been scored against them—a record not equalled in the division, but on the other hand, they are a poor scoring lot themselves, having recorded only four goals in five games.

Other scheduled matches in the first string are:—

Bolton Wanderers at Aston Villa; Manchester United at Cardiff, Arsenal at Leeds; Everton at Liverpool; Huddersfield Town at The Wednesday; West Bromwich at Tottenham Hotspur; Sunderland at West Ham.

One outstanding game is down for decision in the second division when the leaders. Manchester City, meet the runners-up, Swansea Town, at Manchester. A comparison of the present standing of these teams will indicate how close the battle will be:

Team	P.	W.	D.	L.	F.	Pts.
Manchester City ..	7	5	2	1	17	7 11
Swansea Town. ..	7	4	3	0	16	7 11

Manchester City have not yet lost at home, while Swansea Town have out of three matches played away, won one, against Grimsby Town, and drawn two, against Wolverhampton and Notts Forest. This would indicate that Manchester are strong on their own terrain, while Swansea sem to feel an adverse influence while playing away from home.

This game will be one of the most interesting of the entire league and may have quite an influence second division.

MIDGET FINALS HERE TO-MORROW

Royals Play Merritton Team Right After Softball Game.

In connection with the Ontario Midget Baseball finals, a game will be played between Merriton and All Saints' Royals at James Stevenson (Riverside(Park, commencing about four o'clock, directly after the Soft Ball game is finished.

As the expenses of the return trip to Merriton have to be defrayed from the proceeds of to-morrow's game it is hoped that all who attend the Soft Ball game will remain for the Midget game and contribute generously to the collection.

TUNNEY CREDITS PUNCH IN FIRST

Believes Right To Jaw Soon After Bell Decided Bout.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 24 (Canadian Press). — Tunney, the new heavyweight champion, believes that he won the bout in the first round. "The right I landed on the jaw soon after the first bell didn't do Jack any good," he smiled. His followers are also of the same opinion.

Experts analysing the battle agreed to-day that the sting of Dempsey's punch had been lost as a result of his three years of inactivity. Dempsey looked splendid in training, but in the fire of actual combat his timing of blows was amazingly poor and his co-ordination in delivery was off.

Surprise in England.

LONDON, Sept. 24 (Canadian Press).—Jack Dempsey's defeat and Gene Tunney's accession to the heavyweight boxing title caused a sensation among sport lovers, as most English critics believed that Dempsey would win within the first few rounds.

Although the bout did not start until 2.30 a.m., London time, many fans stayed up to listen to the report over the radio and read the extras put out by a number of morning papers.

TUNNEY SMILES AFTER VICTORY

Has a Good Word For Dempsey's Actions in the Ring.

SESQUI STADIUM, PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 24—Gene Tunney, the Devil Dog, who punched the heavyweight championship out of Jack Dempsey here last night, was all smiles in his dressing-room after the fight.

Between being patted on the back and shaken by the hand by his friends, the new champion said:

"I'm glad that I won, for I knew that many of my friends had bet heavily on my chances of beating Dempsey. I knew that I would get Jack after the first round, for he was not as fast or murderous with his punches as I expected he would be.

"But he's the hardest hitter that I ever faced. He has the kick of a mule in both hands. The two hardest blows that he hit me with were right swings on my Adam's apple. I'm hoarse now from those two blows.

"I found Jack easy to hit at times, but, of course, was careful when I started swinging. Late in the fight, when I knew that I had the championship within my grasp, I clinched when I chose and tied Jack up so that he could not swing that left hook of his against my face.

Has Good Word for Dempsey.

"No matter what they say of Dempsey outside of the ring, he's a man in the ring, and did not take any unfair advantage. Twice he hit me low, but said he was sorry each time.

"He never really hurt me or had me in trouble. In the fourth round he came rushing from his corner and jarred me with several blows and at times his swings went wild. Thereafter he never caught me off guard as the round started.

"I want to thank my friends back in New York for their faith in me. I'm going to try to be a worthy champion and I hope my next fight is in New York."

"How about Wills?" queried one reporter.

"Well, I'd rather not talk about that subject right now."

Dempsey Has No Alibis

Jack Dempsey, the defeated world's heavyweight champion, had little to say in his dressing-room after the fight.

"I have no alibis to offer. A good man beat me for the title and I now offer my best wishes to Gene Tunney, the new champion. I wish him well.

"I fought a bad fight. I was confident that I could knock out Tunney, but now I know it was a mistaken idea.

"I couldn't corner Tunney and I couldn't get my blows going like I did against Firpo, Carpentier and Willard.

"I'm going to rest now. I don't know what my plans are for the future.

"Maybe I'll try a comeback."

VARSITY SQUAD IN TRAINING

Toronto Varsity's football squad is hard at work. The cut above shows Warren Snyder, Varsity's star plunging half, hurdling Masters and Trimble, who are acting as linesmen. Snyder weighs over 200 pounds this year and is "going great."

DEMPSEY CRIES IN HOTEL ROOM

Ex-Champion Breaks Down When in Seclusion—Pathetic Figure.

WANTS RETURN BOUT.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., September 24.4 — Jack Dempsey broke down and cried like a baby when he reached the seclusion of his hotel and was alone in the room with Jerry the Greek, his faithful little trainer, and Mike Trant, his companion. He was tremendously affected by his defeat, but bravely held up while making the trip from the stadium to the hotel. His left eye closed shut and his right eye cut, he was a pathetic figure. After burying his face in his hands for a few minutes he regained his composure.

Dempsey wants another fight with his conqueror. When he rushed to the centre of the ring to greet Tunney he asked him for another chance. Dempsey's handlers said that Tunney had agreed. The ex-champion prised Tunney, declaring that he won honestly.

"I couldn't seem to get going," he said. "But I have no complaint to offer. I knew I was going to get licked some time, and I'm glad I lost the championship to an American. I defeated all the foreigners they could send over."

Softball League

Eight teams are entered for the Softball League, the games to be played in the Lakefield Rink, viz., Lakefield Cubs, Lakefield Benedicts, Canada Cement Co., North Douro, Centre Douro, Warsaw, Selwyn, and Wesley.

The Lakefield Rink Company's handsome silver cup is the trophy to be played for. It was won last year by the Selwyn team after a most exciting season. The games were very popular and large numbers attended.

LAWN BOWLING.

FRUIT TOURNAMENT.

To-night the Peterborough Lawn Bowling Club will hold their usual Friday night tournament. As the season for bowling will soon be over, it is hoped that every member of the club will be present. Visitors are invited. The greens are in good shape. All those who intend to compete please have in their names early, as the draw will be made promptly at 7.30.

MILLION SPENT

which this arrangement still left upon the farmer was too great to permit of rural construction becoming really general, and the consequence was that the Ferguson Government, during the first session in which it had control of legislation, extended the bonus to secondary as well as to primary lines. Interest in rural Hydro immediately received a stimulus, and a substantial increase over the record of the previous years was made last year when the Government expended some $350,000 in bonuses. This year's million dollar total represents an increased interest in Hydro far greater than can account for on the grounds of merely normal growth, and it indicates the extent to which Hydro power has become a most valuable practical aid to the agriculturist.

Strain on Treasury.

Various features of a government policy during the past year threaten to operate against what would otherwise be a plethoric condition in the Provincial Treasury. General collections of revenues during the year have been most satisfactory, so much so that Premier Ferguson has stated on the public platform that the $1,000,000 deficit for which the Provincial Treasurer budgetted will in all probability not be incurred. On the other hand, however, the popularity of the Province's rural Hydro policy, as well as the increasing extent to which advantage is being taken of its educational grants, have prevented an undue surplus from accumulating in the hands of Hon. Mr. Price. Several vocational schools have been encouraged during the year in various municipalities by the generous aid which the scheme of Government grants extends to them.

Brief details of the plan which he is working out to have first year university work taught in certain collegiates and high schools of the Province were given yesterday by Premier Ferguson upon his return from St. Thomas, where he had officiated at the opening of the most modern high school which that city has erected. Premier Ferguson said that he expected to have his plan in readiness for the academic year of 1927 to 1928, and declared that it would be available generally through the Province, wherever high school facilities and staff qualifications existed upon a proper plane. Increased grants would be provided, he stated, for such high schools and collegiates as might elect to come under the plan.

THEATRE

AT THE CAPITOL.

ZANE GREY'S "DESERT GOLD."

One of Zane Grey's popular stories is pictured at the Capitol Theatre this week-end in "Desert Gold," a feature of the Western type which always retains a place in public favor. There is a touch of the Bill Hart method of conclusion in this picture, in which the actor who appears to some of the audience as the better man loses out with the girl, and is pictured in the final close-up as a noble renouncer of her favor, allowing his best chum, who has acted as her guard in various calamitous adventures, to reap the reward of his bravery..

The method of production of "Desert Gold" is somewhat curious, but seems to blend admirably with the atmosphere of the tale. There is an odd introduction in a placing of the story in the early nineties of the past century, imparting a story-book flavor to the story which is later dissipated by the stirring action of the western section. The tale seems to leap out of its fiction-like introduction to a new impetus in the thrills of its later portion.

Neil Hamilton is the handsome gentleman, Lieutenant George Thorne, who loves the little Mercedes and then is compelled to stand aside and see her bestow her affections on his friend, Dick Gale, the tenderfoot from New York City, a part played by Robert Frazer. The heroine is Shirley Mason, and the villain of the piece, one of the most interesting "bad men" encountered on the screen in some time, is William Powell, giving a fine characterization of "Snake" Landree, who pursues his attempt to abduct the girl with an enthusiasm worthy of a better cause. There are interesting scenes depicting the outwitting of the bandits by the tenderfoot, and a subsequent thrilling sand storm, in the desert, where the fugitives undergo some perilous hours.—Jeanette.

AT THE REGENT

"The Crackerjact" A Perfect Screen Role For Johnny Hines.

Johnny Hines is "in" again with one of his extraordinary interesting and entertaining features. As "The Cracker Jack" this dynamic star gies a performance that is one of the most refreshing characterizations of his unusually successful career.

As Tommy Perkins, a go-getting college youth who decides to put his uncle's pickles on the map, Johnny Hines starts out with a burst of speed and uproarious laughs that continue right on to the final fade-out, and how well he does this is evidenced by the gales of laughter and the attention of the audince that crowded the Regent to the doors last evening. In the opening shot of the picture Hines is shown working his way through college by taking employment in a restaurant where he meets Rose Bannon whose father is making plans to overthrow the government of a South American country. In the process of putting Perkin's stuffed pickles on the map, Tommy later meets General Bannon and Rose. This results in a huge order which is ostensibly for South American export, but when Tommy discovers that the revolutionists intend stuffing his pickles with bullets in order to get them into South America. "The Cracker Jack" uses some uniquely clever means to not only frustrate the plot but he stops the revolution, saves the life of the president and captures the bold, bad bandit who inveigled General Bannon into his revolutionary plans. This is but the merest outline of a plot that fairly smashs of ginger, pep, thrills, comedy and action. Johnny Hines portrayal of the clever young advertising man and his insatiable vim to put his product over is indeed one of the masterpieces of the screen. Hines possesses a quality of sincerity in his work that forces itself upon the public, and despite the many impossible things he manages to do, one is nevertheless swept along breathlessly right to the end.

Our tip for all is: see "The Cracker Jack." It possesses exhilaration, imagination, and an unusual abundance of laughs and thrills.

MOOSE HUNTING GOOD THIS YEAR

Hunters in Northern Quebec Report Some Fine Kills.

BIG ANIMALS.

MONTREAL, Sept. 24 (Special to The Examiner).—That the present moose hunting season, which opened on September 10th, has already surpassed any previous seasons in the Vermillion River District along the line of the Canadian National Railway, is the opinion of Armand Tremblay, the well-known outfitter of La Tuque, who has just returned from Creek des Prairies. What is more, Mr. Tremlay's opinion is backed up very substantially by the fact that with the season but thirteen days old, nine American sportsmen have bagged a moose each, with antlers ranging from a spread of 38 inches to one 53 inches.

R. E. Tremain, of Ithica, N.Y., has killed a moose with a spread of 53 inches, is the information sent to Montreal by Mr. Tremblay. The same report tells also of the success of Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Montanye of Laconia, N.Y. Both are excellent shots, if would appear, from the fact that Mr. Montanye's head had a spread of 52 inches while his wife's gun brought down another moose with a spread of 47 inches. Other which had a spread of 38 inches; J. lay's report are Oscar Hock, of Miami, Florida, who shot a moose with a spread of 52 1-2 inches; M. L. Miller, of Shippensburg, Penn., whose moose had a spread of 42 inches; P. W. Breyfogle, who resides at 1003 East Market Street, Akron, Ohio, who bagged a moose which had a spread of 3 8inches; J. B. Stewart, whose capture boasted a 40 inch spread; A. E. Dann, with a moose whose antlers measured 42 inches from tip to tip; and Mr. Doyle, of Ithaca, N.Y., whose Moose had a spread of 49 inches.

Equally good hunting is also reported from the Lake St. John and Lake Edward districts along the C. N. R. Moose are already beginning to answer to the call and sportsmen are assured of good hunting whatever district they decide on going to.

Meighen Resigns And King Cabinet Assumes Office

Conservative Leader Announces His Intention of Giving Up Party Leadership—Ministry of Defence Not Filled When Cabinet Sworn.

MEIGHEN ANNOUNCES ASSISTANCE TO LIBERALS IN PASSING ESTIMATES

OTTAWA, Sept 25 (Canadian Press).—The Government has resigned. The resignation of the Meighen administration was presented to the Governor General this morning shortly after 10 o'clock by Premier Arthur Meighen and was accepted by His Excellency.

Rt. Hon. Mr. Arthur Meighen also announced that he did not intend to contest a seat in Parliament and that when the Conservative Conference meets on October 11, he would resign from the leadership of the party.

ative at the Imperial Confer-

After returning from Rideau Hall where Mr. Meighen tendered his resignation, the retiring Prime Minister said the Conservative party would facilitate in every way the attendance of the Canadian representance on October 19.

"If the session of Parliament is called this Fall," he said, "members of the late Government have agreed to assist in the prompt passing of last session's estimates and the despatch of any other business unfinished at dissolution." Mr. Meighen then announced his intention of resigning as leader of the Conservative party.

Mr. Meighen's resignation was followed by the summoning to Rideau Hall of Mr. King, who was invited to form an administration.

Shortly before noon, members of the incoming administration left for Laurier House. Thence they proceed to Rideau Hall to be sworn in.

The composition of the King Cabinet is officially announced as follows:

Prime Minister and Minister of External Affairs, Right Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King; Finance, Hon. J. A. Robb; Justice, Hon. Ernest Lapointe; Railways, Hon. C. A. Dunning; Interior, Hon. Charles Stewart; Public Works, Hon. J. C. Elliott; Agriculture, Hon. W. R. Motherwell; Trade and Commerce, Hon. James Malcolm; Customs and Excise, Hon. W. D. Euler; Health and D.S.C.R., Hon. Dr. J. H. King; Immigration, Hon. Robert Forke; Postmaster General, Hon. P. J. Veniot; Marine and Fisheries, Hon. P. J. A. Cardin; Solicitor General, Hon. Lucien Cannon; Secretary of State, Hon. Fernand Rinfret; Labor, Hon. Peter Heenan; without portfolio, Senator Dandurand. The portfolio of Defence is still in doubt, and was not to be announced today. Col. J. L. Ralston was originally slated for it.

MARKET BUSY PLACE TO-DAY

Supplies Plentiful With Little Change in Prices.

GREAT VARIETY.

The farmers' market was a busy place this morning, with plenty of everything, right from the Sunday dinner fowl and the herbs to dress it, down to the bouquet of flowers to grace the centre of the board. A gentleman with Oriental headdress was holding forth in impassioned accents on the open square on the disadvatnages of neglecting one's bodily welfare, while the fish vendor spoke of the excellencies of his finny wares and the fruit man in the entry compared his peach prices to store quotations, to the disadvantage of the latter.

Upstairs the ladies had plenty of fowl and dairy produce. Little, toothsome looking birds for the broiling pot were priced from 30 to 35 cents a pound, while hens were 25 cents and a couple of six and seven pound Plymouth Rocks that had lived a short life of fifty-two weeks were offered for 23 cents a pound. Ducks were 28 cents a pound.

Butter was quoted from 36 to 40 cents a pound, and eggs from 38 to 40 cents a dozen.

Honey was comparatively scarce, and pure clover was nowhere visible at eleven o'clock. Honey dealers reported a larger demand this year than in previous seasons. For light amber and buckwheat mixed, in small and large glass jars, 35 and 55 cents was asked, and 75 cents for five-pound pails of light clover variety.

Apples were fairly plentiful. One man had a wonderful quality of red Duchess at 30 cents a peck, but 25 cents was the regular price of the the Duchess, Wolf River and Wealthy varieties.

Corn was 15 and 20 cents a dozen for the yellow. Bantam, and a large white ear that answered to the name of Burpee's Early Fordhook was also 15 cents a dozen. Large, crisp cabbage, grown quickly in mold, were 10 cents a head, and potatoes were 30 and 40 cents a peck and $1.90 a bag. Green tomatoes were 25 cents a small basket, and the red variety variously priced at $1 a bushel and 50 cents a basket, or four baskets for $1.60.

Vegetable marrows and pumpkins were 15 cents apiece. A canny gentleman attached a proviso to the pumpkin quotation: "If you take it right away with you," and also added a rider to his tomato quotations, "If you leave me the

TWO CANADIANS HURT BY STORM OF LAST WEEK

Many Suffer Severe Property Losses During Florida Hurricane.

RACE TROUBLES.

Marines Fire at Negroes as Looters—Enforced Labor Gives Difficulty.

MIAMI, Florida, Sept. 25. Canadian Press. — A check up of Canadians affected by storm here last week, conducted by the Canadian Press by Vernon Knowles, a former Winnipeg newspaperman, indicates that only two—an unidentified man at Dania, Fla., and Mr. Knowles, himself—received injuries.

Mrs. Knowles, formerly of Kingston, Ont., and two daugthers, escaped injury, but their home was partly damaged by falling trees. It appears that numerous Canadians had suffered heavy damage to their property in the storm.

An optimistic spirit prevailed in the stricken zone to-day. Stores and business houses have opened to dispose of their depleted stock and partially ruined merchandise.

Accounts of the whereabouts and condition of Canadian residents of the State are coming in to F. A. Woodman, of Miami, who has opened a Canadian Bureau at 3402 North Miami Avenue.

It appeared yesterday that numerous Canadians had suffered heavy damage to their property in the storm.

While Rev. W. W. Sharp and his wife and five children, formerly of London, Ont., were reported safe and uninjured, Mr. Sharp's church at Dania was blown down and is a total loss. The furniture and roof of the parsonage blew away.

Robert G. Hall, of Toronto, lost his cabinet-making shop and all his machinery in the blow and sustained a minor injury to his back. Lef J. Haines, Toronto, lost his automobile and the furniture of his apartment when the house collapsed.

RACE FIGHT AT MIAMI.

(By Alfred P. Neck, United Press Staff Correspondent.)

MIAMI, Florida, September 25. — The aftermath of the West Indian hurricane, which devastated southern Florida, assumed a more serious aspect to-day than at any time since the storm broke.

Rehabilation plans of officials, especially the conscription of negro labor and Governor Martin's order to scores of families to evacuate the entire Lake Okeechobee district, where the finding of decomposed bodies increase the possibility of an epidemic, met difficulties. Stern measures have been adopted to quell race troubles threatened as an upshot of the wounding of two negroes and two marines, and the enforced labor of unemployed negro males.

Twenty-two negroes, two of them wounded, are under arrest as a result of the first otbreak. The marines, also, are under arrest in a hospital.

J. D. Allen and E. L. Melbourne, the marines, are said to have fired upon two negroes in the colored section of Miami. The marines said the negroes were looting a wrecked store. The negros returned the fire. All the participants in the clash were wounded and the incident threatened serious proportions, when the officials sent two companies of troops, 60 police with riot guns, and 25 deputy sheriffs to the scene. A substantial force maintained order in the district throughout the night, arresting all armed persons. Twenty-five negroes were arrested.

BAPTIST BIBLE UNION SPEAKERS RENEW CHARGES OF MODERNISM AGAINST M'MASTER PROFESSOR

Large Meeting in G.W.V.A. Hall Hears Case Against L. H. Marshall, Stated By Five Fundamentalist Preachers.

ADDRESS FROM REV. T. T. SHIELDS.

Strong attacks on the administration of the Department of Theology of McMaster University, and charges of Modernism among the Faculty, with special criticism of the appointment and retention of Professor Laurence Henry Marshall in the chair of Homiletics and Practical Theology were delivered last night before a large audience in the Great War Veterans' Hall, by a quintette of speakers, comprising a delegation from the Baptist Bible Union of Ontario and Quebec. The speakers were Rev. Dr. T. T. Sheilds, minister of Jarvis street Baptist church, Toronto, President of the Baptist Bible Union of North America, and for many years the storm centre of doctrinal controversy in the Baptist denominantion, Rev. Clifford J. Loney, minister of Stanley Avenue Baptist church, Hamilton, and President of the Ontario and Quebec branch of the Baptist Bible Union, Pastor James McGinlay, of Alton Baptist church, Pastor W. Gordon Brown, of Orangeville Baptist church. Rev. G. W. Allen, of Grace Baptist church, Toronto, occupied the chair and delivered a brief introductory address.

Rev. G. W. Allen.

Mr. Allen said there were found among Christians and churches of to-day, three types of churches and individuals. There were some who took a decided stand on the side of those who had become known as Fundamentalists; there were those on the other side who were opposed to the Fundamentalists; and there were people, and in some cases, churches, that had determined, and had passed resolutions to the effect that they should remain strictly neutral; they would not take sides. Speaking of the third type, he said he could find no warrant in the Bible for the neutral position. There was no provision for this position in God's plan. None of the great men of the Bible adopted a neutral course. Moses preferred to cast in his lot with the children of Israel rather than be known as the son of Pharaoh's daughter, the three young Hebrews who were cast into the fiery furnace and John the Baptist who at the cost of his life rebuked Herod for taking possession of his brother's wife were all men who steered no middle course.

Rev. C. J. Loney.

Modernism, said Mr. Loney, was the scepticism and philosophy of Voltaire, Tom Paine and their school dressed up in new clothes and bearing a new name. Modernism was the enemy of the Bible, of the church, of civilization and christianity itself.

The real issue of the hour among the Baptists was whether the denomination was to commit itself to a policy of easy tolerance of modernism. He carried his hearers back to the 1910 convention, held in Bloor street. At the Educational session, there had been a tense atmosphere all through the long hours of the day to the evening and the early hours of the morning. Elmore Harris, that man of God whose memory was cherished by all lovers of truth, led those who stood in the old paths. All kinds of insinuations and nasty remarks were hurled at him for his attitude. Dr. Harris was unable to place the facts before the people because the columns of the Canadian Baptist were closed to him.

Mr. Loney declared that things said in the class room by Professor I. G. Matthews (whose retention was challenged in 1910) had ever since interfered with his prayer life. He loved Matthews, but hated his teachings.

After a long debate in 1910, a resolution which Dr. Shields seconded, was passed committing the University to the old paths. For many years afterwards, they relied on the Board of Governors to clear the institution of false teaching, but in spite of that, Matthews was retained for nine years. So much for 1910.

Ottawa Convention.

In 1919 at the Ottawa convention, the spirit of controversy was again in evidence. This time the battle was waged over an editorial on "The Inspiration and Authority of the Scriptures" which appeared in the Canadian Baptist. This editorial was supported by the denominational leaders. Those who were ot this convention would never forget the affirmation that was made of the Baptists' responsibility to Christ, and the declaration of the resolve to follow the old paths. But the man who wrote the editorial never came forward to reveal his identity and shoulder the responsibility. The editor had since gone to his grave carrying with him the shame of the censure, but the writer was still alive and refused to take the responsibility for what happened.

In 1921 in the convention held at t. Thomas, there were nominated by the governors, to be on the Board of Governors, a man who was a frequent attender at spiritist seances. "I asked," said Mr. Loney, "if the man favored spiritism. Silence fell and that man went down to defeat."

In 1922 there again was an election and a man who upheld the Liberal position was supported by the leaders who favored his appointment to the Board of Governors.

Faunce Degree.

There was controversy again in 1924. This time the question concerned the conferring of a degree on a well known Liberal theologian, Dr. W. H. P. Faunce. Here again the debate was protracted to a late hour until Dr. Shields moved, and Chancellor Whidden seconded, a resolution declaring the convention's allegiance to the whole Bible as the Word of God.

Last year at Hamilton, there was a large delegation and the controversy centred around the coming of Professor Marshall to McMaster. What were the facts? Mr. Marshall was konwn as a Liberal. He came from a church that held the Liberal position and that always called Liberal theologians as its pastors. He was educated in a college that was known as a Liberal college and the men who recommended him were Liberals—Glover for example.

Ince coming to Canada, Professor Marshall had preached a bloodless gospel; he decried doctrinal teaching; he decried the historicity of Jonah. A man like that was not the man to train students for the Baptist ministry in Ontario and Quebec.

W. G. Brown.

After paying a tribute to Professor Marshall's admirable qualities as a man and a teacher, endowed with many fine gifts, Mr. Brown quoted four points wherein he declared Prof Marshall held views not in harmony with the views of the Baptists of Ontario and Quebec. Giving the substance of a conversation in which he and a fellow student engaged the Professor, Mr. Brown stated that the Professor denied the absolute authority of the Scriptures, and on being asked whether, in the event of a contradiction between the Bible and science, he would accept the Biblical account, the Professor answered in the negative.

Mr. Brown further declared that as a clue to the explanation of the miracle whereby Christ healed the man possessed of devils, Professor Marshall threw out to his class a suggestion which had the effect of labelling Christ as a trickster who cured people by fooling them into believing there was nothing wrong with them.

With regard to the resurrection Mr. Brown declared Professor Marshall did not believe in the bodily resurrection from the grave.

The doctrine of the death of Christ on the Cross as a substitionary atonement for sin was described by the Professor as being both crude and bold.

Mr. Brown was of the opinion that Professor Marshall could not believe a doctrine which he considered crude and bold. Professor Marshall also deprecated laying much emphasis on doctrine.

Mr. Brown concluded by citing the case of a young man who graduated in the English Theological Course during the present year, and who had remarked that he had no longer the confidence in the Scriptures which he formerly had. To him a Scripture text was no longer sufficient to end an argument. He had added that most of the men in his year took a

St. John's Church presented a beautiful appearance last night on the occasion of the annual Harvest Festival service. The interior of the church was tastefully decorated with flowers, vegetables, fruit and other products of the harvest, the entire arrangement being symbolical of the goodness of God to his people.

The Rev. Dr. T. S. Boyle of Cobourg, was the special preacher for the service. The Rev. G. J. Bousfield of St. Luke's church, intoned the service, and the Rev. J. L. Hughes of St. George's church, read the second lesson. The Rev. Dr. R. C. Blagrave, Vicar of St. John's Church, read the prayers.

The choir rendered two special anthems for the occasion: "Ye shall dwell in the land," by Stayner, and the seven-fold Amen, which was composed by F. G. Mann, organist of the church.

Taking as his text the words of the sixteenth chapter of Luke, and the second verse, "Give an account of thy Stewardship." Dr. Boyle declared that on looking on life from the true religious standpoint it could be summed up by the measure of a man's responsibility toward it. Christ did not come on this earth to erect a church. He simply erected the church as a means to an end, his chief purpose on earth being to teach humanity to prepare for the life to come. This life, he stated, was but the prelude for the life hereafter.

Defining the parable of the unjust steward as a picture of the responsibility that man owes to God, the speaker said that the moral which the Lord wished to convey was to use the gifts of this life in such a manner that by their good use men might be worthy of a place in the life that is to come. Many men were to be found whose whole desire was to gather around them worldly goods. In obtaining these riches they were prepared to sacrifice principles and all else to accomplish their desires. "Do we show the same whole hearted energy in the accomplishing of our eternal ends as do these men?" he asked. Everything else in life fades into insignificance when compared with the winning of eternal life, he declared.

God has given unto each person certain things out of his storehouse. Each one has an eternal soul; they are his agents, hence he has given each a body that constitutes the dwelling place of the soul. Each had been given possession of certain gifts, intellectual, business or powers of leadership. All these were simply talents held in trusteeship for Almighty God. They all might be abused or used, but some day the possessors would be called upon to give an account of their stewardship.

The meaning of the service, he said was to offer up to God a mead of praise for the bounty of another crop and all that it implied. Praises were but an expression of our gratitude.

In concluding the speaker said that God wants man to live on this earth in such a manner that he might be prepared for the higher happier life, where he shall see him face to face, and as he is.

A feature of next Sunday's service will be the rendering of Dr. Garrett's Cantata by the choir at both services.

WORLD COURT ASSEMBLY ADOPTS AMERICAN RESERVATIONS REPORT WITH BUT A SINGLE MODIFICATION

TENDERS RESIGNATION.

Most Rev. Geo. Thorneloe, of the archdiocese of Algoma and Metropolitan of the ecclesiastical province of Ontario, who has tendered his resignation, owing to age and ill-health.

Right To Withdraw Approval of U. S. Reservations Recommended.

FOURTH MODIFIED.

Asks That Provisions Withdrawing Consent To Adherence Be Dropped.

GENEVA, Sept. 25.—With a single modification, the conference of signatories of the statute of the Permanent Court of International Justice adopted the American reservations which were presented by its committee.

These conclusions were incorporedated in "the final act of the conference," which was submitted for signatures.

The single modification concerned the fourth American reservation. The first part of the reservation provided for the withdrawal by the United States of adherence. The committee to assure equality of treatment to all members made the provision that the signatory States acting together and by not less than two-thirds majority should have a corresponding right to withdraw consent to the American reservations.

Modified by New Zealanders

On the proposal of Sir Francis Bell of New Zealand this provision was modified so as to extend only to the second paragraph of Reservation 4—by which statute the Court could not be amended without the consent of the United States and Reservation 5, dealing with advisory opinions. The modification was made after a long debate in which it was agreed that any difficulties which might arise would be confined to the provisions covered by these reservations.

As it stand adopted, a decision by a two-thirds vote against the last points of the American reservations would not in any manner affect America's membership in the Court but only her prerogatives. The United States remains a full member, participating in the election of the Judges, paying her share of Court expenses and possessing the right to withdraw from the Court.

This modification followed a long series of compromises made between national dignity and resentment at the American demands on the one hand and the general desire to extend the influence and jurisdiction of the Permanent Court on the other. The effort made to meet the American demands was stressed by the President yesterday in dissolving the conference.

The American reservations, he said, quoting Sir George Foster of Canada, comprised a legislative act by a State outside the League and Court and it would be very easy to say "No." But the conference had considered the difficulties were there to be overcome and nothing had been left undone to give satisfaction to the United States and assure her participation in the Permanent Court.

As to the fate of the conference's work nobody could know what this would be. But the spirit and manner in which the work had been done had proved in obvious manner its sincere desire to find a solution. The only thing that remained to be done was for the Governments to hasten their replies to the United States Government.

This spirit mentioned by the President and which had been evident on the part of the great majority of the delegations persist in the debates, though Canada and Sweden stood out against giving the United States more than equality.

Sir Francis Bell at the opening of the reading of the committee's conclusions yesterday asked that all the provisions for withdrawing consent to American adherence be dropped. This was not a personal demand of a delegate, he said, but a motion by a Government signatory of the statute of the Court. His Government wanted to see the United States come into the Court and stay in it.

PRAIRIE STORM GOES EASTWARD

Harvesting Can't Be Resumed Until Grain Dries Out.

LOSSES HEAVY.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 25 (Canadian Press).—The storm which brought snow and rain to the Prairie Provinces during the past three days apparently passed eastward last night, leaving in its wake unestimated damage to the unharvested grain crops of Manitoba and Saskatchewan. Throughout the three provinces harvesting will be almost completely suspended for a week or more while the grain dries in the stook after a thorough soaking. Clear, cold weather prevailed last night. Reports are agreed that the loss to the farmers of the Prairie Provinces will run into millions. Grades will be lowered on a large quantity of grain and part of the crop will be a total loss owing to continued wet weather.

TO AIR DISPUTE BEFORE HOUSE

Spokesmen From Each Side To Try For Final Settlement.

NO SIGN OF BREAK.

LONDON, Sept. 25 (Canadian Press).—All efforts having failed to break the deadlock in the protracted British coal tie-up, spokesmen of both sides will air the dispute in the House of Commons on Monday and Tuesday, when Parliament assembles for two days to reaffirm the emergency powers regulation.

Premier Baldwin will make a full statement to the House, explaining whether the government still is prepared to act as mediator in the controversy notwithstanding its recent failure to bring about a settlement.

A. J. Cook, secretary of the British Miners' Federation, declared last night that there were no signs of the end of the strike.

COAL DISPUTE IN HOUSE AGAIN

Commons Meet Next Week To Reaffirm Emergency Rules.

NO SIGN OF END.

LONDON, Sept. 25 (Canadian Press).—All efforts having failed to break the deadlock in the protracted British coal tie-up, the spokesmen of both sides will air the dispute in the House of Commons on Monday and Tuesday, when Parliament reassembles for two days to reaffirm the emergency powers regulation.

Premier Baldwin will make a full statement to the House, explaining whether the Government still is prepared to act as mediator in the controversy, notwithstanding its recent failure to bring about a settlement.

A. J. Cook, secretary of the British Miners' Federation, declared last night that there were no signs of the end of the strike.

Singers Upset Into Water As Boat Strikes Big Moose

PORT ARTHUR, Sept. 25.—(Canadian Press). — Merrily singing portions of a Danish boat song as they stroked a small rowboat along the stretches of Portage Creek, three residents of the Danish settlement at Pass Lake were rudely awakened from their reverie when they collided with a large bull moose and were thrown into the water. The time was late evening, and it was da enough to prevent the men seeing the animal, which, as much alarmed as they at the strange collision, scampered out of the water and into the woods. The boatmen were good swimmers, and they, too, reached shore, afterward recovering their boat and continuing their journey.

A HAPPY CHILDHOOD A MATTER OF HEALTH

Let Baby's Own Tablets Keep Your Children Well.

Little children very quickly get out of sorts. By prompt treatment they can usually just as quickly be set right again. Most of their troubles arise in the first place from the stomach or bowels; that is why a good cleaning-out is the first thing prescribed by the doctor. Formerly castor oil was the means used to bring this about; now-a-days Baby's Own Tablets do the same work, but without trouble to the parent or discomfort to the little one. Children take Baby's Own Tablets happily because there is no nasty taste and because no griping after-pains follow their use.

As a specific for childhood indigestion, vomiting, constipation, colic, colds, teething pains, etc., there is nothing to equal Baby's Own Tablets. They never do harm and always do good. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

WELCOME NEWS

WELCOME, Sept. 25.—The Women's Missionary Society of Morish held a very successful apple pie and ice cream social on Tuesday night at Morish church.

The program was an illustrated lecture entitled "A Trip Around the World," by Mr. Noble, an old resident, interspersed by appropriate musical selections on the gramaphone.

The pictures showed the most interesting scenes visited by Mr. Noble on a recent trip which commenced at Edmonton, through the Rockies, across the Pacific to Honolulu and Australia, through the Suez Canal, where he visited Egypt and various countries in Europe, then back to Canada. The views were very clear and much enjoyed by the large audience present.

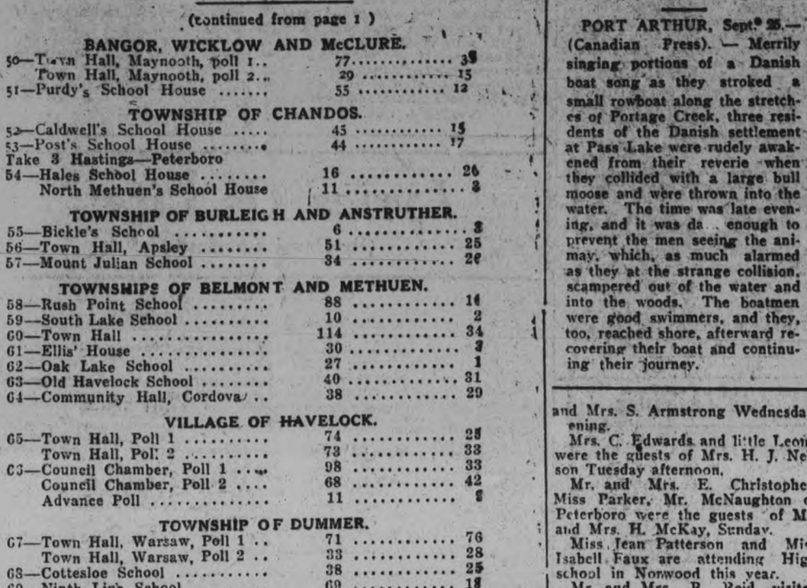
NASH

Leads the World in Motor Car Value.



Nash entirely encases the front brake shoes which are of die cast aluminum. And thus keeps out all water and dirt from the mechanism. Note extremely large brake drum shown at left.

The Simplest and Most Efficient 4 Wheel Brakes

Standard Equipment—No Extra Cost

Another vital Nash mechanical superiority is the special Nash 4-wheel brake system—the safest, simplest and most efficient type known to the industry.

Fully equalized to right and left, front and rear, these brakes banish entirely the dangerous swerving characteristic of partially equalized brakes.

They are of unique simplicity in design, having fewer points requiring lubrication than any other mechanical brake system.

Their instant, powerful, but velvety ease-ful pressure is scientifically distributed, 60% to the rear and 40% to the front.

The sixteen new Nash models now on display. Come in at once and personally inspect their many new attractions.

New Nash Features

- 7-bearing crankshaft motor—world's smoothest type—powers all new Nash models.
- New-type crankcase "breather" which prevents crankcase dilution.
- New double beam headlights with steering wheel control.
- Rich new body finish colors.
- All enclosed bodies are of the expensive wood frame body construction employed by finest American and European motor cars.
- And a long list of added new improvements.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

REVIEW OF THE QUARTER

(By Wm. E. Gilroy, D. D., Editor of The Congregationalist.)

"Let us run with patience the race that is set before us, looking unto Jesus, the author and finisher of our faith" gives the proper setting for the review of the Quarter's Lessons. These lessons have covered the period from Israel's life in Egypt, the descent into bondage, and the childhood of Moses to the leadership of the people out of Egypt and the religious organization of the nation in its march to Canaan.

The Quarter's Lessons deal chiefly with Moses, but it would be a mistake to regard Moses as the only leader of Israel. Moses did not so think of himself. He accepted leadership not as a lone figure but with the yearning for help and with a deeper sense of responsibility than of power and privilege.

It may be remembered also that at a very crucial point Jethro, Moses' father-in-law, gave him very good advice, which Moses showed good sense in following. Aaron also appears as a good right-hand man. Where is the leader who stands alone? Is it not true that the more he feels his own self-sufficiency the less he is a leader? It is a quality of the leader that he recruits others in the great task that he has in mind.

Pictures Striking.

The pictures that our lessons have given of the establishing of a religious and social constitution for Israel in the new life of the people is very striking. Two of our lessons have dealt with the Ten Commandments, and following these we have had a description of the institution of the Tabernacle—a symbol of the unified life of the people and of the place of worship and consecration in that life.

The picture of the bringing of gifts for the Tabernacle, the devotion of the people, has been inspiring.

And yet these great inspirations have their warning also, for we pass from these experiences of leadership and triumph to less worthy episodes in the life of Israel. The place of clear vision was not maintained.

The united consecration of the people to ways of faith and righteousness was lost, and we pass from these high scenes to the picture of Israel wandering in the wilderness, journeying it is true toward Canaan, but through a way beset with difficulties and full of lapses and sufferings, because of their departure from these high and inspiring experiences in the first era of their march from Egypt.

Would that every people could learn the lesson of these things and that even in modern America we might more truly appreciate the sacred shrines and experiences in our national life and live more truly in harmony with the inspirations of the past! It is in following out the path of God's greatest leadership in the past that we find the highway of right and progress for the future.

Not Records.

These lessons in the life of ancient Israel are of little value to us if we read them merely as records of a far distant past. It is only as we interpret them in the life of to-day and find their message for our own time and for our own lives that their study is worth while.

The power of the Bible, moreover, is that it is a living book. Wonderfully interesting as is its dealing with men and events, there is even deeper interest and pre-eminence in its portrayal of the whole movement of life, the march of progress, the struggle between good and evil, its revelation of values and principles, the beautiful symbolism with which it has enriched the whole sphere of faith and action.

It is only as we make it a living book that it brings to us its living message. Its great teaching, of course, culminates in Jesus and the New Testament, but read aright, every page is profoundly significant.

These lessons, which we have been studying at present, touch the very springs and roots of individual and national life.

* * *

Wherefore seeing we also passed about with so great a cloud of witnesses, let us lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race that is set before us.

Looking unto Jesus the author and finisher of our faith; who, for the joy that was set before him, endured the cross, despising the shame, and is set down at the right hand of the throne of God.

WELSH SPEAKER HERE FOR SERVICES

Rev. D. J. Davies Is Well Known as an Evangelist.

Bethany Tabernacle is bringing to Peterborough the Rev. D. J. Davies, the well known Welsh evangelist, from the United States, for a series of special evangelistic services.

Rev. Mr. Davies since going to the States, has held important pastorates in Schenectady, N. Y., St. Louis, Mo. and Toledo, Ohio, besides his evangelistic labors. He has returned to his native land for three extended visits in evangelistic services. During the world war he spent eighteen months preaching to the boys in the trenches and rest camps.

Rev. H. M. Shunnan, President of the Christian and Missionary Alliance said of Mr. Davies: "He is a man of irreproachable character, a man of prayer and has a genuine love for the salvation of souls."

Mr. Davies as a Christian minister is faithful to the Word of God, having been president of the Interdenominational Bible Fundamentals Association of Toledo, Ohio, while pastor of the large Alliance Tabernacle in that city.

Bethany Tabernacle and Peterboro are fortunate in the privilege of having this servant of God, and it is hoped by the pastor and people of Bethany that all the Christian people in the city will come to hear Mr. Davies and help by prayer and labor to bring a God-sent revival to the city.

THE LESSON OF THE FIGHT.

Those who are seeking for a moral in the defeat of Jack Dempsey should have little difficulty in finding what they are looking for.

The lesson that is taught by the downfall of champion is that the man who expects to lead his field in anything must stay on the job.

Dempsey, without a real fight in years and without one of any kind since 1923, found himself an easy mark for the challenger.

No champion, either in fighting or in any other line of athletic endeavour, can remain on the sidelines for years and expect to triumph over an opponent who has been actively engaged.

And, incidently, no man who expects to successfully defend his title can afford to neglect his physical condition or depart from the rules of strict training.

Fitness counts everywhere, but no place as much perhaps as in the squared circle.

Dempsey risked his championship by years of idleness and easy living—and he paid the penalty.

THE STOP-STREET PLAN.

Peterboro's stop-street plan has been in operation long enough to permit its merits to be plainly seen, and to justify the opinion that were it fully complied with driving conditions on the city's busiest streets would be appreciably better.

The regulation is being observed faithfully by the careful drivers, who have always obeyed every traffic law.

Unfortunately, there are all too many drivers who seem to think that they are a law unto themselves.

Many of them are not carrying out the stop rule to the letter, and some indeed are paying little or no attention to it.

The regulation has been in force long enough to give every local motorist an opportunity to get acquainted with it.

For those who at this late date refse to comply with the bylaw, the only effective treatment would seem to be an appearance in Police Court.

It shouldn't take the authorities long to round Magistrate Langley a busy up enough offenders to give morning, and the educational value of such a session would be considerable.

CANADIAN COOKS.

The member of the London, Ont., Board of Education who flatly declared that Canadians are the worst cooks in the world, is doubtless not going to be a candidate for re-election.

Perhaps, however, in making his charge he was sustained by a realization of the fact that a reproach of this nature is not likely to be regarded as seriously as it would have been by Canadian women a few years ago.

If he had said, for instance, that Canadian women are the worst dressed women in the world, he'd have been lucky to escape with his life.

Because it is suspected that many women in this country take a much greater pride in what they wear than in what they cook.

But, providence be praised, there still remains, Mr. London Trustee notwithstanding, plenty of good cooks in Canada, and if he doesn't believe it, the Examiner invites him to attend a supper at any Peterboro church where he'll see cakes that are fit for the god and pies that a Parisian baker would give his right eye to be able to imitate.

CANADA'S MINERAL WEALTH.

The hospitality extended by the people of the Northern Ontario towns to the visiting Ontario manufacturers during the recent tour, clearly indicated a whole-hearted response to the message of good-will, which was the inspiration of the tour.

There is no doubt in the minds of those who were privileged to take part in this tour, that the opportunities afforded by the mineral, forest and agricultural wealth of Northern Ontario are a challenge to the young men of Canada. The mines are being developed with the advantage of all that has gone before in engineering science.

The forest wealth is being converted into finished products on the spot and those in agriculture have a constantly growing market in their midst.

What has been accomplished may be regarded as a demonstration of the future possibilities, for comparatively little of this great area has been made accessible. . .

The development in the North is also a challenge to Canadian manufacturers to see to it that the North Country is supplied with the best equipment adapted to its needs.

The citizens of Peterboro and the surrounding district will have an opportunity, during the Produced-in-Canada Exhibition, to see at home something of vast resources of mineral wealth contained in the northern portion of the Province of Ontario, by seeing the Ontario Government mines exhibit, which will be one of the special attractions at the Produced-in-Canada Exhibition.

One of the special features of this exhibit will be the statue of a woman in solid silver, worth $3,500.

They will also have the privilege to view at first hand the products of our manufactures. Many local and outside industries have applied for space in the Produced-in-Canada Exhibition, some coming from as far as Montreal.

The Peterboro Kiwanis Club deserve the commendation of every true Canadian citizen for the tremendous effort they are putting forth in boosting the Produced-in-Canada movement, by placing before the people of Peterboro a large exhibit of the products of its mines, forests, factories and farms.

THE GENESIS OF HURRICANES.

Fantastic explanations of the origin of the hurricane which devastated southeastern Florida are getting into print. As a matter of fact, such visitations are seasonal in several quarters of the globe. What is called a hurricane in the West Indies is a typhoon in the Chinese seas. It has still other designations in other parts of the world.

The more general term is cyclone, which means a violent rotatory tempest, or a whirling and revolving windstorm characteristic of the tropical and subtropical regions. The velocity of the hurricane may be as high as 200 to 300 miles an hour. High waves accompany the storm when its course is at sea.

These phenomena occur in the summer and fall. The Atlantic coast suffers from them much less frequently than do the West Indies and other quarters of the globe. They can be foreseen in a general way. Indeed, the storm that wrecked Miami was traced at sea for several days before it struck the Florida coast. Apparently there is room for an inquiry as to whether sufficiently urgent warnings were sent out in advance of the storm to cities lying in its path.

The natural law which regulates the velocity of the hurricane is simple—the velocity is proportioned to the difference in the atmospheric pressure between the place from which the hurricane comes and the place toward which it blows. The primary factor in causing West Indian storms is believed by meteorologists to be an area of high atmospheric pressure that exists permanently over the middle Atlantic. The hurricanes sweep westward, then northward, and finally back toward the northeast. The warming of the land by summer heat is the second factor in the upheaval. The atmosphere over the land becomes an area for shifting high and low pressures.

The dreaded typhoon is a contracted hurricane with its main features more strongly marked. But the hurricane can be terrible and destructive enough. Since forecasters are able to give warnings of the likelihood of sch storms the toll of life, at least, can be reduced by timely precautions in threatened communities.—Chicago News.

A NATIONAL SPIRIT.

Every real Canadian will echo Rev. W. A. Walden's plea for national unity and understanding. The pastor of the West End United Church has just returned from a tour of Western Canada and he comes back more impressed than ever with the need of co-operation between the two great sections of the country.

Mr. Walden finds, as others have found, a feeling among certain Westerners that Ontario is not sufficiently interested in the prairies. As a result of this, he says, "there is a great deal of secession talk in the West." It would not do to take the latter seriously. There is also secession talk in the Maritime Provinces, but people conversant with the situation in that section of Canada have no idea that it will ever amount to anything more than talk. The secession cry is an old one. It is the most natural thing in the world to raise when things are not going well. It is raised by men and women in their domestic relations; it is common in business partnerships. "Do this or I'll leave you" is an old-time threat. Only very rarely is it carried out.

This is not to say, however, that both the West and the Maritimes, in occasionally referring to a possibility of secession from the rest of Canada, have not had legitimate grievances. There have been plenty. And one of them, to which Mr. Walden refers, is that the people of Ontario have not been sufficiently interested in the prairie section. This is quite true, but ground for this criticism is weakening. The people of Ontario are more interested in Western Canada today than ever before. They have begun to really appreciate what the success and prosperity of Western Canada mean to Ontario's success and prosperity.

East and West must get more and more together, and "East," in this case, means the Maritime Provinces, too. The West has its problems and so have the people down by the sea. So, also, have Ontario and Quebec. It does seem, though, that there is a common ground upon which all may meet. Our interests are, in many ways, diversified and clashing. That is just as true in the United States, however, and yet there is no talk of any part of the Republic seceding from he rest of the country. This is the case because the Government of the United States, over a long period of years, has striven assiduously for the cultivation of a strong national spirit. And the United States has it, despite differences of climate, interest and race. It is this kind of a spirit that we mus develop in Canada, a strong, virile national spirit of "Canada First, Last, and All the Time."

There are those in Eastern Canada who have always looked askance at the Progressive political movement in the West. The Border Cities Star is not among these critics. It believes that the Progressive movement has been an excellent thing for the Dominion. It crystalized Western sentiment and brought to the people of the East a convincing demonstration of the West's importance in the national scheme of things. This demonstration could have been made in no other way. The Progressives are now merging back to "regular" partyism, but the impression they have created is deep-rooted and of infinite value to the country as a whole.

Canada's greatest days lie before her. We have only started along the path of progress. With sympathy, co-operation and mutual understanding our nation will go far.—Border Cities Star.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Funny how many people there were yesterday who had known all along that Dempsey was through.

The weather is cold in the Prairie Provinces, but at that the frost is not so severe as that which nipped Conservative hopes there last week.

The defeated champion has the consolation of knowing that no other fighter ever dug so much gold out of the prize ring.

Ontario French-Canadians are demanding Cabinet representation. Mr. King will have to enlarge his Ministry if all the applicants are to be accommodated.

At least Mr. Meighen must be given credit for contributing largely to the list of honourables. The title will soon be as common in Canada as colonel and judge are across the border.

Hazing is to be eliminated at Queen's University. First thing you know students will go to college merely to study.

Meet Mr. Mike Lukovitch. No, not a new boxing champion, but one of the Progressive members of the new Parliament.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

TORONTO, Sept. 25.—There was little change in general marketing conditions this week. Heavy export steers, choice finished, sold a little easier than last week, due in part to fears of trade restrictions in the British markets on account of a fresh outbreak of foot and mouth disease. Exporters here, however, shipped about the usual number of cattle from seaboard, totaling about 850 cattle. The bulk of these were taken off this market, the balance on billed through shipping. Prices ranged from $7 to $7.75, the bulk from $7 to $7.50. A few extra choice well finished heavy steers going a little higher. Many rough, heavy steers, not suitable for export, nor good abattoir stock, were difficult to handle, about 500 cattle, mostly of this class, being left over in the week-end market. Export buyers expect orders for about 900 cattle for next week.

Choice butcher stock was comparatively scarce, offerings consisting mostly of unfinished medium and common steers. Handyweight butcher steers were going from $6.50 to $7.25 Nothing of special quality offering. Choicest butcher steers, if available, are quoted steady to firm at $7.25 to $7.50. Common and medium plain butcher, clearing from $4.50 to $5.50.

Fat butcher cows holding firm and in good demand at from $5 to $5.50 for the best.

Bulls, heavy export or good butcher, steady from $4.50 to $5.25.

Calves steady, $12 to $13 tops.

Lamb market was very dull, and buyers bidding $11 to $11.75, tops, about $1 to $1.75 lower than the week's opening prices.

Hogs closed steady, $12 f.o.b., but buyers bidding $11.75, Saturday's loadings.

Stockers and feeders—There has been very considerable movement of stockers and feeders this week. Prices have been a shade stronger but quality has also been better. Choice 1,000 lb. feeding steers, $6.25 to $6.50, delivered country points; choice 800 to 850 lbs., $6.25 to $6.40; 600 to 700 lbs. steers, $6.50 to $6; choice yearling heifers, 550 to 600 lbs., $5 to $5.25; heifers, 650 to 750 lbs., $5.25 to $6. These prices are for Western cattle delivered country points Ontario. It is expected that there will be a few Ontario stockers on the market in the near future.

Springers and milkers—Trade fairly active and prices well maintained. Choice springers selling at $85 to $100; good $60 to $75; common $40 to $55; choice milkers, $75 to $85; good, $50 to $70. Faulty springers and milkers are hard to sell except over the scales.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Sept. 25 (Canadian Press).—The export business in grain in Montreal continued disappointing yesterday. There was some demand from foreign buyers for Manitoba Spring wheat overnight and on the decline in prices recorded at Winnipeg sales of a few loads of No. 3. Northern on passage were made, but the trade in oats and barley was dull.

The strength that has characterized the local market for Canadian Western oats this week was again prominent yesterday and prices secured another advance of 2 to 3 cents per bushel.

Prices for all grades of Spring and Winter wheat flour were well maintained under a moderate demand.

A fair trade was done in all lines of millfeed and values were steady. The tone of the market for standard grades of rolled oats was firm at the recent advance in prices noted. The demand was fair.

Considerable business was transacted in fresh and storage eggs and prices were unchanged. The receipts were 1,435 cases.

There was no further change in the condition of the market for potatoes, but the undertone was easy at the late decline on account of the warmer weather prevailing and the steady increase in the receipts. The demand yesterday was only fair and

WISE AND OTHERWISE

Modern young people might think more of their future life if you could play jazz on a harp.

HOW DO YOU SAY IT?

(By C. N. Lurie.)

Common Errors in English and How To Avoid Them.

"WHICH" "WHAT" "THAT"

(By The McClure Syndicate, Inc.)

"Will you please tell me," writes a correspondent, "when to use 'which' and 'what,' and 'that' and 'which'?"

The following explanation is taken from Longman's "English Grammar":

"Formerly 'what' was used just as we now use 'which.' Thus, Shakespeare wrote, 'That what we have we prize not to the worth.' But in modern English, though 'what' is frequently a relative pronoun, its antecedent is never expressed; thus, 'Give me what I have earned.' Here the antecedent of 'what' is some such noun as 'pay,' understood; but if we supply this noun we must then use 'which' or 'that' instead of 'what,' as, 'Give me the pay which I have earned.'

The difference between "that" and "which" may be shown best, probably, by giving an example. "The members who were present, voted for Jones." This means that the members were present and voted for Jones. But when we say "The members that were present voted for Jones" we mean that some of them were present, etc.

DR FRANK CRANE'S DAILY EDITORIAL.

THE RESULTS OF FASCISM

By Dr. Frank Crane.

For all you may say against Mussolini and his methods, he has wrought a great change in Italy.

He has restored to the country a faith in its own power which has not existed since the Roman Empire fell.

One of the things that the traveler notices first of all is the punctuality of the Italian train service, when in pre-war days the long-distance express was frequently as much as one hour late. In 1921 and 1922 the government concessions had surrendered the control of the Italian railroads to the railway men. The result was a confusion that was comic. Engineers would leave their trains at way stations because they had completed their eight-hour day. Sometimes the train crew would refuse to allow the train to start at all because a policeman was aboard.

There were notorious thefts of baggage on the Italian railroads. Some twenty million dollars were paid out for stolen baggage while the roads were under the control of the Bolsheviki, but since the war not over eight hundred thousand dollars has been paid.

Mussolini refused to listen to the complaints of the men until the service was running with absolute regularity. And the men are more satisfied now with their lot than when they were controlled by the local soviets.

One hundred and fifty million dollars of public works are under construction at the present time, supported by the State.

Irrigation and reclamation are being vigorously pushed forward.

"It has been far cheaper and just as effective," says Mussolini, "as a foreign war in the conquest of a new province."

Malaria has been subdued and school children organized into mosquito squads to cover with oil the waters where the mosquitoes breed.

Many more public improvements have been inaugurated, including harbor development, and all this while the government was fighting opposition at home and uncomprehending onlookers from abroad.

Altogether a nation of forty million people has been pulled together, gives self-respect, made solvent, and generally improved.

Lyrics Of Life

(By Douglas Malloch.)

ONE LITTLE LAMP

One little lamp that points to camp
Means more to men who wander
Than all the lights of starry nights
That glitter 'way up yonder.
One little word, in sorrow heard,
When someone's heart is broken,
From someone dear does more to cheer
Than all the rest have spoken.

One little place is ours to grace,
One little spot to gladden,
And always we the ones will be
To bless it or to sadden.
One little cot is glad or not,
As rain or sun we scatter;
To worlds afar how small we are,
In this how much we matter!

One little task our God will ask,
Not ask some mighty duty—
Some house to find and keep it kind,
Some home to fill with beauty.
One little wall, and yet if all
Would hold the loved ones tighter,
Then all the earth would smile with mirth,
And heaven itself be brighter!

How high will Your Boy's Education Let Him Climb?

Public School Graduates earn $45,000.00
High School Graduates earn $78,000.00
University Graduates earn $150,000.00

—Dean Everett W. Lord, Boston University, College of Business Administration.

FATHERS and mothers of Canada, think what it means to insure your boys and girls a good education, an asset they can never lose.

If you give your boy a Public School education only, you are probably condemning him to unskilled manual labor all his life. He may work up but the law of averages is against him. From the age of fourteen to sixty, the total earnings of the average Public School graduate amount to just $45,000.00.

If you give your boy a High School education, he will earn $78,000.00, according to the law of averages as worked out by Dean Everett W. Lord.

If, however, you send your boy to the University, he will earn $150,000.00, by the age of sixty, if he maintains the mere average.

Therefore, consider now. Plan for your children's future while the years are still before you. Give them a chance.

The Mutual Life of Canada will insure the education of your children. We have a special policy for that purpose. Under its terms, you endow your children with an education, whether you live to see it or not, by simply paying an annual insurance premium.

Ask our nearest Agent or write to this Office for a copy of "Child's Endowment, Plan 'B'."

Summer Comfort in Winter in the Nursery

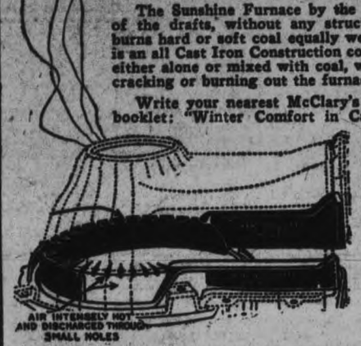
WINTER comfort is necessary to the health of growing children. Over-clad kiddies in chilly, drafty homes are subject to colds, and other childish ills.

You get the comfort and healthfulness of the right kind of heat from McClary's Sunshine Furnace because the warm air is humidified in the furnace before it ascends to the rooms.

Correctly installed by McClary's accredited dealer in your district the Sunshine Furnace is guaranteed to deliver heat uniformly to every room in your home, under all conditions at all times.

The Sunshine Furnace by the simple operation of the drafts, without any structural alterations, burns hard or soft coal equally well and because it is an all Cast Iron Construction coke can be burned either alone or mixed with coal, without danger of cracking or burning out the furnace.

Write your nearest McClary's Branch for free booklet: "Winter Comfort in Canadian Homes," that will give you much interesting information about heating, fuel and the proper installation of furnaces so necessary in solving the problem of comfort in Winter.



The patented Air Blast Ring in McClary's Sunshine Furnace mixes preheated air with the gases and volatiles (soot) in soft coal causing instant combustion with an intensely hot flame the heat of which is immediately felt in the rooms above.

sales of odd cars of New Brunswick Cobblers were made at $1.30 per bag, and Quebec White stock at $1.20 per bag of 90 lbs., ex-track.

The butetr market was quiet and prices steady. The receipts were 3,680 packages.

The export trade in cheese was again inactive, but the local demand was fair. The receipts were 13,147 boxes.

The movement of beans was slow and the market was quiet with car lots of choice white hand-picked quoted at $2.25 per bushel, and broken lots at $2.35 to $2.45 per bushel.

STERLING EXCHANGE.

MONTREAL, Sept. 25 (Canadian Press). — Sterling exchange rates were quoted here yesterday as follows:

Sterling demand $4.84 1-8.
Sterling cables $4.84 5-8.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, Sept. 25 (Canadian Press).—Wheat prices underwent a material setback yesterday owing chiefly to improved weather northwest and also to a dearth of buying for Europe.

Closing quotations on wheat were heavy 1 1-4 to 1 5-8 net lower, with corn 3-8 to 5-8 down; oats a shade to 3-8 up, and provisions varying from unchanged figures to a rise of 12 cents.

Scantiness of immediate new export demand drew attention to talk current in some quarters that Canadian wheat is obtainable from European sellers at 5 to 6 cents below the market. Contrasting sharply with this gossip was the fact that wheat and flour clearances from the United States in August totalled 35,485,000 bushels against 1,832,000 bushels last year, and the July and August aggregate 55,136,000 bushels, is equal to more than half the quantity cleared for the entire 1925-1926 crop season.

Frost predictions stimulated some commission house buying of future deliveries of corn and oats, but mostly in small lots. On the other hand country offerings of corn to arrive were liberal. Provisions responded to an upturn in the value of hogs.

CHICAGO CATTLE.

CHICAGO, Sept. 25 (Canadian Press).—Cattle 3,000. Bulk yearlings $11.40; bulk steers and yearlings $8.50 to $9.50; bulls mostly steady; vealers steady to 25c lower; best kind $14.50 to $15.00.

Hogs, 11,000. Desirable hogs mostly 15 to 25c higher; top $13.80; bulk desirable 170 to 250 pound averages 13.25 to 13.75; bulk 280 to 325 pound butchers $12.65 to $13.35; heavy packing sows $10.50 to $11.00; bulk desirable slaughter pigs $12.00 to $12.50.

Sheep 21,000; fat lambs mostly steady with Thursday; bulk westerns $13.50 to $14.00; top natives $13.75; bulk $13.25 to $13.50.

BIG ARMY ORDER GOES TO CANADA PROTEST CAUSED

Montreal Firm To Make Razor Blades For British Army.

PRICES FIRST.

Expected Members of Parliament Will Raise Scandal Contract.

LONDON, Sept. 25 (United Press).—In connection with an announcement made here yesterday that safety razor blades for the British army, will in future be manufactured in Montreal by a well-known company, The Daily Express carries the headline: "America shaves the British army. Safety razor contract goes abroad."

The announcement states that the razors will be made at Slough, near London, but that the blades will be supplied from the Montreal factory. All the old-time razors are to be withdrawn from the British army, it is understood, and will be replaced with the safety type. As the army amounts to 142,000 men and there are 185,000 territorials, this is a large order.

"Prices Before Patriotism"

The Daily Express quotes an official as saying: "Prices come before patriotism." It is likely that members of parliament will raise a scandal regarding the contract.

The razor company says: "The order is a large one and is likely to extend over a number of years. We contracted to supply a large quantity of razors and blades and won the order in spite of severe competition." The contract price was not revealed.

CHINESE PROTEST FIGHT ON YANGTSE

Viscount Cecil Expresses Surprise at Statement To Assembly.

GENEVA, Sept. 24 (Canadian Press).—The Chinese delegation to the League of Nations made a protest to-day against the part taken by British gunboats on the Yangtse River in the recent trouble at Wanhsien. The protest caused something of a sensation.

Acting on instructions from the Peking Government, Chao Hain Chu gave the Chinese version of the affair in which several British naval officers and enlisted men were killed or wounded. Viscount Cecil, replying, said he had heard Chu's statement with astonishment and regretted the Chinese delegates' strange procedure.

$750,000 FOR BOUT.

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 24.—A. T. Jergins and J. R. McKinnie, Long Beach Oil operators, last night announced they had telgraphed Jack Dempsey, former heavyweight champion, and Gene Tunney, the new title holder, that they would hang up a $750,000 purse for a return fight between the pair to be held in an open air arena near Los Angeles before January 30, 1927. If the offer is accepted they said they would post $100,000 at once to insure the match.

PRIZES OFFERED FOR TICKET SALE

Winner of First Prize Will Also Be "Queen of Peterborough."

AN EQUAL CHANCE.

In connection with its Produced-in-Canada Exhibition, which is being held on October 11 to 16, the Peterborough Kiwanis Club has instituted a competition among girls for the sale of tickets. Very valuable prizes are being given and, in addition to the $100.00 which is first prize, the winner will be crowned "Queen of Peterborough" for the day. This is to be an impressive ceremonial, and in addition to the coronation the Queen will be feted all day long. She will have a splendid suite of rooms in the Empress Hotel through the courtesy of Mr. Chris Graham; servants, two automobiles with chauffeurs, new gowns to her heart's content; jewelry and a royal box at the opening of the Fair in the Armories. She will have her hair dressed by one of the best hairdressers in Peterborough; she will visit civic institutions; and, all in all, have a real royal time.

The young ladies who are entering the competition have all an equal chance of winning this signal honor which goes to the one who sells the most tickets. This is an opportunity for some energetic and lucky girl to realize her "Cinderella Dreams."

MAYOR COMMENDS SHOW OF PRODUCTS

Feels Sure Manufacturers of Eastern Ontario Will Support It.

The following letter has been received by J. J. Turner, Chairman of the Exhibition Committee of the Kiwanis Club:

Dear Mr. Turner:

It was with pleasure that I learned that the Kiwanis Club of Peterborough is arranging for a Produced in Canada Exhibition to be held in the Armouries on October 11th to 16th.

The project is an ambitious one, and I have no doubt that with the energy which will be put into it by your Club it will be most successful.

Our people cannot be too familiar with the goods produced in Canada. So much can be procured which is made at home, and of a kind and quality to meet the demands of all, and there is little need for sending outside of the Dominion to supply our wants, and the Exhbition you have planned will make the people of Peterboro and district more fully acquainted with the products of our industries.

I feel sure that the manufacturers of Eastern Ontario will join heartily in making the Exhibition an educational success.

Yours sincerely,
W. T. HOLLOWAY,
President Eastern Ontario Chamber of Commerce.

MOTOR BUSES MEET DEMAND OWNERS' ASSOCIATION TOLD

Alfred Reeves Says Bus and Truck Cannot Be Driven Out.

HAVE THEIR LIMITS.

Steam and Electric Lines Will Always Get Long-haul Trade.

TORONTO, Sept. 25.—The railway and the trolley services on the one hand, and the motor bus and truck lines on the other hand, should not regard themselves as being in a competitive business, but should consider themselves as allies in providing public utilities. That was one of the messages of Alfred Reeves, general manager of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce of the United States, who addressed a joint meeting of the Ontario Motor Truck Owners' Association at the King Edward Hotel, and indicated that each of the services in question had a legitimate field, and declared at the same time that there was a limit beyond which the motor bus and the truck could not go in cutting in upon the business of the steam lines and the electric services.

Mr. Reeves recognized that the managements of steam and electric lines had viewed with alarm the inroads of the bus and the truck, but he declared they could not be driven out of business, for the simple reason that the public demanded them. The whole world, he added, was riding on rubber tires; the sentiment in favor of the bus and the truck existed in a marked degree, and he felt that it must increase in the years go on.

"Canada may have wonderful railway systems," he added. "In fact, there may be none better anywhere in the world, but at the same time those railways need feeders. They need short-haul lines, but you can no longer build steam lines for that purpose and make them pay. The trucks have taken over that work. In the United States we have 455 short-haul lines, three-quarters of them being less than twenty-five miles in length; but many of them should never have been built. The truck is now doing the work, with the assistance of the bus. And those short-haul lines must come to the point of realizing that they must step out and let the new services come in, or they must be a part of the new."

Must Branch Out.

By that, Mr. Reeves meant that the railways and the trolley lines must establish their own truck and bus services, as feeders to the main routes, or they must let others do the work.

"Some trolley lines in the States have entered into the bus business," he continued, "and some railways have started trucking services, but they have undertaken the work simply in defence, and not with any enthusiasm. In other cases where the trolley lines failed to establish the auxiliary services, lines were put in operation by independent organizations, and the trolleys even went to the length of trying to legislate them off the streets and the highways. They failed, because they discovered that public opinion was behind the bus and the truck. The bus is taking business from the trolley and the railways. There can be no doubt of that; but the bus cannot begin to take all the business. The bus will take the traffic which does not care to be strap-hangers; but the trolley will continue to be the service for the great mass of the people. The citizen who rides on the 'bus is willing to pay a little more, and he should. For that reason, the two services should not consider themselves as being in competition, but should regard themselves as allies in providing a solution for the transportation problems of the age."

Mr. Reeves also asked the railways to bear in mind the fact that the companies which were turning out their thousands of trucks and 'buses each year, were, at the same time, providing revenue to the railways. For instance, General Motors last year paid the railways some $53,000,000 for freight haulage, and he believed the whole freight bill paid to the railways from the products and raw materials of such manufacturing companies would run over $120,000,000.00 yearly. That should be regarded as an offset to the losses through other services.

Have Limitations.

The railways, Mr. Reeves added, had come around better than the trolleys in accepting the situation; and he feared that the trolleys which had entered the auxiliary 'bus and truck services had done so for purposes of destruction. But he felt the electric lines must face the situation for there were some 70,000 'buses in the States, whereas the trolleys in their most palmy days, had not exceeded 100,000.

As to limitations, Mr. Reeves felt there must be regulations as to the size of 'buses and the weight of trucks, also as to speed, and they must be taught to have greater consideration for the road rights of other motorists. They were also limited as to distance. A survey of the State of Connecticut had shown that 85 per cent. of the freight handled by trucks was hauled less than 40 miles; while the natural limit for passenger traffic on the 'buses would be somewhere under a hundred miles. The railways, he was certain, would always get the long haul, either for freight or passenger.

In touching on the highway problem, in its relation to the 'bus and truck services, Mr. Reeves felt that the great mass of citizens should always contribute something towards the building and maintenance of the roads; for all people derive some benefits from improved highways even if they do not actually drive a car. But while each citizen should contribute something towards highway maintenance, the trucks and 'buses should pay an increased amount. Though that should not be carried to the point of confiscation.

As to highways in the States, there appeared to be no end to the building programme. Something over a billion dollars was being spent yearly, and there was no trouble whatever in getting the money for the roads.

"Our problem," he added, "is not to get the money, but to see that it is honestly spent on the basis of competitive tender."

Dr. P. E. Doolittle's film, "A Tour Across Canada," was put on for the benefit of the gathering; while Messrs. Morden Neilson and C. C. Kamm, presidents of the two associations, expressed the thanks of the members to Mr. Reeves.

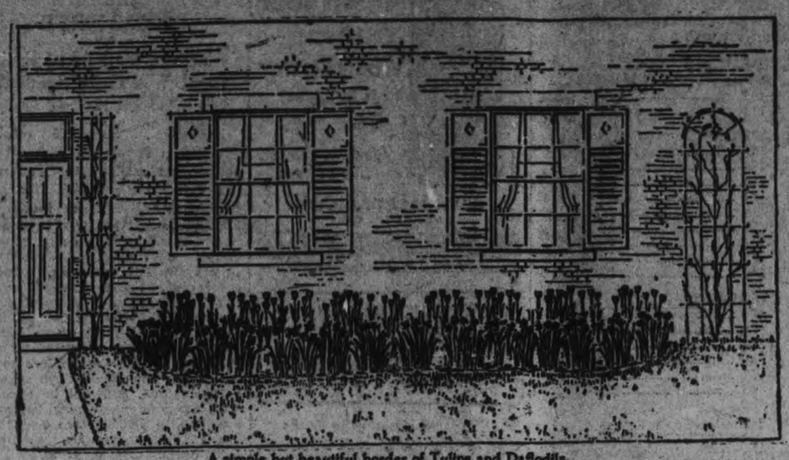
Bulbs Suitable for Small Gardens



A simple but beautiful border of Tulips and Daffodils.

By Henry J. Moore.

It is indeed a very small garden where space cannot be found to plant a few kinds of the bulbous plants of which there are many hardy and satisfactory ones. The purchase of bulbs should be looked upon as an investment as not only do the plants give of their beauty perennially but they increase in numbers as the years go by and thus their money value is increased.

Use of the Bulbs.

The bulbs which flower in spring of which the following can safely be recommended for the small garden, may be planted in beds or borders according to the desires of the owner. They are useful for formal garden schemes or for planting naturally and for massing in the perennial border. NARCISSI (Daffodils), TULIPS and HYACINTHS are generally used to fill beds and are planted five or six inches apart.

The small garden owner who has not much money at his command, should not purchase the early spring flowering Tulips as these deteriorate after the first flowering in Canada, but should depend on the Darwins which at least endure and sometimes increase their numbers every year. Thus, if they are planted in a bed they may be left after flowering and annual plants may be sown or be planted in the bed when the leaves and stems of the Darwins have decayed, which will be about the 1st of June.

To buy Hyacinths will also be folly where money is to be considered as these also deteriorate after flowering, especially is it an expensive procedure where a whole bed is to be filled. Daffodils, however, may safely be purchased because they are even more reliable than the Darwin Tulips and may be relied upon not only to maintain their numbers year by year but certain kinds are likely to increase largely their numbers. Like the Darwin Tulips the Daffodils may be planted in beds and annual flowering plants be grown over the dormant bulbs in summer, thus assuring both a spring and summer display of flowers in one bed.

It is perhaps for use in the perennial border however that the small garden owner will purchase bulbs. For this purpose he need not procure many of any kind. The practice in planting should be to mass the bulbs in numbers of perhaps a dozen of the larger kinds such as Daffodils, Tulips, Hyacinths and from this number to twenty of the smaller ones to each mass, such as Snowdrops—white, Crocus—various, Scilla—blue, Glory of the Snow—blue, Winter Aconite—yellow, Meadow Saffron—rosy purple, Dog's Tooth—violet, white purple, Rose, red, Leucojum, Spring and Summer Snowflakes—white flowers tipped with green or yellow. For beds or borders the distance between the Daffodils, Tulips and Hyacinths should be about five inches in their masses. For the rest of the bulbs the distance between should be considerably reduced, three or four inches apart will be proper.

The time to plant the forementioned subjects is during October. The large kinds such as the first mentioned should be planted in holes which are five or six inches deep and the other kinds three to four deep. With the exception of the Daffodils and Tulips which may be planted in masses throughout the border the rest should be massed along the front as they are of a very dwarf nature.

In addition to the spring flowering bulbous plants which have been mentioned, there are a few summer flowering ones which are grown in many gardens. The Gladiolus is perhaps the best known of these. It should be planted during the latter half of May and where ornamental effects or rather natural effects are desired it will appear to greater advantage when massed in numbers of twelve or so to the mass in the middle of the border. Lilies which are usually planted in the Fall are also often grown. Of these we have in order of hardiness, the Tiger Lily, Regal Lily, Madonna or Ascension Lily, and the Golden Banded one of Japan. These when massed in numbers of three to five look very fine in the perennial border and if planted in a porous sandy loam which is well drained will endure in our climate. To plant them in a heavy and unlightened clay may result in failure as where moisture is held in the soil for any length of time the bulbs will rot away. Lilies which are received too late in the autumn to plant may be potted and be carried over winter in a garden frame, protected by litter or in a cool cellar where stem growth will not take place. They may be planted out in spring.

Lilies should be planted about twelve inches apart, and to the depth of their vertical diameter, thus if a lily bulb is four inches through vertically, it should be set down in the soil to a depth of eight inches. That is the bottom of the bulb should be this deep. Lilies, and in fact all the bulbs should be covered by means of a layer of strawy litter during early winter, partly for protection, although practically all the subjects mentioned herein are hardy (if covered with snow), with the exception of the Gladiolus which must be lifted and be stored away over winter

Driver Slams On Brakes At Wigwag Signals Train Waits Three Minutes and Hand Car Passes Along

Heeding the warning to stop, look and listen caused one Peterborough motorist, who is a true disciple of the Safety First crusades that have taken place in the city, to bite his tongue in order that he might hide his true feelings recently.

Driving along Reid Street he noticed that the wig-wag warning installed at the Canadian National Railways crossing was sending out the signal that something was approaching on the tracks.

With a grinding of brakes, he brought his car to a stop. After waiting patiently for some three minutes or so, the motorist stepped out and looked up and down the tracks. He could see nothing approaching however, but still was unwilling to take the chance of crossing while the signal was against him.

He had just reached his car when on looking back, he discovered that the cause of his delay, instead of being a train, was a hand car which passed by leisurely propelled by two railway employees.

MEN ENTOMBED BY ROCK FALL

Forty-One Living and Three Dead in Michigan Iron Mine.

RESCUERS ACTIVE.

IRONWOOD, Mich., Sept. 25. — (United Press). — Entombed alive with the bodies of three companions, forty-one miners to-day waited in the mine, more than 2,500 feet below the surface of the city, until rescuers could drill and blast through tons of rock that sealed the shaft of the Pabst Iron Ore Company.

It is believed that the trapped men will be obliged to endure their plight for at least five days before they can be brought out.

It is believed that three men were instantly killed when the falling rock buried them.

They were Thomas Rowell, underground electrician, and two of his assistants, Evar Gustafson and Gust Sell. Engineers encouraged the rescue workers with statements that there seemed to be little immediate danger to the men entombed below. The main danger lay in suffocation. Water or gas were not troubling the men, the engineer said.

Bodies Recovered

The bodies of three men, occupants of a cage in the Pabst Mine of the Oliver Iron Mining Company when it hurtled to the bottom of the shaft Friday beneath tons of rock, were recovered today. Searchers then turned to extracting 32 men imprisoned on the eighth level.

Miners working in shifts reached the bodies through another shaft. Hope was sold out by searchers for the safety of the imprisoned men. Mine officials said they were in no danger at present.

POLISH CABINET RESIGNS OFFICE

Trouble With Parliament Over Money Cause of Resignation.

BUDGET REDUCED.

WARSAW, Sept. 25 (United Press) —The Polish Cabinet resigned today after a conflict with Parliament over money. Premier Barthel won the money struggle when he threatened to dissolve the Parliament unless it adopted the Government's budget draft, which has been reduced $4,000,000 by the Budget Committee.

A vote of misconfidence in the Minister of Education and the Minister of the Interior, however, later in the day precipitated the Cabinet's fall.

PASS EXAMINATIONS

Two Local Men Qualify as Embalmers at Recent Tests.

T. Bruce McMaster and Harry A. Walker, assistants in the funeral service of D. Belleghem and Sons of this city, were successful in passing their examinations as qualified embalmers.

The examinations were held in the Anatomy Building of Toronto University on September 7th and 8th, 1926.

Both Mr. Walker and Mr. McMaster are continuing their services with the D. Belleghem funeral home.

EXPERTS ADOPT STATEMENT ON CANCER CONTROL

Close Four Day Session of Discussion With Tabulation.

NOT INFECTIOUS.

Susceptibility To Disease Is Hereditary, But Not Disease Itself.

LAKE MOHONK, N.Y., Sept. 25. —An important weapon in combatting cancer was made ready for use yesterday when the world's recognized authorities on the disease put into a statement the basic knowledge they have of the subject.

The statement was adopted at the closing session of the four-day symposium on cancer control, which was attended by more than 100 cancer specialists of the United States and several European countries.

A summary of the statement follows:

"Cancer is not to be looked upon as contagious or infectious.

'Cancer itself is not hereditary, although a certain predisposition or susceptibility to cancer is apparently transmissible through inheritance.

"The control of cancer depends upon the employment of measures of personal hygiene and certain preventative and curative measures, the success of which depends upon the intelligent co-operation of patient and physician.

"Persons who have cancer must apply to competent physicians at a sufficiently early stage of the disease in order to have a fair chance of cure. Cancer in most parts of the body can be discovered in a very early stage and if these cases are treated properly the prospect for permanent cure is good.

"The most liable forms of treatment, and in fact the only ones thus far justified by experience and observation, depend upon surgery, radium and Xrays.

"Emphasis should be placed upon the value of the dissemination of the definite, useful and practical knowledge about cancer, and this knowledge should not be confused nor hidden by what is merely theoretical and experimental."

Stowaways Found On Ship Paid $80,000 To Enter U.S.

NAPLES, September 25. (United Press.) — Twelve would be emigrants who paid approximately $80,000 to be smuggled to New York on the Italian liner Alkert, were found in the naptha store room shortly before the ship sailed from here. Their hiding place was so poorly ventilated that four of the stowaways were on the verge of asphyxiation. They are in a serious condition in a hospital. The others were arrested.

Comparison Brings Out the Outstanding Value of the Chrysler "50"

The Chrysler plan of Quality Standardization differs from, and is superior to, ordinary manufacturing practice and methods, because it demands fixed and inflexible quality standards which enforce the same scrupulously close limits—the same rigid rule of engineering exactness—the same absolute accuracy and precision of alignment and assemblage—in the measurement, the machining and the manufacturing of every part, practice and process in four lines of Chrysler cars—"50", "60", "70" and Imperial "80".

With only four other cars of large production in the four-cylinder field, it is exceedingly easy to recognize the outstanding values of the Chrysler "50" and decide which car to buy.

Lining up the five cars side by side in your own mind, you will be startled by the contrast between them—and especially by the contrast between the Chrysler "50" and all the others.

In point of size, seating room, beauty of design, beauty of finish and power, the Chrysler "50" stands out so unmistakably that you recognize the price at once as far and away the greatest offering ever made in four-cylinder cars.

It will continue to yield a sustained speed of 50 miles and more per hour, 5 to 25 miles in 8 seconds, and 30 miles to the gallon—for months and for years, as the result of Chrysler's plan of Quality Standardization.

At last it is possible for you to make a convincing and conclusive comparison of values—studying the comfort, appearance and performance factors of the Chrysler "50" in comparison with everything else offered—and satisfy yourself almost at a glance in which car you should invest your money. Examine and ride in the new Chrysler "50" and you will not consider any other car in its price class.

MUSEUM SHIP COMES BY SAIL

Lost Propellor at Davis Strait on Homeward Voyage.

SUCCESSFUL TRIP.

SYDNEY, N. S., Sept. 25.—(Canadian Press Despatch)).—The two-masted schooner Morrissey, bearing members of the American Museum Greenland expedition, arrived here yesterday, after having covered 1,400 miles from Davis Straits by canvas alone, necessitated by damages sustained to her propeller and reporting rough "going" this side of Belle Isle, the party undergoing no little hardship en route.

Captain Bob Bartlett, Commander Peary's old skipper, is in command of the Morrissey, while George Palmer Putman of G. P. Putnam and Sons, pulishers of New York, is director of the expedition which set out in June on a voyage of scientific exploration, touching North Sydney on its way north on June 25 last.

The success of the expedition was endangered when the Morrissey went aground July 26 on Northumberland Island, North Greenland, but after removing the greater part of the cargo the crew was able to float the vessel, and they proceeded south to Melville Bay, dropping anchor at Upernavik, North Greenland, for repairs, in which they were assisted by a Danish Government patrol boat.

Mr. Putnam declared that the expedition had met with great success in its work of research and exploration, and returns home with a full cargo of rare specimens destined for the American Museum at New York. Among the collection is one most valued—a complete set of the "narwhal" family "unicorn of the sea," the first obtained in its complete form by an expedition. The British Museum radioed the party requesting the specimens, but disposition will be made by the American Museum on the return of the party to New York.

AMERICANS VISIT INFESTED CORN BELT

See Ravages of Borer In Essex and Kent Counties.

CHATHAM, Ont., Sept. 25.—In the neighborhood of two hundred officials of the United States and the states of the corn belt across the line, including Rennick Dunlop, assistant secretary of the Federal Department of Agriculture, Washington, visited the corn borer invested areas of Essex and Kent Counties yesterday. The party completed the tour at the Dominion parasite laboratory in this city and returned to Detroit where the three days' conference will be brought to a close with a meeting in that city this morning.

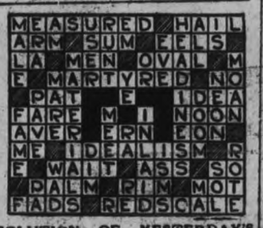
Yesterday was the first time that Mr. Dunlop has inspected fields in which the corn is practically one hundred per cent. infested. He was visibly impressed and declared during a short address at the luncheon that the American Government stood ready to aid in every way possible the fight against the borer and to provide the money that can be used profitably in the fight.

Dean Curtis of the Kansas State College of Agriculture and chairman of the international corn borer committee termed the pest the greatest menace to agriculture at the present time.

Although the infestation has increased considerably in the United States during the past year, it is not as bad across the line as in this part of Ontario. The infested areas of the United States, the highest infestation is about seventy-five per cent., while some of the fields visited in Essex and Kent showed practically one hundred per cent.

L. H. Worthley, chief administrator of the corn borer control in the Cnited Staes, the prime mover in the tour to this city, stated that although the conditions on the American farms are not as bad as in Essex and Kent, as regards the corn borer, unless the pest is placed under control it will not be long until the situation will be just as bad across the line. While entomologists and agronomists are making good progress, the success of the fight to keep the borer below commercial damage will depend upon mechanical control methods for the present at least, according to Mr. Worthley.

Arthur Gibson of Ottawa, Dominion entomologist; Prof. Caesar, O. A.C. Provincial entomologist; A. R. Baird, in charge of the local laboratory, and W. R. Reek, Ridgetown experimental farm, accompanied the deputation on the tour of the two counties.



SOLUTION OF YESTERDAY'S CROSSWORD PUZZLE.

O.R.F.U. GROUPINGS.

Peterborough Juniors Get Bye in First Round.

Owing to the difficulty in the matter of finances considerable difficulty has been encountered in grouping the football clubs in the junior and interscholastic series of the Ontario Union, and the final arrangements find most of the groups composed of three clubs. The conveners have been appointed and the various clubs notified by mail of the appointments, and instructions have been given that group schedules must commence not later than next Saturday, and that the final group games must be played not later than November 6 and the Saturday previous, if possible.

Any clubs that wish to enter either of these series, and who are located in any of the three-club groups, will be accepted if the entries are received not later than Monday night. The groupings, are:

Junior Series.

Group No. 1—St. Thomas, London and Stratford; Convener, William Friend, London.

Group No. 2—Brantford, Galt and Kitchener; Convener, Jack Carley, Kitchener.

Group Uo. 3—Hamilton Victorias, Grimsby and Oakville; Convener, Dr. Phelps, Grimsby.

Group No. 4—Balmy Beach, Argonauts and Parkdale C.C.; Convener, C. W. MacQueen, Toronto.

Group No. 5 — Penetanguishene and Orillia H.S.; Convener, W. T. Fahey, Penetanguishene.

Group No. 6—Peterboro, a bye.

Interscholastic Series.

Group No. 1—St. Catharines C.I., Niagara Falls C.I., Thorold H.S., Stamford H.S.; Convener, J. E. Stephens, St. Catharines.

Group No. 2—Delta Collegiate, Hamilton Technical and U.T.S.; Convener, Ben Simpson, Hamilton.

Group No. 3—Albert College, Belleville, and Oshawa H.S.; Convener, M. F. Kirkland, Oshawa.

In addition to the above groups there are two or three city leagues that have made tentative arrangements to enter the second round of the junior series, while a couple of interscholastic leagues, as well as the W.O.S.S.A., will send their champions into the play-offs for the interscholastic title. Any clubs that wish to enter must immediately notify C. W. MacQueen, assistant secretary of the O.R.F.U., c/o Mail and Empire, Toronto.

PROGRESS MADE FOR EXHIBITION

Committee In Charge of Made-in-Canada Fair Holds Meeting.

MANY EXHIBITS.

The committee in charge of the Made-in-Canada Exhibition met in the Business College last night. H. W. Dickin, chairman of the committee, was in the chair, ably supported by the president, Dr. J. J. Craig. Practically every member was present, and from the enthusiasm manifested and glowing reports of progress presented, it is evident that the forthcoming exhibition is to be a red letter event in the history of Peterboro.

The formal opening of the exhibition is planned, for Monday noon October 11th, when a luncheon will be held, to which will be invited the Rotary Club, and at which it is expected there will be many guests from the Manufacturers' Association, the Retail Merchants' Association, and other influential organizations of the city.

J. J. Turner, who is in charge of the securing of exhibits, reported that space in the Armories was being taken up very rapidly. He expected that the "sold out" sign would have to be put up within a few days, and that it was therefore important to urge local manufacturers who wish to have an exhibit to get their reservations for booths made at once.

During the week of the exhibition there will be many special features, one of the most interesting of which will be a Fashion Show. This is being put on by Peterboro merchants, a night being alloted to each merchant. Living manequins will display the very latest in fall and winter creations.

What will be of special interest to the people of the country will be the agricultural competition between four U.F.O. clubs. Each club will have a special display booth featuring roots and grains. Handsome trophies for the best displays are being donated, announcement of which will be made at a later date.

So important is the exhibition considered that the co-operation of the Ontario and Federal Governments have been readily obtained. The Honorable J. D. McRae, Minister of Mines, has promised that the wonderful exhibit of Ontario minerals will be at the exhibition for the whole week, and it is fully expected that there will be an interesting woollen exhibit put on by the Dominion Government.

The ticket-selling campaign for the exhibition is now getting well under way. A score of Peterboro's pretty girls are already working hard and it is expected that by the first of next week fifty young ladies will be doing this worthy work. Each ticket bought will be a direct contribution to the work of underprivileged children which is being so efficiently carried on by the local Kiwanis Club. It is therefore hoped that the citizens generally will give a liberal response to the ladies who are in charge of the tickets. The exhibition itself will be worth many times the price of admission.

In order to add interest to the selling of the tickets, special prizes will be given to the lady selling the most tickets on any particular day. A partial list of these prizes will be found on another page of The Examiner. All these prizes have been donated by Peterboro merchants, which manifests a public spirit which is most commendable. The Kiwanis Club sincerely appreciates this very practical co-operation in their efforts by the merchants of the city.

BUYING IN CANADA MAKES MORE WORK

Endless Chain Started When Made-in-Canada Goods Are Demanded.

Whether you are a retailer, wholesaler, manufacturer, producer of raw materials or a consumer, you cannot dispute the fact that your own prosperity and success is bound up in the prosperity and success of each other factor in the field of commerce. For instance, if you are a retailer it is most plainly demonstrated that by buying and selling only goods manufactured and produced in Canada, you maintain and enlarge the purchasing power of your own customers. Your orders to a wholesaler set in motion a series of orders to Canadian manufacturers and producers of raw materials. The organizations pay wages to employees and cash over for materials. They give employment to hundreds of skilled workmen, clerks, salesmen and executives, all of whom are represented in your own customers.

Without your orders to a Canadian firm, all these Canadian workmen, your customers, are without work, wages and money to buy your goods. With your orders for Canadian goods, they are given work, wages and money to enable them to buy more goods from your store.

The chain is endless. By keeping it unbroken your own prosperity and the prosperity of Canada is assured.

The Kiwanis Produced-in-Canada Exhibition merits the support of cugh. Let us keep the cycles intact and buy "Produced-in-Canada" goods the week of October 11 to 16.

In England at present there are 1700 full time professional football players and about 3500 part timers, who are paid a fee of several dollars for each game played.

PLAY TO-NIGHT AT ARMOURIES

Softball Game Scheduled for This Afternoon postponed.

RAIN IS CAUSE.

To-night at 7.45 the Firemen are to play the Famous Players of Toronto in the second game of the Ontario softball semi-finals. The rain this afternoon made it impossible to play the game at Riverside, so the Armories were secured through the courtesy of Col. Frank Bradburn.

MOVING PICTURES OF BOXING MATCH

Eastern Ontario Sunday School Workers Will Assemble Here Next Week.

Moving pictures of the Tunney-Dempsey fight of Thursday evening left Philadelphia today by areoplane and will be received at Camp Borden this afternoon. Special arrangements are being made for them to pass the customs officials and board of censors, so that they can be shown at the beginning of the week at a number of Ontario theatres, including the Capitol of this city. Peterborough will thus be one of the first cities to see the moving pictures of the championship bout.

PLANS UNDER WAY FOR BIG CONVENTION

Films Being Rushed To Ontario To-day Will Be shown Here Next Week.

Plans of the Eastern Ontario convention of the Ontario Religious Education Council, to be held in Peterborough on October 25, 26, and 27, were discussed at an executive meeting held last night at the Paragon Hall. Rev. C. W. DeMille of Oshawa, acting superintendent, was present and explained the different parts of the convention, giving the local committees much valuable information concerning the preparations to be made. W. S. Gordon of Tweed, president of the O.R.E.C., was also present at the gathering, and the Rev. N. R. McLeod acted as chairman.

Sessions will be held at Murray Street Church, with departmental conferences at George Street, St. Paul's, and Bethany Tabernacle. Services will be held at Murray Street Church every evening, and addresses will be delivered by a number of outstanding speakers.

HAZEN ONE UP.

GARDEN CITY, N.Y., Sept. 25.—(Canadian Press).—Walter Hagen, defending the title which he has held for two years, was one up on Leo Diegel of New York, former Canadian open champion, at the ninth hole of their 36-hole match for the United States professional golf championship on Salisbury course to-day.

THEATRE

CORINNE GRIFFITH STARS IN FILM VERSION OF NOTED PLAYWRIGHT'S STAGE HIT, 'CAESAR'S WIFE.'

The distinguished author and dramatist, W. Somerset Maugham, comes to the screen of the Capitol Theatre next week in "Infatuation", starring Corinne Griffith. The film is based on "Caesar's Wife," which enjoyed a tremendously successful run on Broadway.

Maugham, who is an Englishman, sprang into prominence as a man of letters with the publication of his novel "Of Human Bondage", considered one of the best books of the last twenty years.

He followed up this triumph with numerous short stories and plays. Last year one of his short stories about the South Seas was dramatized into the play, "Rain", one of the preeminent hits of a recent Broadway season. The play is still running in many cities here and abroad.

"Caesar's Wife" was written as a play. First National saw that the story of the wife who is forced into a flirtation in order to counteract the neglect of her husband, and who returns to him when she realizes that her love for him is greater than her love for her sweetheart, was super-excellent film material and purchased the rights.

In addition to Corinne Griffith the cast comprises Percy Marmont, Malcolm MacGregor, Warner Oland, Leota Lorraine, Martha Mattox, Claire DuBrey and Clarissa Selwynne. Irving Cummings directed.

AT THE REGENT

MOORE GIVES BEST OF CAREER IN "FIRST YEAR"

Matt Moore distinguishes himself in the role of Tommy Tucker, the bashful young hero of "The First Year," the Fox Films production adapted from the John Golden stage success coming to the Regent Theatre Monday.

In this picture version of John Golden's famous and successful play, Mr. Moore is said to give one of the best performances of his career. As usual he portrays what might be readily called a "sap"—but such a lovable Sap that, in the end, everyone who sees him and gets to know him is willing to forgive him all his sins.

Kathryn Perry, who in real life is the sister-in-law of the genial star, plays opposite him as Grace Livingston—Tucker. John Patrick is the heavy of the piece, taking the part of Dick Loring Tomy's rival who so enjoys talking about himself, his future and his accompSshments.

Frank Currier is the kindly old doctor who brings about the wedding of Tomy and Grace and patches up the quarrel. Frank Cooley and Virginia Madison are Grace's parents. J. Farrell MacDonald and Margaret Livingston are Mr. and Mrs. Barstow, important clients whom Tommy brings home for Grace to entertain. Carolynne Snowden, a dusky new addition to pictures, is the colored maid.

Frank Borzage directed the production which is filled with humorous and human situations from beginning to end.

SYNOPSIS

His father's warning—"Take women's love scornfully—and forget"—has made Juan the world's greatest lover. His cynicism is checked by Madonna-like Adriana Varanese; loving her, he reforms, but incurs the emity of infamous Lucretia Borgia, who loves him, and Donati, her kinsman, who coyets Adriana. The Borgias have Juan catch Donati in Adriana's room under circumstances that destroy his faith. Cynically he becomes the lover of Lucretia; to save her father, Adriana marries Donati. Count Rinaldi traps his wife in Juan's room. She kills herself, but Juan blames Rinaldi.

CHAPTER IX—Continued.

One of the men loosened his hold; the other two looked inquiringly at Juan. He shrugged his shoulders, spoke with what was almost solicitude, save for its note of mockery.

"Be lenient," he urged. "The man is mad."

Rinaldi renewed his struggles, and even for the three men subduing him it was no easy task. He fought with the superhuman strength of a madman, snarling at them, almost dragging himself from their grasp once, and leaping toward Juan, who apparently was only politely interested in his frantic efforts to free himself.

He was beaten into submission at last, and dragged from the room. Juan, looking down at the dead woman, shuddered with horror. For a moment it seemed as if the demon within him might lose its grip, conquered by pity. Then, straightening his shoulders, Juan strode toward the door, followed by Pedrillo.

He went to the outer door, stood there for a moment, watching Rinaldi disappear into the distance, on his way to prison. Poor devil! Well, that was what love of a woman brought one to, he told himself. Never would he give in to it again. Something whispered to him that never again would there be anyone like Adriana in his life, that neve could he care fo anyone else as he did for her. He laughed bitterly at the thought.

Her face rose before him; its lovely contours, its purity, the long, delicate lines of her slender body were clear before him. He had told himself that he would put her out of his mind forever, yet always she came back to him in this way, as if he could not kill his memories of her.

Always too came the surging love of her that threatened to overpower him, to weaken his resolution and send him to the street corner from which he could see her entering the church where she worshipped daily. He was afraid of yielding to that impulse; his effort to vanquish it led him to such acts as the one which had just resulted in the death of the Marchesa Rinaldi. Yet ever it came back to him.

He stood there in the fragrance of the early summer night, a lost soul, not wanting salvation.

And as he stood, the sound of tolling bells came clearly to him.

Pedrillo's step sounded behind him. Impatiently, tortured by his own thoughts, he cried out to the man:

"This is abominable! Will those bells never cease?"

And Pedrillo, after listening for a moment, replied:

"They will ring, master, until the banquet is over and the Count Donati escorts his bride to their apartments."

Juan stifled the cry of anguish that rose to his lips. He had needed no answer to his question, had known what the reply must be, yet hearing the words from Pedrillo's lips stabbed him anew.

He loathed himself for his own helplessness. Never before had life vanquished him so completely. It was beyond any man's endurance, he told himself, to go on living under such conditions.

Something must be done, before he lost his mind, as Rinaldi seemed to have lost his.

He stood for a moment longer, one wild plan after another rushing through his mind. There was nothing to be lost, since his life was valueless to him now. Nothing to be gained, either, perhaps, and yet—yet—

A sardonic smile twisted his lips. Suddenly he knew what could be done, what must be done, if he was to endure another hour of life. Eagerly he ran into the street, as eagerly as a lover going to meet his beloved.

CHAPTER X.

The tolling of her own wedding bells brought to Adriana anguish as keen as that which their ringing made Don Juan suffer. Limply she leaned back in her high, carved chair, exhausted after the wedding ceremony and the long banquet.

As he had done earlier in the evening, Donati still slipped his arm over her shoulders from time to time, still leered down into her face. And on her other side, her father still tried to console her, touching her hand lightly, meeting her piteous smiles with smiles that were as heartbreaking as hers.

The gaiety at the banquet grew more and more unrestrained. Near Adriana a beautiful girl, hardly older than she, half lay across the table, laughing into the eyes of the man who bent to kiss her. A dancer, scantily clad, whirled past, paused to toast the bride with the glass of wine that had just been poured for Donati, and, having drunk the toast, tossed the fragile, exquisite goblet to the stone floor.

"So goes wedded bliss!" she called to him. "Come to me when you tire of her, my lord!"

Donati laughed, a thick, sensuous laugh that made Adriana's flesh creep. She wondered hopelessly if the tortures of the damned could be worse than those she was enduring. How preferable death would be to this!

She felt that she had sat there at the head of the long table for countless hours, with Cesare murmuring in her ear and laying his hot, soft hand on her bare flesh, with Lucretia Borgia smiling cruelly, triumphantly at her, and Cesare looking on, his lean, avaricious face more saturnine than ever.

She hated the scene, yet, when Lucretia rose, signifying that the banquet was at an end, she cowered in her chair, feeling as if her limbs had lost their power of movement. For Lucretia's rising meant that the newly wedded couple would now be escorted to their rooms.

It meant that she, Adriana Varanese, would go up the long, wide staircase, between the garlands of flowers, to the apartments where she must remain alone with her husband.

There was laughter all about her as the guests rose, laughter with an undercurrent that made her icy cold. Oh"—I cannot!" she murmured.

"You spoke, my darling?" her father asked.

His voice reminded her of the reason for her sacrifice.

"I—I did not speak," she faltered, and forced herself to rise, and with Donati at her side, to walk slowly toward the stairs.

Bewildered, terrified, Adriana wondered how the Church could have blessed this marriage of hers.

Up the wide stairs she walked, not feeling her feet pressing their marble width, moving as if in a dream. The others had stopped at the foot, all but Lucretia and Cesare, who ascended a few steps and then paused.

The doors of the bridal chamber were thrown open by servants in the livery of the Borgias, and closed again, behind Donati and his bride. Adriana shrank back against the doors, stood staring across the room at the huge bed on its raised dais, with heavy curtains of velvet, bearing a crest in gold.

WHEN YOUNG GIRLS GROW PALE AND THIN

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Should Be Taken To Enrich the Blood.

When girls grow weak, pale and thin, parents should not neglect these symptoms; to do so means danger. The girl in her teens cannot develop into robust womanhood without an abundant supply of rich, red blood in her veins. It is the lack of this that is the great trouble with nine girls out of ten. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have achieved world-wide fame for their remarkable blood-making properties. In these pills there is vigorous health, with glowing cheeks and sparkling eyes for every weak, pale girl. The value of the pills in cases of this kind is shown by the statement of Mrs. Winnifred Rutty, Barton street west, Hamilton, Ont., who says:—"About two years ago my eldest girl got into very bad health. I took her to a doctor who advised having her tonsils removed, saying this was the seat of the trouble. We had them removed, but it did not help her, and she seemed to have absorbed so much poison from the trouble that she did not pick up at all. She could neither eat nor sleep, and what food she did take did not digest. Then she developed a cough that kept her awake at night, and went down in weight to 95 pounds. A neighbor said to me, 'You have tried so many things why not try Dr. Wiliams' Pink Pills?' I got some and before she finished the second box she began to show improvement. She continued the use of the pills for some time and is now in the pink of condition, able to work and play, and eat and sleep with all her old time vigor. These statements can be verified by neighbors who watched her restored from ill health to perfect health."

If your medicine dealer does not keep these pills you can get them by mail at 50c a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville Ont.

ATTACKED BY BULL.

Robt. Miller, of Burnbrae, Severely Injured By Infuriated Bull.

BURNBRAE, Sept. 25.—Mr. Robert Millar, a local farmer, was severly injured early last week when attacked by an infuriated bull which he was about to take to market. The animal was fortunately without horns or Mr. Millar could undoubtedly have been fatally injured. As it was he was terribly bruised about the legs and for several days was unable to work.

The Seymour road gang are busy, crushing stone on Mr. H. C. Bedford's farm east of Burnbrae Corners and are fixing some of the bad road in that section. They had the misfortune to have all the gas taken out of the tank on the tractor one night last week.

W.C.T.U. MEETING HEARS ABLE SPEECH

Mrs. J. H. Bell Describes the Work of English Temperance League.

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 25. — The September meeting of the W. C. T. U. was held on Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Henry Bakes, Kent street. After the business part of the meeting was concluded, the President, Mrs. J. H. Bell, gave a splendid address on the work of the English Temperance League in England. The ladies had a social time, and there was a good attendance. The October meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. C. W. Turner.

Personals.

Miss Gladys Dewey, of Buffalo, N. Y., is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. Dewey.

Mrs. J. H.—Bell and daughters, Jean and Betty, arrived home Saturday evening after spending the past four months with relatives in England.

Mr. John Horseman arrived home this week from England, where he spent the past three months with his brothers and many other friends.

Mrs. J. Ross, of New York, arrived in town on Wednesday evening to attend her mother, Mrs. Helen Donald, who is seriously ill.

Mr. and Mrs. Sanders Burleigh and Mr. and Mrs. John Martin, of Toronto, left this week on a motor trip to New York, Syracuse and other places.

Mr. E. T. Morton, of Toronto, was in town for a few days this week.

Mrs. Scott and daughter, of Orillia, are visiting Mr. and Mrs. W. Bateson.

WARSAW CHURCH KEEPS ANNIVERSARY

Rev. J. W. Gordon Preaches at Special Service — Warsaw News.

WARSAW, Sept. 25.—The United church anniversary services and fowl supper are over. Rev. Mr. Gordon of St. Andrew's church, Peterboro, conducted the service in the morning, and preached the sermon in the evening. The church was well filled at both services. The flower committee had secured some beautiful flowers. The choir had special music, with solos and quartettes.

The fowl supper on Wednesday evening was a success in every way. A bounteous supper of fowl, ham, salads, cake, pie and other good things was provided and the entertainment given by the George street Sunday school orchestra was splendid. The church was packed for the programme, every available foot of space being occupied. The receipts at the door were over one hundred and fifty dollars and there was a social on Thursday evening.

Bethel people will hold their anniversary services on the first Sunday in October, with a supper following on Monday.

A Presentation.

On Monday evening of last week, the Bethel church people held a special business meeting, the men to examine the windows, and the ladies to examine the matting, and other little matters. The business done, there was a short religious service. Mrs. Herrington sang a solo, and she and Mrs. Henry Batten sang a duet. About sixty people were present. The special reason for the gathering was to bid good-bye to Mr. and Mrs. William Gray, who are leaving their home near Warsaw and moving to Monaghan. Mrs. Clayton Jory read an address:

Mr. and Mrs. William Gray and family:

It was with much regret that we learned of your intention to leave our midst. You have always been good neighbors and citizens, and supported the church by both your presence and your givings. These things have enabled you to win a place in our hearts.

We are sorry that you are leaving our community, but we realize that you are doing so, only because you feel that you can thereby improve your conditions. We hope that the benefits arising from this change will exceed your expectations, and that the future will have rich blessings in store for you, both temporal and spiritual. We trust also that in going to your new home you will link your lives up with the church, and make it the centre of your social life.

We feel that we could not let you depart from our midst without endeavoring to show, in some little way, the high esteem in which we hould you. We would therefore ask you to accept this rocking chair, table, and centre piece as a little token of esteem and remembrance.

Signed on behalf of Bethel Community—Mrs. George Garbutt, Mrs. Clayton Jory, Mrs. Lorne Lonsberry.

Mrs. Garbutt and Mrs. Lonsberry made the presentation. Mr. and Mrs. Gray were completely taken by surprise and almost overcome, for they had not thought of it, but they thanked the people very heartily.

Good Dressing Contest.

The results of the judging in the good dressing contest are out. First prize was won, with 258 points, by the girls from Douro No. 5 School, Lyall Miller, Zita McManus and Anna McMurray. Second prize goes to Douro No. 6 girls, who had two hundred and forty-six points. They are: Hannah Sharpe, Anna Dunford and Valeta Dunford. The third prize was won by Elva Kidd, Verna Armstrong and Beatrice Tedford, of School No. 12, Douro, with two hundred and thirty-eight points. Dummer school No. 4, was in the fourth place with two hundred and thirty-four points.

Of the fifteen girls only four were correct in the placings. In some cases placing and reasons were correct, or quite good. Sometimes the placings were all right but reasons were wrong.

The U.F.W.O. gave the prizes for elocution.

Joseph Tedford was the first man in the district to fill his silo.

In a few places corn is touched by frost.

Some little time ago Mr. John Reid went to Gananoque to visit Mr. Washington Reid, who lived for many years in Warsaw. Last week Mr. E. Hawthorn visited Mr. Reid and both report Mr. Reid as being fully as well as when he left Warsaw. He remembered and inquired about every one he used to know in Warsaw.

Miss Margaret Ferguson is visiting friends near Warsaw.

ATTENDANCE DOWN AT LINDSAY FAIR

Unsettled Weather Conditions Ban on Lindsay Central Exhibition.

LINDSAY, Sept. 25.— Unsettled weather conditions affected the attendance at Lindsay Central Exhibition yesterday, the crowd not being nearly as large as on the second day of the 1925 Fair. The rain on Thursday night also cut down attendance, and resulted in the cancellation of the evening's program. The directors are hoping for more favorable weather on Saturday in order to establish a new record attendance for that day.

Miller Bros' big show constitutes the Midway, and it is believed that the management will lose money because of unfavorable weather conditions.

The speeding events yesterday resulted as follows:

2.30 Pace.

May Mac, Moffatt, Newmarket	5	3	2
Grenville Lady E. Jones Peterboro	2	6	4
Peter Howke, Coldwater	4	2	3
Valley Todd, Elmhirst Lang	1	1	1

Time—2.30, 2.29 1-2, 2.29 1-4.

SMALL HURRICANE DESTROYS HOUSES

Petrolia Suffers Slight Damages as Result of "Twister."

SARNIA, Sept. 25. —(Canadian Press). — A survey of the damage by the small "twister" at and near Petrolia yesterday afternoon, indicates that it will not exceed, $7,000 or $8,000. Two houses, one in the town and one outside suffered serious damage. Ten barns were partly wrecked, 75 of the oil derricks were blown down and two drilling rigs damaged.

Telephone service to the South was disrupted and hydro power was off for over three hours. The main streets of Petrolia were strewn with branches of trees and traffic tied up until the debris was removed.

LEAGUE MEETING.

Zion People Held Annual Gathering on Thursday Last.

PETHERICK'S CORNERS Sept. 25. — The annual meeting of the Zion People's League was held on Thursday evening last. The reports presented showed that the local league had had a very successful year. The average attendance at the meetings for the year was 59. The final report of the attendance contest showed the Reds to be far in the lead with 737. Khaki in second place with 581, the White's 554 and the Blue's 469.

Before opening the balloting for the various officers, Rev. Mr. Daniel spoke a few words of commendation as to the performance of the League during the last year. He stated that the Zion Society was second to none in the conference as evidenced by the annual reports.

The election of officers for the year 1926-27 then took place which resulted as follows:

President—Fred Barnum.
Leaders of Departments:
Devotional—Thomas Fry.
Missionary—Earl Fairman.
Citizenship—Lindsay Anderson.
Social—Gladys Simpson.
Junior—Gladys Petherick.
Secretary—Mrs. Harry Barnum.
Treasurer—Clarence Barnum.
Organist—Jennie Fry.

A social evening will be held by the League in the Orange Hall on Monday evening, September 27th, when the Reds, winners of the contest will provide the programme and the other groups the lunch. The first meeting in October will be the Rally night with a special programme.

BAILIEBORO NEWS

BAILIEBORO, Sept. 24. — The friends of Mr. James Johnston will be pleased to know that he is progressing favorably after his recent operation in London Hospital.

Dr. and Mrs. M. Mason of Toronto are the guests of friends in South Monaghan.

Mrs. J. Jewison of Toronto is the guest of her daughter, Mrs. H. Barnard.

The road gang have been busily engaged in putting tar on the road between here and Centreville. This forces the motorists to drive slowly as the tar flies up so badly that the occupants of the cars are apt to get their clothes ruined. Several citizens of this district who drive grey or white horses claim that their horses have become so badly bespattered with tar, that they will retain the stains until the spring season allows them to lose their old hair.

Among those from this district who started to Port Hope School this week are Misses Ruth Dawson and Margaret Brown and Messrs. Harold Barnard, Archie Deyell, Keith Barnard and Arnold Brown.

Messrs. Robt. Falls and W. D. Moncrief attended the auction sale of Mr. W. Falls of Orono on Tuesday.

The late summer blight has seriously affected the potato crop in this district, while around the Fraserville district the corn has been frozen white.

There are very few wild ducks at Rice Lake so far this season; the hunters claim it is on account of the warm weather.

Although the people of Ontario had all the apples they could wish for last year, still ere spring comes around again an apple may taste good to the apple lover, as the apple crop in this district is exceptionally light. There are some orchards that are well loaded with fall apples, such as wealthies, snows and duchess, but the good winter apples, such as the northern spys, are very rare this season.

similar attitude under the influence of the teaching of Professor Marshall.

James McGinlay.

Mr. McGinlay, a young Scottish preacher, and McMaster student who became prominent last year through his revival campaign at Alton, Ont., although showing signs of voice strain, delivered a passionate and earnest address. After a humorous reference to Dr. Shields as the "denominational Bolshevik," Mr. McGinlay said the issue was not the ethics of Dr. Shields, or the character or ability as a lecturer of Professor Marshall. "The question is," he declared, "are you going to substitute the reason of man for the divine revelation of God?"

In McMaster a man's intelligence was measured by the side he took. If he took the side known as being four square for McMaster, he was all right—he was intelligent; if he took the other side he was ignorant.

Professor Marshall had said the fight was one between ignorance. Mr. McGinlay agreed, but he expressed the hope that Professor Marshall did not mistake the identity of the side whereon he stood. God did not reveal himself to intelligence, but to simple faith.

The German school of false theology had blasted the life of every church that received its doctrines. Were churches ever built up by men whose beliefs were consistent with the Driver view, by men who denied the historicity of Jonah, the bodily resurrection of Christ, and the Mosaic authorship of the Pentateuch? The Modernist was like the cuckoo, which made use of other birds' nests for the hatching of his young.

He criticised the Professor's claim to be a liberal evangelical, which, he said, was as if an inhabitant of the Southern States were to declare himself a white negro.

Dr. T. T. Shields.

The evening was well advanced when Dr. Shields rose to his feet but in spite of the lateness of the hour he held his audience in rapt attention till the conclusion of the last sentence.

Commencing in the lighter vein he informed his hearers that he used to come to Peterborough—when he was respectable. Passing into a more serious strain, he said the Baptist Bible Union was accused of being a divisive body. The educational secretary had said, in the Canadian Baptist, that he (Dr. Shields) had declared that he was ready to split every church in the denomination. What he did really say, and what the Educational Secretary ought to have known that he said, was that he, personally, stood for the divine inspiration, infallibility and supreme authority of the Word of God and that he desired to stand for the absolute infallibility of Christ. That was where he stood and on that issue he was prepared to split every church in Christendom.

It was painful for a man to break the fellowship of 25 years and to find himself without the camp: Never until these days had he known the feelings of the three Hebrew children in the fiery furnace. There were parts of the Bible that could not be read by the light of the students' lamp, but in the flames, or in the lions' den with an angel for a professor. He could believe that the Israelites crossed the Red Sea; he had crossed it himself. He could believe in the chariots of fire; he had had a ride in one.

Losing Ground.

In looking along the convention line through the two provinces, despite some bright spots here and there, the Baptists were losing because they were not producing a vital ministry.

Speaking of the denominational paper, Dr. Shields said the Canadian Baptist was filled with things utterly untrue. The truth lay directly in the opposite direction from what was written in the Canadian Baptist.

Referring to the occasion when he produced letters from England, accusing Mr. Marshall of being a modernist, Dr. Shields said that when Dr. Farmer stated that Mr. Marshall held the Driver view, he (Dr. Shields) replied, "I don't need any letter from England." Dr. Farmer had said more than could be learned from any letter.

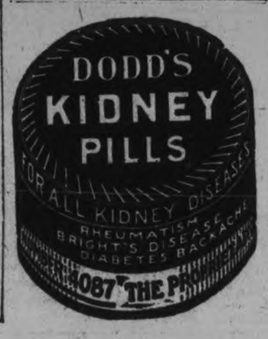
He thought the Driver view should be more fully understood. Critics placed their literary microscope over the Pentateuch, and said they discovered in the Books of Moses, clearly woven together, materials from different sources. They declared they recognized differences in the style. They called one writer J, who wrote Jehovah for God, another E, who used the name Elohim for God; and the third writer was designated P. He was regarded as the author of the Priestly Code.

When, at the convention in Hamilton, the Rev. John Linton referred to Marshall's acceptance of the Driver view, a young McMaster student shouted, "Say it all, Linton, say it all—dates and authorship." The young fellow did not know, but Dr. Farmer knew well that on authorship and dates lay the whole basis of Higher Criticism. Let them take the Priestly Code—relating to the sacrifices. Driver took the whole section, saying Moses never wrote it, and dated it 1,000 years after Moses. Driver said the priests, during the exile in Babylon, copied the sacrifices of Babylon, and, to bolster up their claims, they fabricated the Priestly Code and palmed it off as the Word of God.

Only the Symptom

He did not want to say anything unkind of Professor Marshall, but Marshall was only the symptom of the disease—he was not the disease. Something had to come out before God could come in. The responsibility rested on the shoulders of the Dean of Theology, Jones Hughes Farmer. Was Dr. Farmer orthodox? Yes. He had no proof that Dr. Farmer ever said or wrote on unorthodox word. But in 20 years he had always, without exception, cast his vote on the sode of modernism. Dr. Farmer supporter Matthews; he was supporting Marshall.

Dr. Shields concluded the controversial portion of his speech with an analysis of Professor Marshall's view of the Resurrection, and in his closing sentences struck a high note in the narration of a remarkable reunion of a sundered family—the result of intercession at the Throne of Grace.



WOMAN'S AUXILIARY PLAN WINTER WORK

Re-opening Meeting Held in St. Thomas' Church Rectory.

MILLBROOK, Sept. 25—The re-opening meeting of the Woman's Missionary Auxiliary of St. Thomas' church was held at the Rectory on Monday evening, the president, Mrs. (Canon) Allen, being in the chair.

There was a good attendance, and an active interest was manifested in the plans of work for the current season.

Following the reading of correspondence by the secretary, Mrs. E. Whyte, a general discussion took place in reference to the Dorcas work, the missionary activities, and plans for increasing finances. On the suggestion of Mrs. C. M. Westmacott, it was decided to send a Christmas bale to a mission field within the home diocese, and for this a "pound party" will be held in December at Mrs. Westmacott's home when every member will bring a pound package of some usable commodity and the entire quantity received will be packed and sent off in good time to provide seasonable cheer in some needy parish. The usual bale for the Indian girl in one of the mission schools of the West will be sent in April.

The funds of the Auxiliary will be added to, it is hoped, by holding a series of lectures during the winter months, the general public being invited to attend. The first of these will probably be given by Mrs. (Rev.) P. R. Howard, and will be of a most interesting character dealing with experiences during Rev. Mr. Howard's pastorate in the Hudson Bay district.

The study book taken up before the holidays, "The Clash of Color" was completed by Miss Rose MacNamara, and the book for the current year was decided upon, the title being: "The Moslem World in Revolution."

On Tuesday, September 28, the Rural Deanery of the Woman's Auxiliaries will convene at Ida, in conjunction with the clergy of Victoria Deanery who are holding their annual meeting on the same day. St. John's church and the new Parish Hall will be used for the sessions. Rev. Dr. Boyle, of Cobourg, will officiate at the celebration of Holy Communion at 11 a.m. and will preach at the morning service, and at 2 p.m. the Auxiliaries will gather in the Parish Hall and be addressed by some outside speaker whose name has not yet been forwarded to the local W.A. president. All sessions are open to the public. Tea will be served at 5 p.m. and there will be no evening session.

A pleasant social time was enjoyed on Monday evening before the final breaking up of the gathering took place.

Weiner Roast.

The Wide Awakes group of Canadian Girls in Training held a "weiner roast" at the grove (Medd's) on Thursday evening, sixteen members, and two little visitors, being in attendance.

Two bonfires were lighted and coffee boiled on one, while the weiners were cooked for the "hot dogs" on the other, a variety of pies making dessert for the "feast."

Unfortunately threatening rain rather hastened the tea hour and made it practically impossible for the games, which had been planned as a part of the outing, to be carried out. A thoroughly good time was spent, and the social side of the gathering was a pleasant feature of the occasion. This is the third out of doors gathering the girls have enjoyed—a picnic at the river in July, and a reopening meeting at one of the members' homes in the country, making the other two.

The leader reported the sending by parcel post to Miss E. C. Hawken, missionary-teacher at the Wahstao Home and Boarding school, of the two stereoscopes and 150 slides kindly donated to the group by Rev. Jos. and Mrs. Wilks for this purpose. The Ruthenian children are naturally very fond of pictures hence enjoyment of the views is assured, and their educative value will be appreciated also as a number were of scenes in the Holy Land, and of leading cities and other places of interest in Europe and America.

Group Leaders Meet.

The eight group leaders of the Woman's Missionary Auxiliary of the United church, with the other members of the executive, met at the Parsonage on Wednesday afternoon in response to the invitation of the president, Mrs. (Rev.) F. H. Howard to consider ways and means of reaching the financial objective which has been adopted for this year's work.

The amount of over $150.00 was assigned by the finance committee of the Presbyterial, and the local organization is anxious to meet the full requirement. After general discussion it was decided to adopt the envelope system, make each group leader responsible for collecting these each month from her members, and thus increase the regular offering received at each meeting. It was felt that absentees wish to contribute and yet many are prevented from attending regularly the monthly meetings.

The Golden Links Mission Circle, Mrs. J. Mc Knight, president, and the Sunshine Mission Band, Mrs. C. Williamson, superintendent, will co-operate in raising their share of the amount allocated. Mrs. Williamson, and several of the Band members, had a booth on the grounds the day of the Rural School Fair and served lunches, besides selling homemade candy, ice-cream, etc., clearing about $25.00 during the afternoon.

The church year closing now in March instead of April, as formerly, makes it imperative that the usual Easter thankoffering be taken up on a specified date, the third Sunday in March being chosen for this important fund which last year reached a total of $103.15, the largest in the history of the Auxiliary.

Reception.

Mrs. Stewart McGill received for the first time since her marriage at her home on the Provincial Highway, just north of Centreville, on Wednesday and Thursday, afternoon and evening, of this week.

The bride wore a becoming dress of georgette crepe in the new blue shade so popular this season, and was assisted in receiving by her mother, Mrs. Thomas Wood. Mrs. James Might, sister-in-law of the bride, opened the door for the incoming guests, and in the dining-room Mrs. Holloway, of Toronto, poured tea.

An abundance of asters, gladioli, and other fall flowers made the rooms fragrant and beautiful for the occasion. Quite a number of friends took advantage of the opportunity to call and extend good wishes and congratulations to the bride and groom who are popular members of the young people's organizations of the community.

Personals.

Mr. and Mrs. William Larmer have received word that their daughter, Miss Ethel Larmer, whose place of business is at Miami, Florida, has received no injury in the recent catastrophe which visited that southern city. The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Larmer will be glad to learn that their anxiety has been relieved by hearing such good news.

Miss Margaret Howard is attending High School at Port Hope this term. Miss Jean Burnham will attend the Normal school, Peterboro, for the current year.

A Romance In An Apple Orchard

Ben Davis was an awful man. He was a Tallman and handsome, a native of Stitzenburg, Holland. He became hopelessly smitten on Bell-Flower, who looked like a Duchess, dressed beautifully in a Russet gown. His attentions to her were so Sweet that he made the Maiden Blush.

Now she was engaged to another Mann, although he was a Baldwin, he was Wealthy as a King and when he was advised of this he Swaar and with rage turned white as Snow and nearly took an apple-eptic fit.

He at once engaged a Spy, who soon informed him that he need Seek no Further her affections. He immediately left Ontario for a new town on the St. Lawrence, where he met a Rome Beauty and now he declares there are Nonsuch as she.

Changing Methods

This is the age of restlessness. Not even do loafers sit as long on the country store benches as they used to. And in the cities and towns "Home, Sweet Home" has become merely the place where you tell the iceman to leave the ice. Old homesteads are becoming scarcer and scarcer. A generation ago a house had to be lived in one hundred years or more to be considered worthy of the name homestead.

Today in many parts of the country a house is lived in by the same family more than three years it is considered out of date as styles in houses actually change or differ from year to year as the styles of dress and hair cuts.

So the seasons of the year are changing, making many changes on the farmer. Harvesting begins before haying is finished.

Gasoline tractors are taking the places of the well thought of horse, the work being done more quickly and with deeper cultivation. In this district not many tractors are owned by the farmers, but they engage a man and his tractor to do the plowing for a reasonable price per acre. Fall wheat has been sown by many farmers at an average of twenty acres to a farm. Some wheat is up out of the ground, some just sown this week, and others to be sown.

Stook threshing seems to be a popular fad these days, notwithstanding the heavy rains.

To the thrifty, ambitious farmer this looks to be a losing game. You can drive through the country and see the thrifty farmers have their crop housed in the barn while others have their grain standing in the open fields rotting.

They all had the same chance, with a little more hustle and work would have saved the situation and then they recommend stook threshing.

While the threshing machines moves in at night to the open field and during the night the rain falls and continues on the next day, consequently the machine moves out, leaving acres and acres not threshed.

The thrift farmer has his grain in the barn, and is turning the soil where his grain stood, and will have his farm gone over with the plow before winter sets in. Practical science still remains with farming.

A new Canada record in lead output was established in 1925 when the rescovery totalled 253,590,528 pounds, and advance of 44.5 per cent compared with the previous high record of 175,485,490 pounds set up last year, according to a statement issued by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics.

THRESHING AT HOME

Probably the busiest day a farmer has in the year is the day he threshes his own crop. If you should ask a farmer what threshing he disliked the most, he would undoubtedly tell you it was his own. He has to be up early in the morning, and if he is not fortunate enough to have plenty of water in his own farm he has to hitch up his team and drive a long distance after it. By the time he gets back the hands are beginning to gather, and there is considerable discussion about where the men want to work. Most of the men want to work in the grain mow, because it is cleaner, and a farmer has a hard time to get men to help him in the straw mow. He generally has the extreme pleasure of going in the straw himself, and gets called out of there several times to help the man in the granary to shovel back the grain.

The engineer wants him then to pound up some fuel for him, and he is kept running back and forward all the time. At noon his wife gets him to help her serve the meals, that is, if he is fortunate enough to have a wife.

It requires about twelve men to run a threshing gang. There is one man who stands on a platform and places the sheaves on the self-feeder. This charge is required to be fairly active and practical as to how he places them on, and it depends a good deal on how he feeds how the grain will be threshed. Four good men are needed in the grain mow, one of whom takes the front of the mow and is known as the tabler, and he has to throw the sheaves down to the man on the platform both quickly and accurately. Another good man is necessary to carry the grain, and if the grain is yielding good a second man is sometimes required. This job is known as the lazy man's job, because when you put him there you know he has to work. Another man is needed to operate the straw blower which is an easy job, but it is a very cold one if there is a high wind. The main thing in operating the blower is to keep in friendly terms with the men in the straw or you are very liable to hear some profanity.

The balance of the men are required in the straw mow, which is the lightest work, but is the dirtiest job of the bunch.

The place the men enjoy the best of all at a threshing is at the dinner table, and it would do any city man or any person who is on diet good to see those chaps disposing of all the good things set before them. Sometimes during an election campaign you would hear a great deal of oratory from some of those chaps who are trying to explain the virtues of their respective parties. After a farmer goes through a day's threshing he seldom requires any sleeping tablets, but makes use of a well-earned repose.

Silo-Filling

Early in the Spring, the farmer not only plans his grain sowing, but chooses the best location for the ensilage corn, which is sown by a seeder, not planted by hand, as the garden corn.

Then, later on, when the grain is growing and does not require any attention until harvest time you will see the man on the cultivator with his quiet, big, able horses, going up and down the rows, cultivating the corn, not occasionally, but continually, until it has matured.

During the month of September, before the heavy frosts, there forms a combine of the neighbors, and they get the corn binder out, and oh! so many repairs are needed, and away they go to the blacksmith shop, to have knives mended and sharpened, bolts made, etc.

The next is the corn cutter and blower, and it takes extra men to put this all up in position. The man that owns a steam engine has to be engaged to cut the corn and force it up into the silo which means a great deal of power.

At this period the housewife has to plan and get busy cooking and baking, as she will have from twenty to twenty-four very hungry men to cater to for a day or more. And these men are not looking for dainty salads and desserts but hearty and substantial food such as roast pork and beans, potatoes, pickled cabbage and cooked cabbage, carrots, pumpkin and apple pie, rice and plum uppdings, sponge cake and fried cakes.

Now on the day for the silo-filling, eight or ten men, each with a team and wagon come to draw the corn from the field to the machine. Other men stay in the field to pitch the corn on the wagons. Four men are in the silo, tramping the ensilage down to pack it. An extra man is at the cutter, to feed the corn, as it is thrown from the wagon. This work continues, until the ten-acre field is cleaned.

Then the whole outfit, men, horses, wagons, cutter, blower and engine, moves to the next farm.

The Lonely Sunflower

There is a garden on Lot 26, 4th Concession of Brighton Township, in Northumberland County, where a poor lone "Sun Flower" came up and the gardener took compassion on it, and let it grow.

When he was hoeing the onions, beets and beans, he also hoed the Sunflower. Receiving so much attention, it took heart and grew and grew, and grew, and being the only Sunflower in this garden, it thought it would have to make up for its brothers and sisters that were not there and what do you suppose?—

To-day it stands nine feet high, and proudly showing buds, and flowers to the number of ninety six.

Hustling Pays - Harvest Thanksgiving

NORHAM, Sept. 29:—It would seem as one listens to the street conversation, that many people received a great surprise when the results of the recent Federal election were announced. No greater however than those experienced by the agriculturists during the past few weeks. One day the farmer was an optimist and the next he was a pessimist, so changed and varied have been his opportunities of carrying on his work. Some men strained every muscle when conditions were favorable, while others took things more leisurely.

Grain stood stooked in the field for over a month. Much of it had grown until the sprouts were an inch in length. Some farmers turned it out and re-stooked it after every severe shower. Some drew in, although it was not quite fit; others waited and in the most part got caught in the next storm.

On a rainy day two men met at the store, one was smiling while the other looked blue. "How are you getting on with the harvest?" inquired Mr. Blue. "Oh, quite well. We have the one place in and all but about six acres on the other." answered Smiler. "How in the world do you do it?" asked Blue. "I have over thirty acres out yet." Smiler smiled as he replied, "Oh, the Lord helps those who help themselves, I guess. We made hay while the sun was shining." "I guess you are right," said Blue and walked away.

Some people where the prospects were bright for a splendid harvest had their grain flattened by the storms, so that an extra hand was obliged to follow around with the binder and pull out the sheaves, because the grain had become so tangled that the binder was unable to separate them.

It would seem to an observer as though the man who hustled when the sky was fair, got through with greater success than he who took things more easy and was less concerned. It sometimes pays to take time by the forelock.

"I am glad to-day is Sunday," said a miller. "For if it wasn't people would be drawing in, and the grain is not fit and then we would have a terrible time grinding it." "That is just what I was thinking," spoke out the thresherman. "If you find it difficult to dry and grind grain. I find it just as difficult to dry and thresh it. I threshed 600 bushels of oats the other day that had been cut the one way, and that had not been stooked. It rained a little all the time." "I have had to keep turning my alsike over or it would not grow fast to the ground," said another.

Evidently some folk think that to be promised a seed time and harvest means that a man can take his own time to do his work, while others interpret it—Hustle while you wait.

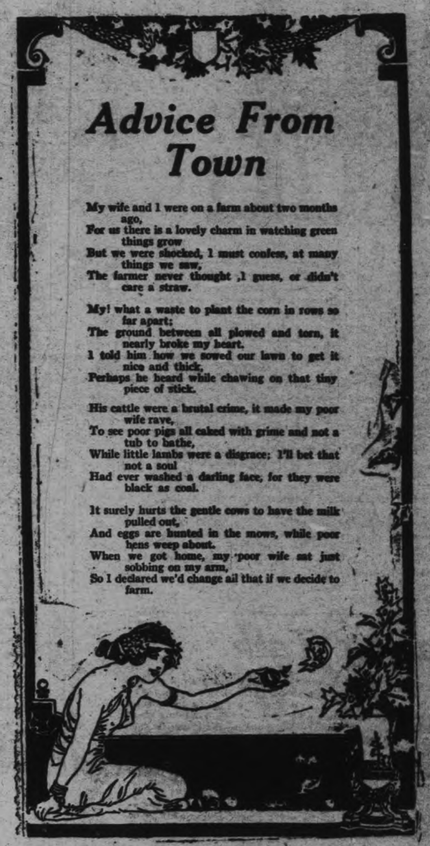
Advice From Town

My wife and I were on a farm about two months ago,
For us there is a lovely charm in watching green things grow
But we were shocked, I must confess, at many things we saw,
The farmer never thought ,I guess, or didn't care a straw.

My! what a waste to plant the corn in rows so far apart;
The ground below all plowed and torn, it nearly broke my heart.
I told him how we sowed our lawn to get it nice and thick,
Perhaps he heard while chawing on that tiny piece of stick.

His cattle were a brutal crime, it made my poor wife rave,
To see poor pigs all caked with grime and not a tub to bathe,
While little lambs were a disgrace; I'll bet that not a soul
Had ever washed a darling face, for they were black as coal.

It surely hurts the gentle cows to have the milk pulled out,
And eggs are hunted in the mows, while poor hens weep about.
When we got home, my poor wife sat just sobbing on my arm,
So I declared we'd change all that if we decide to farm.



With the flight of time, the gathering of the first-fruits has given way to the in-gathering which is in the end of the year in being known as the harvest. Theoretically, it may not be universally agreed, yet the fact remains that the harvest season extends from the former to the latter, since harvest is the sequence of all seed time. The Jewish religion marked the full harvest period with a feast at its beginning and a feast at its end. For to the Jew the command had been given, "Thou shalt keep the feast of harvest, the first-fruits of thy labor which thou hast sown in the field, and the feast of the in-gathering, which is in the end of the year."

The joy of harvest was the paramount national joy of Palestine, other joys being thought of in relation to it. Harvest joy, even in those far off days, was not confined to God-fearing people. For instance, Rome, in her days of paganism, held feasts to Saturn, the god of seed-time and harvest. Well do we still permit the last day of the week to be named Saturday in honor of that mythical deity, for Saturday, night, most charming of nights, sees the enactment of the weekly harvest home.

Looking over the history of Christendom, one cannot discover an unbroken observance of a harvest festival. None in particular appear to have been held within our Empire until those introduced in the west of England, half a century ago by Archdeacon Denison, of East Brent in the county of Somerset. To this noted cleric can credit be given for introducing modern Harvest Home. This event is the combination of a harvest festival at church with the subsequent Harvest Home dinner, sports and dance. Whereas the Harvest Home idea has not been carried far, that of the Harvest festival has spread to practically every part of our Empire.

On this continent of America a further thanksgiving is offered to God on the days Canada and the United States have set apart as their national Thanksgiving days. May that custom abide throughout time, teaching man figuratively that he is one in that great harvest of souls, which sown in weakness shall be raised in power.

Again, brown Autumn has spread her store and this is the strain which lips of thousands will lift as from the heart of one—

"All good gifts around us
Are sent from Heaven above
Then thank the Lord, O thank the Lord
For all His love."

London's longest thoroughfare is Harrow road, more than three miles in length, while the shortest street is Shorter street, only 44 feet long.

Crops Above Average Though Delayed

MILLBROOK, Sept. 25.—While the wet weather has set the farmers back very considerably in this section, generally speaking, crops have been good, in some cases above the average.

Hay was a particularly good crop, and peas have yielded well, but in some instances there are fields of these still uncut, one or two being noted on the Fallis Line, and in such cases there is bound to be some loss. Weather conditions and lack of sufficient help are the causes assigned for the delay in harvesting. The complaint from other counties of shortness of straw in certain fields of oats has not been substantiated here, and this grain, though damaged to some extent by rust, has given an average yield of from 40 to 45 bushels per acre.

A general survey of the county, according to F. C. Paterson, Agricultural Representative, shows that the late grain is badly rusted, the wet weather causing, approximately, twenty per cent loss in crop returns ,this estimate including sprouting, rusting, and extra cost of harvesting.

Fall wheat was patchy but where sawed has yielded from thirty to forty bushels an acre. The usual amount of threshing, for this time in the year, is not done, and the fall wheat seeding has been held back on account of the continued wet weather.

Locally the corn crop is backward; it was late in going in and in some cases is not shot yet; throughout the county it is not considered good, and turnips have been badly damaged by aphids; potatoes yielded well, but local growers think rot threatens; mangels promise well so far.

Live stock generally is in good shape, and one unusual feature in the county this year is that there are from 150 to 200 pure-bred ram lambs, graded by a government official from Ottawa, which are to be offered for sale singly, or in car-lots. The usual market is in Quebec, and some will also be shipped to California, and Iowa.

The abundance of good pasture, as one result of the wet season, has meant good milk production and local dairymen have profited in this respect—W. Fred Fallis and W. E. Belch, who both have pure-bred accredited herds of Holstein cattle, report good returns. Mr. Fallis sells milk from his herd locally, and Mr. Belch ships cream to the Toronto Creamery, which is under U. F. O. auspices, and is the fourth largest creamery in the Dominion.

Mr. Belch favors sweet clover as pasture and has 12 acres of this on his farm, using it other seasons to fill his silo: this year, however, there has been such an abundant hay crop that he has plowed down quite a large field and is putting it in fall wheat. The silo, apparently, will not be required for feeding purposes and it has not been filled. Having his own threshing outfit, and his grain all in, Mr. Belch has practically completed threshing, returns showing a yield from wheat of 20 bushels to the acre; barley 35 bushels; and oats, of which he had 39 acres, 40 to 45 bushels. W. T. Donaldson had approximately 30 bushels to the acre from his wheat. Alfalfa hay gave 2½ to 3 tons an acre, and others report the same yield; alsike has been particularly good. Generally Speaking, however, the old seedings of alfalfa were badly heaved and winter-killed, but the returns from the new seedings have been good—this report applying to the county at large.

On the Fifth Line, Cavan, some threshing has been done and a varying yield is reported: Melville Ball had 30 bushels to the acre from peas, and 15 to 20 bushels from fall wheat; W. Fred Fallis had a return of 40 bushels per acre from barley, 18 to 20 from fall wheat, and 25 bushels from peas; H. Riley had 28 bushels from peas, S. Hunter about 40 bushels, and Arthur Fallis 30 bushels to the acre.

In South Monaghan township peas and oats are reported as the only grains threshed to date. W. W. Brown has a yield of 30 bushels to the acre from oats, rust having affected this grain on his farm, as was also the case in many other instances; Stewart McGill had about 40 bushels to the acre. Mr. Brown has grown alfalfa for the past eighteen years and finds it satisfactory, his crop this year being good.

Locally there is an abundant crop of plums, but the apple crop is far from being equal to that of last year either in quantity, size, or quality. Throughout the county, from Mr. Paterson's observations, there will be about half a crop, and wormy except where orchards have been properly sprayed.

Local beekeepers have not been troubled with the foul brood in their colonies this year, at least to any appreciable extent, but honey is not as plentiful as in a normal season, though Mr. Offa Williamson has a good supply from eleven hives. During the blossom period the weather was so cold the bees were apparently unwilling to leave the hives. The honey is of a good flavor though somewhat darker in color than usual. Most of those who own apiaries were later than usual in extracting because of the rush of other work delayed by the unfavorable weather conditions.

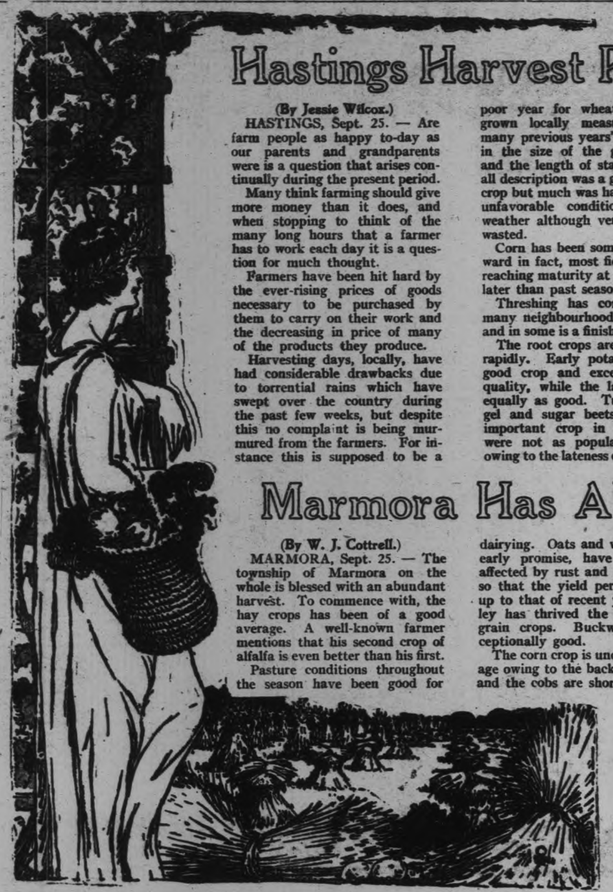
According to the Government report, British Columbia is the only province where the honey yield this season is expected to approach normal.

FIRST THINGS FIRST WHEN PLANNING

These are the first things to be concerned with, inasmuch as it is inside of the house that you will spend most of your future hours. The exterior shape and attractiveness of the home will develop of itself into a pleasing and harmonious design, if you deal competently with the interior room arrangement. The outworn idea of making a home a show place from the outside, with useless gables and ornamentation of all kinds, has been exploded by the more modern trend toward interior convenience. Exterior frills serve no real purpose. They add to building costs, are constantly in need of repair, and serve to collect undue quantities of dirt and refuse.

Modern housekeeping methods have placed a very strong emphasis on the interior arrangement of the home, and has tended toward greater compactness, so that steps may be saved and the housework conducted with a minimum of wasted labor. This tendency, coupled with improved ideas as to ventilation, and more regard for the amount of sunshine which can be counted on from the rising and setting sun, which involves the planning of windows in relation to the direction the house faces; all these things have affected the planning of every room in the modern, efficient, convenient home.

Kitchens are smaller but better furnished with built-in and other devices for saving steps and labor. Bedrooms are smaller than they were, but better ventilated, and usually with more closet space than was the rule even in the old-fashioned rambling houses. Dining-rooms, too, are being reduced in size or eliminated altogether; their place either being taken by breakfast rooms, which are usually sufficient for small families or for homes where there is little entertaining; or else dining facilities are included in the plan of the living-room. The latter is the pivotal point of the entire modern dwelling. Gone are the days when the parlor or drawing-room was practically closed to the household except on Sundays or when company came in. Living-rooms are being expanded to take care of the tendency of the modern family to live in the front of the house, instead of cooping themselves up in the smaller and darker rooms at the back.



Hastings Harvest Prospects Good

(By Jessie Wilcox.)

HASTINGS, Sept. 25. — Are farm people as happy to-day as our parents and grandparents were is a question that arises continually during the present period.

Many think farming should give more money than it does, and when stopping to think of the many long hours that a farmer has to work each day it is a question for much thought.

Farmers have been hit hard by the ever-rising prices of goods necessary to be purchased by them to carry on their work and the decreasing in price of many of the products they produce.

Harvesting days, locally, have had considerable drawbacks due to torrential rains which have swept over the country during the past few weeks, but despite this no complaint is being murmured from the farmers. For instance this is supposed to be a poor year for wheat, but that grown locally measures up to many previous years' yield, both in the size of the grain kernel and the length of stalk. Hay of all description was a good average crop but much was handled under unfavorable conditions of wet weather although very little was wasted.

Corn has been somewhat backward in fact, most fields are now reaching maturity at a time much later than past seasons.

Threshing has commenced in many neighbourhoods in earnest, and in some is a finished art.

The root crops are progressing rapidly. Early potatoes were a good crop and exceedingly fine quality, while the late ones are equally as good. Turnips, mangel and sugar beets usually an important crop in this section were not as popular this year owing to the lateness of the season.

The prospects for orchard fruits seem to be fair at this time. The small fruits, especially the small greengage will be an abundant harvest as also will be some varieties of plums. Apples are slightly scarcer than last year. Yellow transparents were quite plentiful as were all the Duchess. The more hardy varieties for winter-storing look promising as far as judging can be made by viewing the trees.

Vegetable produce has been much the same locally as previous, in fact we might, perhaps, say better if anything, as the warm and hot weather has not prevailed, as during the summer season of 1925. Tomatoes are slowly ripening and some very fine specimens of cabbages are grown by local gardeners for which there is a steady demand.

Marmora Has Abundant Yield

(By W. J. Cottrell.)

MARMORA, Sept. 25. — The township of Marmora on the whole is blessed with an abundant harvest. To commence with, the hay crops has been of a good average. A well-known farmer mentions that his second crop of alfalfa is even better than his first.

Pasture conditions throughout the season have been good for dairying. Oats and wheat giving early promise, have both been affected by rust and heavy rains, so that the yield per acre is not up to that of recent years. Barley has thrived the best of the grain crops. Buckwheat is exceptionally good.

The corn crop is under the average owing to the backward spring and the cobs are short. Turnips are of goodly proportions but for the first time in this locality, the white variety has been slightly affected by grubs as has been the case in the Western provinces.

The swede variety seems to be free of this pest. Potatoes promise to be good. Those dug up to the present have been large in size but not many to the hill. Apples though undersized, are very plentiful. Owing to September rains, threshing has been carried out under difficulties and is therefore slow. There is one settlement in the township at least into which no threshing outfit has yet entered. The real evidence of the harvest will be viewed at the annual Fall Fair, since exhibitors from north, south east and west will, as heretofore, vie with each other in the exhibition of the products of their own particular soil.

HARVEST FAIR AT CAVAN CENTRE

CAVAN, Sept. 25.—The harvest of 1926 has, owing to unfavorable weather conditions, been difficult to harvest, but has yielded fairly satisfactorily.

Owing to the late spring, most many mangels were sown, some preferring to put in turnips. The former are a fine crop, while many report lice on the turnips.

Hay has been the best crop of the season. Alfalfa was badly killed, but what was left yielded well.

Fall wheat was badly winter killed, but as a general thing was not torn up, as owing to the late spring, the majority of farmers were willing to chance it, rather than late spring grain.

Here and there, through Cavan, an odd real good field was seen. Probably it had been sown early in the fall of '25, as the late sown wheat did not make progress enough to stand the unfavorable weather, perhaps one man in a neighborhood had a good crop.

T. Donaldson, Centreville, had an extra good field.

H. Aikin, 6th Concession, Cavan, lot 2, had 500 bushels on thirteen acres.

S. Boyle, 9th Line, lot 7, had wheat which yielded forty bushels to the acre.

Not only was the quantity of some fields of wheat good, but also the quality. B. Sharpe, 11th Line, took first prize at Toronto Exhibition on his wheat, both in the sheaf and the best bushel of grain. He also won prizes at Ottawa.

Peas, as a general thing, are good, but there were not many sown in Cavan Centre. The Stark Brothers, 8th Line, lot 4, have a field not yet threshed, which is expected to yield forty bushels to the acre.

On account of the late spring, the red rust struck the oats. Then the heavy rainstorms, accompanied by wind, put them down, making them difficult to cut. Those that ripened first were fairly good, but the later ones are light.

There were some fields of buckwheat and barley, mixed, sown. This mixture was somewhat of an experiment, but has turned out well.

Messrs. J. Paul and F. McMahon, 8th Line, have good fields.

Alsike is averaging from five to six bushels to the acre.

Those who threshed it early and sold at once received from eight to ten dollars a bushel. Lately it is quoted much higher.

Early potatoes are a good crop; the late ones are not yet harvested.

Very little corn is seen this year.

Help was not very plentiful this season on the farms, and especially since the harvest excursions to the West.

When the threshing machine came into a neighborhood with only one or at most two men on a farm, it caused harvesting operations to cease while the threshings were being attended. Several times the machine just left the neighborhood as a rainy time came on. This caused many to be late in finishing harvesting.

The Way Of a Lover - - A Short Story

"If it was anyone but Washburn?" muttered Bruce Lane, moodily.

"What is the matter with Billy Washburn?" demanded Amy Reed. "He's the dearest old thing, Bruce."

"If you think that way," said Bruce stiffly. "The discussion is ended. I suppose I would detest any man who came between us, Amy."

"It isn't as if we were engaged, you and I," remarked the girl, her head drooping over the knitting in her lap.

Bruce sat up jerkily. "Why—why—er, we are engaged, practically."

"Yes?" she asked gently.

A bell sounded from the house, and then Mrs. Reed's voice came calling down the garden. "Telephone for you, Amy."

Amy excused herself and went lightly along the brick walk to the house while Bruce gritted his teeth and tried not to think it might be Billy Washburn on the line—though he was sure it was that progressive youth who had stepped in the path of Bruce's slow wooing of Amy and seemed to be cutting him out entirely.

"Of course I didn't ask her to marry me but she knows it's the only thing I care about in the world," he muttered to himself. "Of course there's no use in my asking her now with this Billy boy around on the front seat—I'll just go and call on some other girl—there's Bessie Hill, she's a pretty little thing and she's always pleasant to me.' So the shy young farmer got upon his feet and without waiting for Amy's return, took himself off down the village street to the pretty white house where the Hills lived.

Bessie was all alone on the front porch, sitting in the couch hammock, looking very lonesome indeed in the dusk of the summer day. The Tucker girls, vivacious gossips, saw Bruce enter and he felt with some satisfaction that Amy would soon know that he had wearied of her flirtatious ways.

"Why, Bruce," cried Bessie as he came up the steps, "I am so glad to see you—I was hoping—someone would come along." Was there a little catch in her breath?

"Wasn't sure whether you'd be home or not," said Bruce, bringing out the box of candy he had just bought at the drug store.

"Oh, thank you, Bruce—these are my favorite chocolates," said Bessie. "Do have some."

"I never eat candy," said Bruce. "Would you like to go to the movies, Bessie?"

"Thank you, Bruce, but it's rather hot, don't you think? There's a lovely breeze here—how is Amy?" The last remark came out wistfully.

Bruce stiffened. "I believe she's all right."

"I haven't seen much of her lately," said Bessie; "we used to go around a lot together."

"I remember," said Bruce miserably. He wished he could forget all those old happy days before the Washburns had moved into town.

First Billy Washburn had trailed in the wake of pretty, dark-eyed Bessie Hills, and then suddenly there was some other girl, and now it was Amy Reed, his girl, Bruce thought fiercely. Well, he wouldn't embarrass Amy by hanging around the Reed place—he'd forget Amy after a while, he'd just cut her out of his heart! This breaking your heart over a girl—Bah! "Tommy-rot!" he said vigorously.

"Bruce Lane—what do you mean by—saying that about my father?" said Bessie angrily.

"I didn't say anything," he muttered guiltily.

"Why, you did, too! I asked you how you liked father's sermon last Sunday, and you said 'Tommyrot?'"

"See here, Bessie, I never heard a word you said—honestly I didn't, I was too cut up thinking about something that bothers me—and I was talking to myself—why, I didn't go to church last Sunday so how could I judge Mr. Hill's sermon?"

"Well, that's all right then, Bruce" giggled Bessie, 'only it did sound queer.'

"I was just thinking that this breaking your heart over a girl who turns you down is all tommyrot," confessed Bruce.

"Oh, Bruce—I am sorry—I suppose it is Amy and——"

"Yes, that Billy fellow."

"Amy isn't the kind that cuts in," offered Bessie in a broken voice. "She told me she didn't really like him much."

From the open windows of the front room came voices. "Bessie's on the front porch—alone," said Mrs. Hills. "Go right through the house, Amy."

Amy Reed came flying through the front-room and knelt at the open window. "Oh, Bessie, may I bring Billy out to you? He is so sorry, dear—it was all a misunderstanding about the Sunday School picnic—you know he asked you to go and you promised and then didn't, but now you can settle it together! He has been begging me to act as peacemaker, and so I have, but Bessie, dear, in doing so, I am afraid I have lost my chance of happiness with Bruce!"

"I'm right here, Amy, ready to see you home," said Bruce, and as he passed Billy Washburn in the doorway, the latter going out to make his peace with Bessie Hills, the two young men gripped hands.

"Queer way to find out where we belong," said Billy solemnly.

"Amen," said Bruce.

Harvest Celebrations - By C. J. Beauclerc

"Come ye thankful people, come,
Raise the song of harvest home!
All is safely gathered in,
Ere the winter storms begin:
God, our Maker, doth provide
For our wants to be supplied:
Come to God's own temple, come,
Raise the song of harvest home!"

Mankind, from the most primitive times, has ascribed the blessing of harvest to some supernatural being, and rites and ceremonies have always accompanied the gathering of the fruits of the fields and orchards. The cruel human sacrifices with which the Aztecs offered the first fruits to their gods, and the Greek legend of Demeter (Barley-mother) and Persophene, are ancient evidences, and to this day the British government finds it hard to prevent the Ghonds of North India from offering up any stranger they catch as a sacrifice at harvest time.

Not always have the observations been really thanksgivings. In Devonshire there was a custom, until self-binders replaced sickle and cradle, which had come down from the heathen English and Celtic races, who deemed it necessary to slay the corn spirit before using any of the grain. In consequence, even after they had been Christianized, in fact, within the memory of man, the last bunch of grain was considered the neck of the corn spirit, and it was cut by the reapers throwing their sickles at it from a distance. When it was severed it was lifted up, amidst cries of "The Neck," and one of the men was given the duty of getting it into the owner's house without being doused with water by the housewife and her maids. When this had been accomplished a feast and games followed.

In other parts the first sheaf cut was kept until the work was finished and then thrown into the field of a neighbor not so far advanced. He in turn passed it on until the most tardy man in the district received it. Every effort was made to avoid this fate, it being considered that it meant having to provide for an old woman, the corn mother, until the next harvest.

The last sheaf was the subject of honor in many parts of Europe. Wreathed with flowers, it would be taken to church and blessed. The best ears were kept until Easter, when they were broken up by a little girl and scattered on the fields. The rest of the sheaf was fed to the animals at Christmas. Sometimes a dance was held, with the sheaf in the middle of the floor, while he who cut it had the honor of picking the prettiest girl for his partner.

At other places the man who cut it was wrapped up in it and threshed, a survival of the ancient custom of Asia Minor, where a stranger passing the harvest field was bound in a sheaf and beheaded, as the personification of the harvest spirit.

In one part of Eastern Europe the farmer mixes portions of every grain that he grows. With some of it his wife makes bread, while the rest is brewed into beer. After offering a prayer, two fowl, a rooster and a hen, are killed by blows, dressed and cooked, and the family feasts on the first fruits of its fields. This observance is always done in private, rather than with the dancing and public feasting, or the public service in the church which characterizes the celebration in Germany or France.

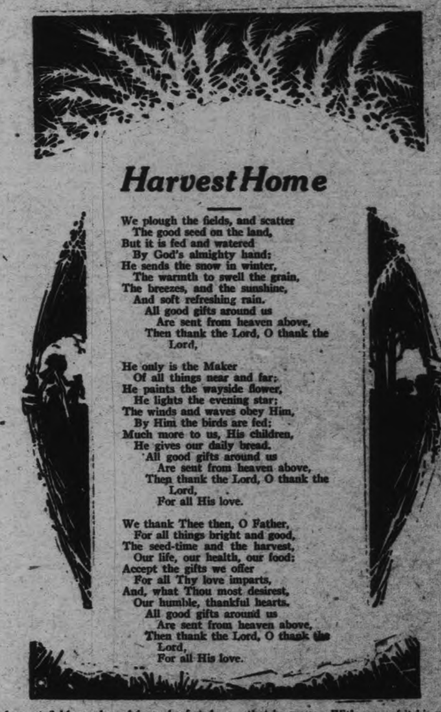
These customs are not alone the heritage of the Aryan races. In the Philippine and other East India Islands the rice harvest is observed by similar ceremonies. The rice-mother is considered as being embodied in the last sheaf cut, which is handled with peculiar ceremonies.

"When ye be come into the land which I give unto you, and shall reap the harvest thereof, then ye shall bring a sheaf of the first fruits of your harvest unto the priest. And ye shall eat neither bread, nor parched corn, nor green ears until the self-same day that, ye have brought an offering unto your God." Thus were the Jews, during their wanderings in the wilderness, commanded to show their thanksgiving to God for the harvest when they reached the promised land. The offering of the first fruits had to be accompanied by a lamb, some flour, some oil, and some wine. Fifty days after the Feast of the Firstfruits two loaves, with seven lambs, a bullock, and two rams were to be brought as a burnt offering. A sin offering and a peace offering had also to be made.

A law of charity was incorporated in the Jewish observance, for in the same ordinance it was commanded that the reaper should not be particular about going into the fence corners, but should leave grain there for the poor.

In Canada and in the United States there is a day set apart by the Government for Thanksgiving. Formerly it was observed in Canada in October, when the work of the harvest was over, but since the war the date has been changed so that the anniversary of the end of the war might be recalled, as a further reason for returning thanks.

The churches all render thanks to God for his goodness, either at the regular service or at a special one. In the Church of England liturgy there are provided special prayers, and lessons for the service, with collect, epistle and gospel suitable for a service of Holy Communion as an act of thanksgiving. Every hymnbook contains hymns for harvest, and Christians follow the example of the Psalmist, who sang, three thousand years ago: "Praise waiteth for thee, O God, in Zion: Thou visitest the earth and waterest it; thou preparest them corn, when thou hast so provided for it. The pastures are clothed with flocks the valleys also are covered over with corn; they shout for joy they also sing."



Uncle Wiggley And The Stickery Ball

(Copyright, McClure Syndicate.)

Hopping one day past the pond where Toodle and Noodle Flat Tail, the beaver boys lived, Uncle Wiggily heard, coming from one of the round houses, built of mud and sticks, a voice saying:

"Never mind, my dear; Perhaps Santa Claus will bring you one for Christmas. Never mind!"

"But, mother," spoke another voice, and one that Mr. Longears well knew, "it is such a long time until Christmas! Such a very long time! And I want it now!"

"Christmas will be here in about three months," went on the first voice, "and it will not seem very long when the snow begins to fall and the ice freezes our pond so you can skate."

"I don't feel much like skating now, Mother," was what Uncle Wiggily heard next. "And I do want a squirter!"

"But, my dear Toodle, I can't leave now to go out to get you one. You aren't well enough. Please be patient!" and with that Mrs. Flat Tail, the lady beaver, swam up out of her house, for beavers build the front doors of their houses beneath the water. This keeps enemies, or bad chaps, away, unless they can swim beneath the pond.

"What is the matter, Mrs. Flat Tail?" asked Uncle Wiggily, as the beaver lady swam over to the shore where the rabbit gentleman was sitting on his short, little tail.

"How did you know anything was the matter," asked Mrs. Flat Tail.

"Excuse me, lady," said Uncle Wiggily with a smile and a twinkle of his pink nose, "but I could not help hearing the talk that came out of the roof of your house," for the beavers' house had rather a large hole in the roof for air. When winter came this hole would be plastered shut with mud, or made much smaller. "What is it that Toodle wants," asked the rabbit.

"He wants a hollow rubber ball that he can fill with water and squirt," was the answer. "Toodle has been ill and he is a bit peevish and fretful. He has been teasing for a rubber ball, but I have no time to get him one, and his father has taken Noodle down to the six and seven cent store to get a new pair of rubber boots."

"Then I'll go get Toodle his rubber ball squirter," said Uncle Wiggily, and away he hopped through the woods until he reached the toy store where he bought a fine rubber ball for the little beaver boy.

On his way back to the mud and stick house Uncle Wiggily hopped through a grove of chestnut trees, and on the ground he saw a green stickery ball, about the size of the rubber squirter he had for Toodle. This stickery ball was really a prickly burr, inside of which were three brown chestnuts. The stickery ball had fallen off the tree and still had on it the long stem for a handle.

"I'll pick up that ball by the stem so it won't stick me," said Uncle Wiggily to himself, "and carry it to Toodle. I'll play a joke on him, making him think I brought him this instead of the rubber ball, which I'll hide in my pocket."

As Uncle Wiggily picked up the prickly ball, or chestnut burr, he heard a rustling in the bushes behind him and a savage voice cried:

"Here! Give me that! How dare you pick up anything in my woods!" And there stood the unpleasant Bob Cat. "Give me what you picked up!" snarled the bad chap.

"All right! Have it! Here it is!" cried Uncle Wiggily, and, holding the stickery ball by the stem, the rabbit whirled it around in the air and suddenly let it fly straight at the Bob Cat.

"Well, you asked for it and you got it!" chuckled Uncle Wiggily, and then not bothering to play the stickery ball joke on the beaver boy, the bunny hopped away, leaving the Bob Cat to pull the stickers from the burr out of his nose. And when Toodle got his rubber ball squirter he had a lot of fun with it, and was soon all well.

So this teaches us that it isn't always wise to get what we ask for. And if the hands of the clock don't tie the Jumping Jack's shoe lace in a hard knot, I'll tell you next about Uncle Wiggily's vine ladder.

RAISING GOOD STUFF ON THE FARM

I have a dozen neighbours who are very well-to-do,
Who could quit their daily labours with enough to put them through,
There is Hiram Stiggumblossom and there's Larry Muckleboue,
There is Jasper Johnnie Jossom and there's Timothy Malone;
And, indeed, there are some others who have built up good estates
While a torrent of their brothers have been swatted by the Fates.

In sizing up these jiggers, which I did the other day,
I realized the figures they employ to garner pay,
And I think I have discovered as I fancied that I would
How the profits were uncovered, that have put them in the good.
Each decided when beginning on his little lot of land,
That his goods to make a winning must be keenly in demand.

So each has aimed at raising stuff of quality that counts
And not in paraphrasing on luck, quantity, amounts.
'Tisn't quantity they're after but the goods that bring the price,
Be it timber for a rafter, be it guinea pigs or rice,
'Tis those extra dimes and nickels they secure for things they sell,
For their barley and their pickles, for their buckwheat and their jell.

That makes up the pile of money they have saved and stored away
To buy their bread and honey when their hair is turning gray.

The Letter of the Contract - By Basil King

Chapter XXV.
Wings, if Not Bridges.

Were Edith to confess to him that she hated the man toward whom she was traveling, Chip would experience an unholy satisfaction.

But now he could find no simpler relief to his feelings than to take down her belongings from the overhead racks.

"I'll just run along and pick up my own traps," he exclaimed, "and come back to see you properly looked after."

Though she assured him of her ability to look after herself, he felt at liberty to ridicule her pretensions. "You must have changed a great deal if you can do that," he declared.

"Oh, I am changed. I'm another woman." She took advantage of the fact that his back was turned to her, as he disentangled the handles of parasols and umbrellas from the network above, to say further: "Perhaps—since we've met in this unexpected way—and talked—possibly a little too frankly—it may be well if I remind you that you'd still be confronted with that fact—that I'm another woman—even if our bridges weren't burned behind us." He decided to let that pass without discussion, and because he said nothing she added: "And I dare say I should find you another man. So don't let us be too sorry, Chip, or think that if we hadn't done what we have done."

He could hear a catch in her voice that almost amounted to a sob.

"Oh, Chip, go away! I can't stand any more—now."

He spread his advantage, standing over her as she cowered in the corner pulling dwon her veil. "'Now!' 'Now!' Do you mean that you'll see me—later—when we're in London?"

She pressed her clasped hands against her lips as if to keep back all words.

"Do you mean that, Edith?" he insisted.

Her breath came in little sobs. She spoke as if the words forced themselves out in spite of her efforts to repress them: "I'm—I'm staying at the Ritz. I shall be there for—some days—till—till—he sends for me."

"Good. I'm at the Piccadilly. I shall come to-morrow at eleven, and if it's fine we might run down and spend the day at Maidenhead."

She caught at a straw. If she couldn't shelve him, a day in the country, in the open air, would be less dangerous than one in London. And perhaps in the end she might shelve him. At any rate, she could temporize. "I've never been at Maidenhead."

"And lunch at Skindle's isn't at all bad."

"I've never been at Skindle's."

"And after lunch we'll go out on the river—the Clievedon woods, you know—and all that."

But she stretched her hands toward him. "Oh, Chip, don't come! I'm afraid. What's the good? Since we've burned our bridges—"

He had just time to say: "Even without bridges, there are wings. At eleven, then!"

Chapter XXVI.
Some Afternoons.

He went to Berne because she had let slip the name of that place during the afternoon at Maidenhead. It was the only hint of the kind she threw out during the afternoon—four in all—they passed together. "He may have to go to Berne," she had said.

He was between them as an awesome presence, never mentioned otherwise than allusively. His name was too sinister to speak. It was enough to know that he was there, a fearful authority in the background, able to summon her from this brief renewal of old happiness, as Pluto could recall Eurydice.

It was the supremacy of this power, which they themselves had placed in his hands, drove Chip Walker to wondering what he was like.

"What is he like?" he found the force to ask.

She looked distressed. "He's a good man."

He nerved himself to come to a point at which he had long been aiming. "Look here, Edith! Why did you marry him?"

"Do you mean, why did I marry him in particular, or why did I marry any one?"

"I mean both."

"Oh, I don't know. There—there seemed to be reasons."

"What sort of reasons?" he urged.

"Oh, I don't know," she said again, pensively. "It isn't so easy for a woman to be—to be drifting about—especially with two children."

"But why should you have drifted about, when you knew that at a sign from you—?"

"If I had gone back to you I should have been sorry."

"You would have considered it a weakness—a surrender—"

She nodded. "Something like that."

"And you really had stopped—caring anything about me?"

"It wasn't that so much as—so much as that I couldn't get over my resentment." She seemed to have found the explanatory word. "Whatever compromise I thought of, that resentment against you for—for doing what you did—blocked the way. If I'd gone back I should have taken it with me."

"But you don't suffer from it now!"

"No; after I married—it left me. It was as if old scores were wiped out."

"You'd not even!"

Her voice became appealing. "Oh, what's the good of talking of it now?" "Because you haven't told me what I asked—why you married."

She turned the query against himself: "Why did you?"

"I didn't till after you did. I wouldn't have done it then if—if I hadn't been so—well to put it plainly so damned lonely."

She gave him a smile that stabbed him. "Well, then? Doesn't that answer your question?"

He thought it did, and for a while they listened to the blackbird's song in silence. It was their last talk. Next morning she left for Paris.

And so he went to Berne. He hadn't meant to go there when he said good-bye to her. He had not precisely made up his mind that they were parting for good, but he was too stunned to forecast the future. He was stunned and sickened. If it hadn't been for the bit of business that had brought him to London he would hardly have had courage enough to get through the days.

But, the business coming to an end, he was stranded. There was nothing to do but go back to his wife and child whose existence he never remembered except with a pang of self-reproach. He meant to go back to them—but not yet. It was too soon. Edith was too much with him. The fact that her physica presence was withdrawn made her spiritually the more pervasive. The afterglow of their days together couldn't fade otherwise than slowly, like light when the sun goes down.

Chapter XXVII.
The Stranger.

At Berne, Chip's hotel was sheltering an international conference on modifications in the rules of the Postal Union. He came to observe a delegate of some distinction who ate alone and kept to himself. He was a man who would have been noticed anywhere, if it were for no more than the dignified gravity of his manner and the correctness of his dress. One could affirm from observation was that he was Somebody—Somebody of position, experience, and judgment—Somebody to respect.

That, perhaps, was the secret of Walker's curiosity—that he respected him. He would have liked to talk to him—not precisely to ask his advice, but to lay before him some of the difficulties that were inchoate in his soul.

Glancing casually over his left shoulder as he walked on the hotel terrace one afternoon became aware that among people at the edge of the terrace the stranger was standing. It was an opportunity not to be missed.

"Ca, c'est merveilleux, n'est-ce pas, monsieur?"

The words were banal, but they would serve to break the ice.

"Yes; and I've never seen the view more beautiful than to-day; but perhaps that's because I've seen it so many times."

Chip was disappointed to be answered in English, and especially in the English of an American. It brought the man too near for confidence. They might easily find themselves involved in a host of common acquaintances.

But something in the composure way of speaking imposed this new acquaintance on him as a superior. Instinctively he said "sir" to him. Within a few minutes they found themselves seated on one of the benches. The talk was of the conference.

"It's an attractive little town," said the stranger. "But I wonder what a man like you can see in it—to remain here so long?"

Chip was startled, but the managed to say: "It isn't that I see anything in particular. I'm—"

"Waiting?"

"No; resting." Chip answered.

"Ah, it's certainly a good place for resting." Then, after a pause: "You're married?"

"I've a wife and little boy in New York."

"Ah!" There was no emphasis on this exclamation. "A happy marriage must be a great—safeguard."

"Safeguard against what, sir?"

There was a faint laugh. "Against everything from which a married man needs protection—pursuing another man's wife, for instance. A man who's happily married doesn't do that."

There was no aggression in the tone, and yet Chip felt a curious chill. Who was this man, and what the devil was he driving at? "Are there any happy marriages?—permanently happy, this is?" asked Walker.

"I don't know, because I'm not happily married," the stranger replied. "I married a lady who had divorced her husband. In divorce, there are some dangerous risks. It's a dangerous risk for a man to divorce his wife. It's a more dangerous risk for a woman to divorce her husband. But to marry a divorced husband or a divorced wife is the most dangerous risk of all."

Chip's voice was thick and dry. "May I ask, sir, on what you base your—your opinion?"

"Chiefly on the principle that, no matter how successfully the dead are buried, they may come back as ghosts."

Chapter XXVIII.
"The Lady Is Ill."

It was a minute or more before Chip was able to say, in a voice he tried to keep firm: "If they have come back, you're not more haunted by them than—than any one else."

"S I understand."

The brief responses had the effect of dragging Walker forward. "And would it be fair to ask why you say that?—that you understand?"

"Oh, quite fair. It's partly because you are here."

"Then you think I ought to go away?"

"I think—since you ask me—that you oughtn't to have come."

"I came—to rest."

"I don't question that. I'm only struck by—by the long arm of coincidence."

"That is, you believe I had another motive?"

With a gesture he seemed to wave this aside. "That's hardly my affair. You're here; and, since you are, I'd rather—"

"Yes?"

"I'd rather you didn't hurry away.'

Questions rose to Chip's lips and died there. Was Edith in Berne? Had she seen him? Was she keeping out of his way? Was she being kept out of his way? Was she suffering. Was it through her that he had been recognized

The fact that he had been recognized brought with it a kind of humiliation. The reference to the long arm of coincidence was stinging. Because it was so he tried to muster his dignity.

"I've no intention of hurrying away," he began; "but—"

"If you like, I'll put it this way," the measured voice broke in, courteously. "If you have time to wait a little longer I should be glad if you'd do it."

"Would there be any point to that?"

"I think you might trust me not to make the request if there were not." He added presently: "It's a wise policy to let sleeping dogs lie; but when they've once been roused, they've got to be quieted."

"Quited—how?"

"I can't tell you that as yet. I may have some vague idea concerning the process; I've none at all as to the result."

Chip was not sure that the stranger said good night. He knew he moved away. He watched him as, with stately, unhastening step, he walked down the promenade, the Inverness cape and soft felt hat silhouetted in the moonlight.

For the next forty-eight hours Walker hung about the hotel like a culprit. He would have sacrificed even a glimpse of Edith to feel free to go away.

He couldn't go away while the other man's plans remained enigmatical; but he wished he hadn't come. He felt his position undignified, grotesque, like that of a boy detected in some bit of silly daring.

Two days later they met again on the terrace of the Kleine Schanze. It was not an accidental meeting. The stranger had walked directly up to Chip to say: "The lady to whom we were referring the other night—"

But Chip was still on his guard. "Did I refer to a lady?"

"Perhaps not. But I did. And that lady is ill. You may be interested to know it. She was ill when she arrived in Paris from London ten days ago."

"Then she's here."

"She's here. That's why I'm taking your time in asking you to remain."

Chip forced the next question with some difficulty: "Does she—does she want to—to see me?"

"She hasn't said so."

"Has she—said anything about me at all?"

"That, I think, I must leave you to learn later. But I should like you to know at once that I'm not keeping you here without a motive."

The stately figure moved on, leaving Chip to guess blindly at the possibilities in store.

Chapter XXIX.
"Except the Paris Stroke."

More days passed—nearly a week. Berne would have begun to bore Chip, had it not been for the knowledge that he was under the same roof with Edith.

That gave him patience. It was the kind to comfort a man or a woman finds in locked near the prison where some loved one is shut up in a cell.

Then one afternoon Chip's eye caught at the other end of the terrace the figures of a man and a woman almost in profile toward him—the man's erect, stately form allowing the fact that a woman was clinging to his arm to be just perceptible.

It required no such movement as that of a few minutes later—a movement by which the woman came more fully into view—for Chip to recognize Edith.

His Edith, his wife, clinging to another man's arm, clinging to her husband's arm, clinging to the arm of a husband who was not himself, dependent on him, supported by him, possessed by him, coming and going with him, living and eating with him, bearing him children, sharing with him whatever was most intimate, directed by him and dominated by him!—yet, all the while, in everything that could make two beings one except that stroke of the pen called law, his wife!

His first impulse was to get out of their sight, to hide, to find some place where he could grasp the appalling fact in silence and seclusion.

Second thoughts reminded him that there was a situation to be faced and that he might as well face it now as an any other time. What sort of situation it would be he couldn't guess; but he was sure that behind the immobile mask of the other man's grave face there was something that would be worth the penetration. He would give him a chance. He would slip into the little rotunda close beside him. In sitting down he placed himself as nearly as possible in full view, but with his face toward the mountains. It gave him a preoccupied air to be seen relighting his cigar.

It was thus optional with the couple who began to advance along the promenade to pass him by or to pause and address him.

Nothing but a shadow warned him of their approach.

"Chip—"

Chapter XXX.
Four or Two?

He turned. Edith was standing in the doorway, the man behind her. The haggard pallor of her face and the feverishness of her eyes reminded Chip of the morning little Tom was born.

He was on his feet—silent. He couldn't even breathe her name. It was the less necessary since she herself hastened to speak:

"Chip, Mr. Lacon knows we met in England. I told him as soon as I reached Paris. I didn't want him not to know. And now he wants us all to meet—I don't know why."

Since he had to say something, he uttered the first words that came to him. "Was there any harm in it—our meeting? Mr. Lacon knows we have children—and things to talk over."

"Oh, it isn't only that," she said, excitedly. "It's more. I don't know what—but I know it's more!"

He looked puzzled. "More in what way?"

"More in this way," said the measured voice, that had lost no shade of its self-control. "I understand that Edith feels she has made a mistake—that you've both made a mistake—"

"I never said so," she interrupted, hurriedly.

Lacon smiled, as nearly as his saddened face could smile. "I didn't say you said so," he corrected, gently. "I said I understood. There's a difference. And since I do understand, I feel it right to offer you—to offer you both—"

Exhaustion compelled her to drop into a seat. "What are you going to say?"

"Nothing that can hurt you, I hope —or—or Mr. Walker, either. Suppose we all sit down?"

He followed his own suggestion with a dignity almost serene. Chip took mechanically the seat from which he had just risen.

"The point for our consideration is thus," Lacon resumed calmly. "Admitting that you've both made a mistake, is there any possibility of retracing your steps?—or must you go on paying the penalty?"

Chip spoke without turning his eyes from the mountains: "What do you mean by the penalty?"

"I suppose I mean the necessity of making four people unhappy instead of two."

"That is," Chip went on, "there are two who must be unhappy in any case."

"Precisely. There are two for whom there's no escape. Whatever happens now, nothing can save them. But, since that is so, the question arises whether it wouldn't be, let us say, a ground for some of human material if the other two—"

Edith looked mystified. "I don't know what you mean. Which are the two who must be unhappy in any case?"

Chip answered quietly, without turning his head: "He's one; my—my wife is the other."

"Oh!" With something between a sigh and a gasp she fell back against a pillar of the rotunda.

"It's the sort of 'economy of human material,'" Chip went on, "that a man achieves in saving himself from a sinking ship and leaving his wife and children to drown—assuming that he can't rescue them."

"The comparision isn't quite exact," Lacon replied, courteously. "Wouldn't it rather be that if a man can save only one of two women, he nevertheless does what he can?"

MADAME NOUS VOUS REMERCION BEAUCOUP

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Monsieur—Vous avez, à plusieurs occasions, exprimé votre admiration pour la langue française et votre grand désir de voir se répandre parmi nos amis d'Ontario le goût de l'étude de cette belle langue.

Je vous remercie pour cette sympathique expression publicé dans votre journal.

Il a été très agréable pour moi, Française du Canada, de constater la justesse de vos opinions sur les Canadiens-Français.

Avec vous je déplore que les Canadiens-Anglais ne cherchent pas plus à connaître les deux langues officielles du pays. Ils se privent d'une culture très agréable et bien avantageuse.

Pour quoi les esprits larges comme le vôtre ne sont-ils pas plus nombreux dans cette magnifique province d'Ontario? C'est dommage!

Monsieur Meighen parle français. Alors, vive Mr. Meighen!! N'est-ce pas?

J'aurais beaucoup aimé entendre son discours politique en français dans Québec. Il a dû être chaleureusement applaudi—

Je félicite hautement Mr. Meighen et je vous remercie Mr. l'Editeur pour votre très louable effort à vouloir développer, chez nos compatriotes de langue Anglaise, un tout petit amour pour l'incomparable langue française.

Sincères remerciements,
—Albertine Paquin-Goulet.

- EARLY CAVAN DAYS RECALLED -

The present season, with cool and wet weather predominating, caused Mr. George Berry, who reached his eighty-fourth birthday on the 15th of August this year, and who has lived practically all his life in Millbrook and Cavan, to recall meeting the author of the book, "Early Settlers in Canada," to whom he had related many interesting personal reminiscences which Mr. Archer included in his story.

This volume records the actual fact that in the year 1816 there was no summer in Canada, and consequently no crop: the settlers would follow the cattle into the woods, watch what plants were cropped to discover which were non-poisonous, gather these and cook them to avert starvation. Snow fell in June and July of that year.

Enjoying good health, with hearing and eyesight far from being seriously impaired, Mr. Berry this fall, and by his own desire, drove the reaper cutting the entire acreage of alsike on his farm, and also cut several times around the field when the peas were ready for harvesting.

Born in Millbrook, Mr. Berry's parents moved to the Fourth Line, Cavan, when he was only four years old, and on the family homestead about one mile west of Centreville Mr. Berry has since settled when he was married, raised his family, and has lived there ever since.

Eighty years in one locality means an experience of many changes, and Mr. Berry recalls using a cradle before the advent of the binder, and being known as a "good cradler" would be employed, during his young manhood years, for six weeks at harvest time cradling grain on the home farm, and giving assistance to many of the neighboring farmers as well.

"The two sticks of misery" was the name by which the young men of his day spoke of the flail in common use before the modern threshing outfit; indeed Mr. Berry recalls the first threshing machine, a one-cylinder affair, far from being as efficient as the one in use in the present day.

Personal acquaintance with the "Cavan Blazers" led to the recalling of many kind deeds done, usually under cover of darkness, in cases of sickness and need, by these young men of the township's early days, and also of the many pranks perpetrated. One of the latter concerned a very talkative woman much disliked by the Blazers because of her too ready tongue, whose flock of turkeys, and particularly a big gobbler weighing about forty pounds, was the object of their covetous desire.

One evening when the owner and his wife were safely within doors, and the gobbler roosting, as was its custom, above the stoop before the door, the plot for its theft was laid. One particularly tall Blazer stealthily approached the house, and securely grabbed Mr. Gobbler whose flapping of strong wings, and vocal protests, brought the elderly couple to the door.

"You needn't mind, I've got him," was the marauder's parting word as he disappeared in the darkness. Thoroughly berating the Blazers for their lawless ways, and with voluble urgings stirring her husband to action, the wife started the latter in pursuit. By design two men met him when some distance on the road, learned his errand, and suggesting a comforting drink or two out of the bottle of liquor so readily procurable in that day, succeeded in effectually softening the influence the trio finally started for the woods where a "roast" was in progress. Praising the appetising slices of turkey served him, the man found the joke turned against himself when the one handing out the fowl said: "It ought to be good—it's your own gobbler."

Plenty of drink circulating finally dulled any desire for reprisal, and the owner of the stolen bird was at last left on the floor within the door of his own dwelling while the reckless Blazers, anxious to pay back to his wife some of her sharp-tongued taunts, called out. "There he is; take care of him." What the husband suffered later from the tongue lashings of his indignant spouse was surmised in the neighborhood but was never generally known.

The First Oil Lamp.

Taking wheat to Port Hope for sale on one occasion Mr. Berry was shown the first coal-oil lamp to be offered for sale in the store where supplies were being purchased. "I bought the whole shoot," he relates, referring to the lamp, and a can containing one gallon of oil. $1.50 being paid in each case. It is still a matter of amusement to recall that when filling the lamp, and lighting it for trial purposes, the next day at noon, the whole family fled to the yard choosing "safety first," because "they weren't going to be blown to pieces by that invention."

Speaking of early methods of harvesting brought to mind the binding of sheaves by hand, and Mr. Berry has pride in recalling keeping up with four men with reaping-hooks, tieing the grain after them for a whole day.

"In those days we had big families and more help, and though hand-labor had not been replaced by machinery, the work was done and we did not lack for our good times too."

Seeing his mother make candles in large numbers, and supplying the household with garments, etc., the process beginning with the wool taken from the sheep's backs, is a memory readily and clearly recalled.

During the Russian War Mr. Berry sold wheat at $2.50 a bushel, and a slump in the other direction is still spoken of with asperity following the coming to the Premiership of Sir John Macdonald in 1878, and the introduction of the National Policy, with the slogan, "no truck nor trade with the Yankees."

"I have many a time driven to Port Hope with a load of grain, dumped it on a boat there for shipment to the States, and got a good price for it. But after the N. P. that source of income was stopped and I sold wheat for 50 cents a bushel, oats for 20 cents and dressed dogs, the meat of the best quality, for $2.50 a hundredweight. I attended a sale in Millbrook of fine milch cows, and the highest price paid was $15.00 and the lowest $12.00. It did not make me any less loyal to Canada because I sold horses, and grain, in the States at good prices, but my financial concern was at the time very seriously increased when I could no longer get the higher price, and obligations which had to be met were heavy."

That Canada is in for a period of prosperity now the Liberal governments has been returned to power Mr. Berry is firmly convinced for, with many others of like mind, he believes that while the tariff affects one way or another the business and industrial concerns, the price the farmer receives for his surplus stock is set by the world market.

In speaking of grain prices it is interesting to note that Robert McCamus a pioneer settler of Cavan in 1820, whose descendants are on the original homestead in this township to-day, related as a fact that farmers taking wheat to Smith's Creek (Port Hope) in the year 1820 were told it could not be exchanged for tea and other groceries, but cash must be paid for these commodities, the grain in question being a drug on the market at 25 cents a bushel.

A comfortable home has long since replaced the original log house on the Berry homestead, and Mr. George Berry, Junior, relieves his father of all the active duties of the farm unless, of his own accord, the latter expresses a desire to assist to a limited extent during the busy season.

Harvest Varies

NORHAM, Sept. 25.—Two months previous to when spring would naturally be expected indications were for an early seed time. A month later the public mind had entirely changed as weather almost as intense as mid-winter prevailed. When the hour arrived and farmers began activities, it was considered to be about three weeks later than usual, which was regarded as an indication of a poor year. The seed on the most part went into the ground under favorable circumstances other than that the atmosphere continued cold and backward.

The fall wheat did not winter very well and the yield has been much smaller than a year ago. The oat crop, on the contrary, came through the winter all right and gave a yield equal to other years and in many cases beyond the ordinary. Red clover and timothy also saved good, and although the growth at first was quite slow and many were fearful, when cutting time came the crop was well up to the average. The price offered for the alsike has been fair and the red clover appears as after a time of uniformity, games, dancing, lunch, etc., our merry friends wend their way homeward by the light of the moon and to the tune of the crickets.

THE HUSKING BEE

The Husking Bee, which in our grandmother's day, was a common occurrence, is now almost out of existence but, in short, this is the story:—

When the last rays of the setting sun are fading from the Western sky, the first neighbors begin to gather in and assist in building a huge bon-fire around which tubs of corn are placed at intervals.

By the time the moon has gilded the landscape the husking is in full swing, and above all can be heard the merry laughing and talking of the huskers. Now and again, an old-time song such as, "In the evening by the moonlight," is sung in unison. Perfect happiness reigns over the scene of beauty with the firelight flickering over their faces and the moon standing sentinel over all.

Finally, the corn is husked and after a time of amusement, games, dancing, lunch, etc., our merry friends wend their way homeward by the light of the moon and to the tune of the crickets.

potatoes are small and not many in a hill.

Tomatoes and garden stuff are about the average of other years.

The grass growth has been above the ordinary. There has been no complaint about burnt pastures throughout the whole summer; consequently the supply of milk has been greater than usual. The price of cheese has been about three cents a pound lower than a year ago, excepting at the beginning of the season. The price last year averaged around 20 cents a pound, while this year the average has been about 17 cents.

There has not been much change in the price of stock from last year, with the exception that hogs have sold at a slightly higher price. On the whole, this season seems to have been about as profitable for the farmer as was last year.

In the production of zinc for the year 1925 as reported by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, Canada established a new high record with a total of 109,268,511 pounds (56,634 tons), valued at $8,328,446. Compared with the 1924 output of 98,009,077 pounds (49,455 tons) valued at $6,274,791 the increase amounted to 10. per cent in quantity and 32.7 per cent in value.

In Jasper National park, Alberta, there are about 640 miles of standard trails by which tourists may visit the outlying scenic attractions.

The Spirit That Counts.

BURNBRAE, Sept. 25.—The rush of harvesting in every community is the testing time of one's true neighbors. Then is the time that the farmer, who, through some ill-luck has got behind with his work, can appreciate the value of a real friend who will sacrifice even the welfare of his own property to come to the assistance of the one in need. Burnbrae district is fortunate to have that class of farmers who are always willing to lend a helping hand to a neighbour and a splendid example of this took place on Tuesday, September 14. Mr. Robert Miller, who operates a large farm on the town Line east of Burnbrae, had most of his grain in the field due to the fact that his son and only grown-up helper had suffered an operation for appendicitis. After polling their vote as to who should govern the land, neighbors gathered to help Mr. Miller finish harvest. With seven men and three wagons equipped with modern slings, the job of finishing harvest was a matter of hours rather than days and Mr. Miller was able to get his grain all safely into the barn before Wednesday's deluge of rain. This is the spirit that counts in all walks of life.

Threshing Bees

The old-time custom of farmers holding threshing bees to get their threshing completed, is still the most popular method. For years past it has been the custom for a farmer to change hands with seven or eight of his neighbors to get his threshing done, and thus save the expense and trouble of going about and hiring men.

During the past few years a number of the farmers of this community have purchased threshing outfits of their own, and instead of exchanging help with their neighbors to do their threshing, they hire help and spend the time at home that others spend in paying back their neighbors.

This custom, however, seems to be becoming less popular every year, and one farmer who has tried this experiment made the statement that on account of help being so scarce it was almost as good as impossible to secured hired help at the time when he was ready to thresh his grain, and on this account he claimed this custom to be a failure.

The old way is the ideal way when a farmer is ready to thresh all he has to do is to notify his neighbors, and they are always Johnny on the job. There is no worry of where to get help, and besides it is a time of year that as enjoyed by the farmers, as the neighbors all get together and talk over the crop situation, election problems, etc., and the time spent together with neighbors goes quickly when engaged iff friendly conversation, and good fellowship.

Yield Is Good

BURNBRAE, Sept. 25. — Burnbrae farmers are again head over heels into the annual fall rush of threshing, corn-cutting and plowing. The finish of the grain harvest has been delayed on account of the frequent heavy rains and although the majority of farmers have completed this job, a few still have oats in the stook. A number of these due to shortage of help were intending to stook-thresh and have become the unwilling victims of the weather man's pranks.

Where harvest has been finished and threshing is under way, the yields of grain are encouraging. Wheat, generally, has been of exceptional quality, and while the oats in some cases are light, due to exceptionally long straw and consequent lodging, yet the yield of bushels per acre is quite satisfactory and is considerably above the average.

The corn crop is again one of the bright spots in the local farmer's life. While a few of the low fields were touched by frost last week, the majority of the fields are still growing and a bountiful crop is assured. Silo owners are anxiously enquiring for custom outfits to fill their silos as some of the former machines are not operating this season. Farmers not having silos have already begun to cut corn to avoid the effects of a heavy frost.

The frequent rains have been a boon to the root crop and some of the heaviest yields of mangels and turnips ever recorded in this district will be harvested during October. The crop of little potatoes has been absolutely spoiled and many tubers larger than a man's fist are to be found in every patch. Some fear has been expressed that there would be a recurrence of last year's rot plague but so far no signs are to be noticed.

Very few local farmers have completely threshed out as yet so that it is almost impossible to arrive at any definite averages, Lindsay Watson, who owns a farm at Burnbrae Corners, recently threshed his whole crop of over 1,700 bushels. This was chiefly oats with some wheat and gave a yield of well over forty bushels to the acre. The tremendous bulk of straw gave a rather poorer average to the load.

With reasonable good fortune from now until the freeze-up, Burnbrae farmers should be well supplied with a winter's ration for their stock.

The town of Jasper, in Jasper National par, Alberta, is rapidly growing. The Canadian National Railways have built fifteen new bungalows of an attractive character, local residents are also erecting good houses, and on the business street several new stores have been put up which are of a pleasing appearance.

Flinders street railway station, Melbourne, claims that nearly 300,000 persons pass through it daily.

Cardinals Clinch National League Pennant

ST. LOUIS CARDS DEFEAT GIANTS IN RACE FOR NATIONAL PENNANT WILL COMPETE IN WORLD SERIES

First Championship Since Time Won by the Original Browns in 1888.

REDS SPLIT DOUBLE.

Bottomley's Triple and Hafey's Double Accounts For Winning Tally.

NEW YORK, Sept. 25 (Canadian Press).—The St. Louis Cardinals tucked away their first National League championship here yesterday when they defeated New York by 6-4, after Cincinnati had lost the first game of a double-header in Philadelphia. It was the first championship won by a St. Louis club since the original Browns of the old American Association won in 1888.

The triumph of the Cardinals in firmly cornering the elusive pennant found popular favor with metropolitan fans as well as enthusiasts throughout the east, whose sympathies have leaned towards St. Louis in its quest for its initial banner.

When the game was over, the new standard bearers of the National circuit were hailed with cheers, but they smiled silently and slipped across the field to the club-house, shaking hands and slapping each other on the back. With the exception of Pitcher Grover Alexander, Outfielder Billy Southworth and Coach Killefer, being on a major league championship was a new experience for the St. Louis players.

About 5,000 witnessed the advent of the Cardinals to the premier honors. St. Louis players were favorites throughout the game, and whenever a Cardinal rally was cut off or the Giants scored, groans went up from the spectators. Judging from the rooting, the setting resembled a gathering in St. Louis instead of New York.

Stubborn resistance was advanced by the Reds in the pennant scramble. After leading the League during a large part of the season, Cincinnati was obliged to step aside for a Cardinal challenge to peak honors and the final days of the race saw both clubs battling away on an even footing. The Cincinnati rout, however, took form in the series with the Giants last week when they dropped two games in a row and then extended to the mix-up with the Braves when Boston made a clean sweep of a three-game tussle.

The Giants rapped Flint Rhem hard in the opening inning of yesterday's game, forcing the star of the St. Louis pitching staff to give way to a pinch hitter in the second inning. Terry hit a home run with Frisch and Kelly on base. But for a great catch by Douthit on Lindstrom's drive and Mueller being out stealing, New York would have scored three more runs.

The Cardinals came right back and knocked out McQuillan, who defeated them here last Sunday, in the second inning. Lester Bell doubled, took third on a wild pitch, and scored on O'Farrell's infield single. Doubles by Thevenow and Toporcer, the latter a pinch hitter, then tied the score.

Billy Southworth, former Giant, sent St. Louis in front with a home run, scoring Toporcer ahead of him.

Wee Willie Sherdel, the southpaw, assumed the pitching burdens for St. Louis in the second inning and held the Giants to seven hits and one run, the tally being made as the result of a ball which bounded poorly to Hornsby. And with the pennant within their grasp, the Cardinals played a great defensive game behind Sherdel. O'Farrell threw out three Giants attempting to steal.

Kelly's double and Tyson's single in the eighth accounted for the Giants' last run. The Cards only other productive inning besides the heavy handed second stanza was the seventh, when "Sunny Jim" Bottomley's triple off Zeke Barnes and Chci Hafey's double put over their final run. Kent Greenfield pitched the final two innings for the Giants. Meantime at Philadelphia, the Phillies were eliminating the Reds by splitting a double-header.

The Quakers won the first game, 9-2, and lost the second 8 to 4. Claude Willoughby held Cincinnati's batsmen in check in the first game, while the Phillies clouted two Red pitchers out of the box. Art Nehf of the Reds held them at the finish.

Knight pitched the entire game for the Phillies in the second contest, but was ineffective. Luque started for the Reds but was replaced by Lucas in the sixth, although the former was credited with the victory. Hargrave hit a homer in this game with two on base.

The only other National League contest scheduled, Pittsburgh at Boston, was postponed, rain.

St. Louis Celebrates.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 24 (Canadian Press).—With one great roar of whistles, bombs, horns and other noise makers, including the human voice, St. Louis late yesterday burst into its most joyous and wholehearted celebration since armistice day, eight years ago.

The news of the Cardinals' pennant clinching victory at New York had barely been announced by the radio than it was broadcast by the ensuing uproar.

Faster than telephone or telegraph could transmit, the news spread through the downtown district and the most disinterested passersby—if there were any—knew what it was all about. They realized the Cardinals had brought to St. Louis its first major league pennant in 38 years, and a world's series would be played here, October 5-6-7, probably against the New York Yankees.

Passing motorists pounded their horns and heads bobbed from the high windows of office buildings. Sirens began to blow, ten bombs were set off at the City Hall, and hundreds of pigeons nesting there swooped out over the streets.

From the doors of downtown buildings crowds poured forth. From offices came shirt-sleeved workers who had no time to think of hats or coats or bother about the thunderstorm that began just prior to the celebration.

The downpour made no difference. Bareheaded men and women, young and old, behaved as if the sun were shining brightly. An hour later, when the rain abated, hundreds more celebrators appeared and showers of torn paper began.

Parades formed on Olive Street, Washington Avenue and other principal thoroughfares. As the excitement grew, clerks abandoned store counters and ran into the street, to work no more this day of days for starved fans.

Three hours after the game the celebration appeared to be just beginning.

Her husband, Marjory and "Sonny," are watching mother finish baking a pie.

PROVINCIAL MEET IS HELD AT COBOURG

Athletes Were Drawn From Wire Range of Territory.

The Provincial Athletic meet for district No. 5 was held at Victoria Park, here, on Wednesday afternoon, September 22, under Auspices of the Provincial Athletic Association. It was intended to hold the meet at Horse Show Park, but on account of the rain it was decided to confine the events to a place in the town where shelter would be available. The running events were accordingly run off on the sand course at the lake and the other events in the Park. The territory covered by district No. 5 extends from Yonge Street, Toronto, to Trenton and south to Huntsville, Peterboro and Lakefield. Results were as follows:

Collegiate Institute And High School Senior Events.

100 yards—A. Eddy, Cobourg; F. Mann, Cobourg, 10 4-8 seconds.

220 yards— W. Mann, Cobourg; J. Lea, Scarboro, 24 seconds.

440 yards—W. Brown, Cobourg; C. Cornaghan, Scarboro. Time 58 seconds.

880 yards—R. Louis, Cobourg.

Mile run—A. Robbin, Scarboro; R. Louis, Cobourg. 5 min. 33 secs.

Mile Relay—Cobourg. Mann, Forbes, Brown, Eddy.

120 yards, High Hurdles— J. Lea, Scarboro; W. Brown, Cobourg. Time 20 seconds.

Running High Jump—N. Smith, Cobourg; A. Eddy, Cobourg. Distance 5 feet 2 inches.

Running Broad Jump—J. Lea, Scarboro; A. Eddy, Cobourg. Distance 16 feet, 2 1-2 inches.

Pole Vault — E. Woods, Cobourg K. Kemp, Lakefield. 9 feet.

Shot Put—E. Carnaghan, Scarboro; A. Eddy, Cobourg. 35 feet 8 inches

DEMPSEY MAY FIGHT TUNNEY SECOND TIME

Tex Rickard May Stage Return Bout Next Spring.

UNDER CONTRACT.

Harry Pearson and Monte Mun Likely Contenders For Crown.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 25 (Canadian Press).—A return match between Gene Tunney, world's heavyweight champion, and Jack Dempsey, who lost the title Thursday, may be put on next spring by the great mogul of boxing, Tex Rickard. Rickard has Tunney under exclusive contract for his fight services, and the promoter announced yesterday that Jack's request for a return bout might be acteded to. Rickard also said that he considered Harry Persson, Swedish champion, and Monte Munn, who registered preliminary knockouts Thursday, as possible contenders.

Champion Gene Tunney, the exmarine, will set out for home to-day, Greenwich Village, New York. Mayor Jimmy Walker will greet him at the City Hall, and it was considered likely that some people would be present when the champion steps from his car.

The erudite pugilist is to receive additional honors, it was announced yesterday. He will be given a commission for a lieutenancy in the reserve of the marine corps for which he has passed an examination.

Yesterday Gene took his ease, touring the city in a motor car and attending a theatre. He called on Dempsey to pay his respects to a "game sportsman." The two fighters spent half an hour in private conversation, and it was later learned that Dempsey had renewed his request for a return bout.

Dempsey was comforted against his defeat yesterday by the arrival of his actress wife, Estelle Taylor, who came from the far west.

"Hello Ginsberg," she said.

"Well, honey, I forgot to duck," said Jack.

"I have Jack," Mrs. Dempsey said to reporters, "and the championship does not mean anything to me."

Inside Sporting Dope

By A WiseCracker

Mister Sporting Editor:

Well, Mac, how much did you win on the big fight? Me, neither. I was 1 of them birds what figgered that Mister Dempsey would have enough left to take care of at least a coupla marines, but it looks as if all he had was the nose the beauty doctors doped out for him. It seems clear, Mac, that the dear old public was once more handed the bunk, and the real winners was the guys that stayed home and listened to the fight over the radio. The folks what dug down in the old bank roll to buy a few inches of pine seat and sit out in the rain was stuck good and plenty. You can't tell me, Mister Sporting Editor, that the gang what was handling Mister Dempsey didn't know just how bad he was. Mister Jack Kearns did. He said before the fight the champ was through, and Mister Kearns has a fair idea of his garden vegetables. But the fans was given gobs of stuff about how Mister Dempsey was back in his old form, and they ate it up. And then Thurs. night the titleholder looked so bad from the 1st clang of the gong that 30 secs. after the melee started the radio announcer was telling the folks over ½ the Continent, "Why this ain't the Jack Dempsey we've been used to seeing at all." The champ was dead on his feet from the start, and every expert round the ring knew it when they looked at him. A whole lotta them musta known it long before, but the fans was given nothing but stewed apples about Mister Dempsey, and they coughed up about 2 million dollars to see the shell of the champion fade out of the picture.

I ain't shedding no tears, Mac. Mister Dempsey didn't do ½ enough fighting for a champ. He was a box-office titleholder, and while you can't blame him for looking out for the mazums, you just naturally can't cheer much for a fighter that don't fight. This young Mister Tunney'll lose his popularity just as fast if he dodges as many bouts as the bird he knocked off Thurs. But I don't think he will. He'll take 'em all on—perhaps even Mister Wills with which Mister Dempsey refused to take no chances.

Well, Mister Sporting Editor, for once Mister Joe Daley's rabbit foot musta got sprained. The serious with the Oslers was about the only important serious them Ponies got into without them getting at least 75 per cent. of the breaks. But this time old Mister John B. Jinx just waded in and knocked Mister Daley and his gang for a row. Here they have them chesty Oslers down 7 runs in the 1st game at Kingston when Mister Jupe Pluvius spills a shower all over the Kingston fair grounds, and the game is off. They go to Toronto Sat., and a short fence which gives Oslers 3 soft home runs beats them 3 to 2. Then Wed., in the replay of the game they had started so well the week before, they get caught with Mister Cairns, their only heaver, crippled with a lame back, and the Osler bats knock the Ponies outa the running.

Well, Mac, they ain't nothing we can do about it, so I might as well knock off now.

Sportfully yours,

A. WISE CRACKER.

HAGEN TO PLAY IN FINAL TESTS

Will Compete With Leo Diegel, Former Canadian Title Holder.

PRO. GOLF EVENT.

GARDEN CITY, N. Y., September 25. Canadian Press. — Walter Hagen yesterday stood at the door of the golfing fame which refused to open six days ago for Bobby Jones, needing only one more triumph to win his third successive championship.

The invincible arrived at the thresh old in the ninth professional golf association event yesterday. A blast of great stroking which completely smothered Johnny Farrell, of Marmaraneck, N. ., in the semi-finals, 6 and 5. To-day he will pass through his final test—a 36 hole match against Leo Diegel of New York, former Canadian titleholder, who drew abreast of Hagen yesterday after beating off a brave but belated rally on the part of Johnny Golden, the veteran contender from Paterson, N. J., one up.

Hagen, still clinging to his crown in a campaign which has seen Jack Dempsey, Bill Tilden, Helen Wills and Rogers Hornsby yield their sceptres, faces the closing struggle an overwhelming favorite, in spite of the fact that Diegel carried him to forty holes last year ot Olympia Fields.

INDIANS LOSE FIRST HALF OF DOUBLE HEADER

Second Game With Phillies Called at End of Sixth.

PITCHERS' DUEL.

Other Two Games on Schedule Postponed Because of Rain.

NEW YORK, Sept. 25 (Canadian Press).—Cleveland's pennant hopes flickered yesterday when Rommel outpitched Uhle and Philadelphia won the first game of a schedule double-header at Cleveland, 3 to 1. The second game was called at the end of the sixth inning because of darkness, followed by a heavy downpour of rain. A double-header will be played to-day.

Rommel and Uhle each allowed nine hits, but the Philadelphia hurler kept his better scattered than Uhle. The Athletics bunched a double by Jenkins and singles by Hale and Simmons after two were out in the third for enough runs to win. Philadelphia backed up Rommel with three double plays.

Postponements yesterday included: New York at St. Louis, rain. Washington at Chicago, rain.

TWENTY-ONE RINKS IN SCOTCH DOUBLES

Peterborough Players Win Four-End Game in Postponed Tournament.

Scotch Double Lawn Bowling tournament, postponed from Labor Day, which opened at the Victoria Park bowling green on Wednesday was not concluded until two o'clock on Thursday morning, when Skip Elliott and his partner of Peterboro played a four end game with F. Burge (skip) and C. Harcourt, Cobourg, to decide a winner in the consolation series, Elliott winning 4-3.

In the Primary, C. Scopes and Hugh McCulough, Cobourg, won from W. De Long and E. Guillet, Cobuorg, 12-11, securing the first away.

There were twenty-one rinks here coming from Peterboro, Campbellford, Port Hope, with several Cobourg rinks.

SAFETY IN AUTOMOBILES.

A Strong Characteristic of Hudson and Essex Cars.

Safety in automobiles — a higher degree of safety—is one of the public's chief demands in motor cars. Traffic conditions have brought this about, and will carry the movement still further, according to C. L. Brewer, Hudson-Essex distributor.

"We felt this sentiment," said Mr. Brewer, "as soon as Hudson-Essex placed on the market their new cars of steel construction. Men have been highly interested to see what remarkable strength and ruggedness the cars have, while women enjoy a car which so easily absorbs all the jolts and jars of present-day traffic.

"The strength of the Essex and Hudson coaches is almost unbelievable. Weights of three and a half tons have been placed on the roof with no effect whatsoever, so far as can be seen. If the strain from such a burden were to take any effect, one of the first results would be around the windows and doors. But as a matter of fact there is no binding or distorted effect whatever.

"While this safety is important, the construction is desirable too because it does away with body noises, which so often have proved annoying in cars of less modern design. Other safety features are the remarkably clear vision, due to the windshield construction, and the general reliability and ruggedness of Essex and Hudson construction.

"Both Hudson and Essex are far in advance of the times in general design. Both have the practical and dependable gasoline strainer, built into the vacuum tank, incoming air is both cleaned and heated before it enters the carburetor, oil is kept clean and free from dilution by the action of the motor.

"These results are obtained in the basic construction of the cars, rather than by the complication and expense of added accessories."

Mine Prices Irregular On Mine Market To-day

TORONTO, Sept. 25. —(Canadian Press. —Prices were irregular in a featureless session of the standard mining exchange here to-day. Ten cent advances were made by Hollinger to 19.25,Lake Shore to 13.75 and McIntyre to 24.75, while Argo showed strength with a jump of 2 3-4 to 30 3-4. Vipond was up 1 to 1.72 and Wright Hargreaves three to 8.68, while Teck Hughes was off 3 to 4.46. In the unlisted section, Amulet eased one to 1.33, Noranda firmed 5 to 18.00, and Towagmac 2 to 3.27. In the silvers Coniagas declined 15c to 4.15, Castle 1 to 1.39, Keeley 1 to 1.63, while Mining Corporation advanced 1 to 3.51, and Bell Ellen 1-2 to 23. Beaver was unchanged at 85.

HEAVY RAIN STORM WITH GALE CAUSES DAMAGE TO HARVESTS AND FLOODS ROADS IN ONTARIO

Peach Crop Ready To Pick, Hurled to Ground During Storm.

COUNTRY FLOODED.

Oil District Wrecked By Gale —Wires Down, Derricks Broken.

TORONTO, Sept. 25 (Canadian Press)—Torrential rain accompanied by a wind that reached gale proportions in many district deluged the southwestern districts of Ontario yesterday and today the farmers and orchardists are checking up damage that will run into thousands of dollars. In the Niagara fruit belt a heavy loss was sustained by peach growers, especially. The heavily burdened peach trees which were almost ready for plucking shed their fruit under the terrific driving rain and the orchard grounds are, as a result, strewn with bruised fruit.

In the Milton district, where the rain was said to be the heaviest in history, gardens and farm lands are under water while cellars are flooded, creeks are overflowing their banks, and it is feared roads will be washed away in some sections. In Halton County streams are running at highest mark reached in 75 years and motor traffic is at a standstill owing to waterlogged highways.

At Petrolia, in the Ontario oil belt, a cyclonic wind which accompanied the deluge left in its wake a swath of ruined country, tangled telegraph lines, wrecked houses, and toppled oil derricks. Trees were uprooted, two houses were completely blown from their foundation, and many others lost their roofs. Only one telephone line was left to connect the town with the outside world.

In St. Thomas streets in the main business sections were converted into miniature streams and traffic badly impeded. The bean crop in Kent County and the tobacco acreages in adjacent districts were badly affected, while heavy damage was also suffered to grain remaining standing in the fields.

THE STOCK MARKET

Bad Weather Fails To Start Wheat Buying

CHICAGO, Sept. 25 (Canadian Press).—Reports of heavy frost and freezing temperatures failed to stimulate much buying in the corn market to-day, and prices both of corn and wheat underwent an early set-back. Crop experts here said the corn crop in South Dakota, Nebraska and Kansas is matured and that a considerable part of the Iowa crop is also beyond danger.

Starting at ½c decline to 7-8c advance, the corn market quickly receded all around to well below yesterday's finish. Wheat opened 1-8c to ½c off and continued downgrade. Oats held about steady. Provisions were weak.

Brompton Leads Activity On Toronto Exchange

TORONTO, Sept. 25 (Canadian Press).—Brompton led in activity on the Toronto Stock Exchange to-day with a gain of three-quarters to 37½. Prices were generally firm but the market was rather inactive. Brazilian firmed 1¼ points to 121¼, Alcohol one to 23, Nickel one-eighth to 36½, and Dominion Stores one to 62. Massey-Harris Common and McKinnon V. T. were unchanged at 72 and 25 respectively. Loblaw eased one point to 54, and Gooderham and Worts one-quarter to 34 3-4. Barcelona was three-quarters higher to 39 3-4, Atlantic Sugar Common one-half to 26. Steamships Preferred and Canners Preferred were unchanged at 89 and 65½ respectively. Noranda made a net gain of ten cents to 18.00. Mining stocks were higher, Dome being up five cents to 11.05, McIntyre 20 to 24.70, Nipissing 30 to 6.30, and Hollinger five to 19.20. Banks were unchanged, Commerce selling at 222 and Nova Sotia at 290.

Selling Pressure Removed, Market Starts Upward

NEW YORK, Sept. 25 (Canadian Press).—Subsiding fears of credit restriction eliminated selling pressure from today's stock market and prices bounded upwards with a steadily broadening tendency in evidence. Many of the usual market leaders resumed their forward movement and reached the best prices of the week.

A satisfactory trade outlook and the revival of rumors regarding capital changes and extra dividends accounted for the display of buying interest. United States Steel and General Motors both spurted ahead, the former crossing 150 and the latter reaching the highest level since the recent distribution of the stock dividend around 161.

Short covering gave impetus to the advance in many issues, such as Hudson Motors, which sold more than five points above its recent low. Dupont mounted five points to a new high record of 320, and gains of 3 to 5 1-4 points were registered by Gulf States Steel, Texas Gulf Sulphur, American Brake Shoe and Commercial Solvents "B." Buying of equipment shares was based on expectations of large railroad orders to handle increasing volume of traffic. Closing was strong. Total sales approximated 800,000 shares.

STAR CAR MAKES REMARKABLE RUN

When the first slow, cumbersome, lumbering, one-lunged horseless carriage chugged through the streets, the skeptical public little dreamed that within thirty years an automobile would cross the Iowa prairies in less time than the fastest express train, yet that very thing has happened.

On Monday, July 19th, an epoch in the evolution of transportation was recorded, when a Star four-cylinder touring car beat the time of the Continental Limited, crack train of the Chicago Northwestern Railroad, across Iowa, by way of the Lincoln Highway, Clinton, Iowa, to Omaha, Nebraska.

The distance, 402 1-10 miles, was covered at an average running speed of 51.6 miles per hour. It is believed that this constitutes a world record for less-than-a thousand-dollar car.

The timing was officialy done by the Western Union Timing Service, the car being checked out of the Western office at Clinton, Iowa, checked in and out of every town en route and checked in at the Western Union office at Omaha, Nebraska.

The first 100 miles were run in 108 minutes and the first 125 miles in 128 minutes. One stretch of 14 miles was covered in 13 minutes flat.

Through Cedar Rapids, Iowa, where police protection and motorcycle escorts were provided, the highest speed attained was 66 miles an hour.

The performance is really remarkable in view of the fact that the Star Four Touring used in the run was a stock car used without alteration and driven only 153 miles before it started on its history-making trip.

IN MEMORIAM.

BEDDING.—In loving memory of our dear little daughter, Doris Hilda Bedding, who passed away Sept, 25th, 1924:

She is gone but not forgotten
As it dawns another year,
In our lonely hours of thinking
Thoughts of her are always near.

Yet again we hope to meet her
When the day of life is fled
And in heaven we hope to greet her
Where no farewell tears are shed.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE.

All letters must be signed by the writer, and must bear his address. A pen-name may be used for publication except in letters on political subjects, which must bear the writer's name for publication.

DR. SHIELDS.

Editor, Peterboro Examiner.

Dear Sir,—Those who attended the meeting at the G.W.V.A. Hall last night, together with those who read the report of the meeting in to-day's paper, should be informed on some things not common knowledge here.

1. Dr. Shields alienated from Jarvis Street Church most of the men and women who had made the church the most influential in the Baptist denomination in Canada. These men and women bear constant witness to his aggressive tactics.

2. Professor I. G. Matthews, a former member of the McMaster University staff, so constantly attacked by Dr. Shields, was a most beloved professor, and scores of former students bear testimony to his Christian character and sound

3. Professor Marshall now a member of the McMaster staff has the absolute confidence of the Baptist people of Great Britain and although made the target of the present attack is a source of wonderful strength to the Baptists of Ontario, because of his high character and sound learning.

4. McMaster University far from being heterodox has always been extremely conservative, and is so today.

5. Dr. Shields has alienated his best friends in the denomination because of his questionable methods of attempting to gain control of the denomination and he allows no freedom of thought to anyone but himself.

6. Dr. Shields exemplifies in his whole life the spirit of strife and destruction. This present barnstorming tour of Ontario has as its object the smashing of our denomination, and Dr. Shields is now trying to capture the University in the same way that he captured Jarvis Street Church.

Yours truly,
JOSEPH WEARING

DELEGATE FEARS FOR SAFETY OF FOREIGNERS IN CHINA UNLESS POWERS FORM NEW TREATIES

Tells League Must be Based on Reciprocity and Equality.

HOPES U. S. LEAD

Would Abolish Britain's "Strangle Hold" on China's Tariff Schedules.

GENEVA, Septen.. 27, Canadian Press. — Unless the powers immediately make new treaties with China based on reciprocity and equality, anti-foreign feeling there will increase and it will be dangerous for foreigners to trade there peacefully, Chu Choa-Hsin, Chinese delegate to the League of Nations asserted on Saturday night.

In an interview Chu said that he had no apologies to offer anybody for his action in bringing the recent British bombardment of Wanhsien before the assembly. He said there was an infringement of China's sovereignity and he hoped that the United States would take the lead in negotiating a new treaty before the other powers, "thus establishing a still closer relationship and a still greater friendship between the United States and China."

Referring to the negotiations now proceeding between China and Great Britain to settle the bombardment incident, Chu said that China's price would not be indemnity, but a new treaty with Great Britain whose object would be the abolishment both of extra territoriality and the "stranglehold" on China's tariff schedules. The latter, he said prevents China from levying the tariffs which she needs to conduct the country properly.

Charging that the British bombardment of Wanhsien was carried out without preliminary warning to the population, Chu declare that if this had happened in any other part of the world it would cause war.

"We do not want to start a war," he declared. "If others want war with us let them start it. In the end we will win for China is weary of being treated as an inferior nation."

A British spokesman said that Viscount Cecil, who protested against Chu's bringing up the bombardment incident without preliminary notice, would make no further reply to Chu because the matter is now in the hands of negotiators.

RESCUE WORK GOING SLOWLY

Three Shafts Being Pushed To Eighth Level of Mine.

43 ENTOMBED.

HOMEWOOD, Mich., Sept. 27.—(Canadian Press).—The sight of distressed women and children drove gaunt-eyed men to super efforts today in their attempt to reach the forty-three men entombed by a cave-in three days ago in the shaft of the Pabst Mine of the Oliver Iron Mining Co. here.

The bodies of the three men crushed to death when tons of boulders and earth crumbled the cage in the shaft have been recovered.

Three separate shafts, each having as an objective the eighth level of the mine, 800 feet under ground, where it is believed the forty-three men were entrapped, and a diamond drill are the means by which rescue workers hope to learn the fate of the imprisoned men.

At least one is expected to attain its objective by to-morrow night, although the obstacles encountered in digging through the earth and rock prevents any accurate pre-determination of progress to be made.

Trains Obey Spoken Orders Of Inventor At London Show

LONDON, Sept. 27.— By making two model electric trains obey his spoken orders, an inventor at the engineering exhibition here Saturday startled spectators.

The inventor was Major Raymond Phillips. When he shouted 'Go!" his trains started and when he said "Stop!" and "Go back!" his orders also were obeyed.

It looked like black magic, but Phillips explained that a microphone working on a new principle was set to correspond to the particular pitch of his voice. When that tone was used the current was allowed to pass through a relay which set up the desired operation.

NINE PEOPLE DIE AS TRAINS CRASH

Express Hits Side of Passenger Train at Track Crossing.

35 INJURED.

BETHLEHEM, Pa., September 27.—Canadian Press. — At least nine persons were killed and 35 injured today when the Scranton "Flyer" of the Jersey Central Railroad, ploughed into the "Lehigh Limited" of the Lehigh Valley Railroad, at the cross over of the two roads in this city.

The accident occurred about 5.45 a.m., within a hundred feet of the new union station.

The "Lehigh Limited" left Buffalo last night for New York. The 'Flyer' is the through train from Binghampton, N.Y., for Philadelphia, Pa.

The huge Jersey Central engine struck three cars back of the Lehigh Valley locomotive, throwing a steel coach on its side. It was in this car that all of those killed or injured were riding.

Railroad men said that had the car been of wooden construction they believed the killed and injured would have been far more numerous.

Eight Canadians were among the injured. They are: Dr. George C. Mitchan, his wife and four children: Dorothy, Fred, Edward and George, Jr., 64 Durie Street, Toronto. Mrs. Mitchan is suffering from a possible fractured skull and body bruises. The others are only slightly hurt.

Mrs. John Schrodt, sister-in-law of Dr. Mitchan, same address, received body bruises.

Alice Pearse, of 13 Mayfield Avenue, Toronto, received body bruises.

No Canadians are among the four dead so far identified.

Trains Running Slowly.

The trains were running very slowly and came together at a point where they were in plain view of each other. People standing a the station waiting to board the Lehigh Valley's Ney York train, were amazed as they had the terrifying experience of seeing two pullman trains apparently bearing down upon each other at the busy junction point.

Henry Smith, of Mauch Chunk, engineer of the Central train which crashed into the other, is in hospital here, slightly injured, as is also Joseph Hartley, of Asley, Smith's fireman.

Smith is quoted as saying immediately after the crash that he thought Lehigh Valley train would stop before reaching the cross over. When he saw the Lehigh valley train was proceeding into the station, it was too late to bring his own train to a stop.

But has trouble enough of its own.

Murderers In Sing-Sing Pass Time At Pinochle

OSSINING, N.Y., Sept. 27.—(Canadian Press). — Seventeen murderers in the death house at Sing Sing awaiting the electric chair are passing the time playing pinochle. They are in separate cells, but they pass the cards through the doors to a guard who calls out what has been played.

TWO WITNESSES ARE DISCHARGED BY ATTORNEY

Testimony is Denounced as Unworthy of Belief.

TRIAL OPENS.

Preliminary Hearing of Mrs. McPherson and Others Starts.

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 27.—"The story of Harry Melosh is so unworthy of credence and so devoid of the essential elements of truth that, as a fair prosecutor, I must denounce him."

With this statement, District Attorney Asa Keyes yesterday terminated the connection of Melosh and Mrs. Babe Daniels with the Aimee Semple McPherson case and released both prisoners.

Melosh and Mrs. Daniels had made affidavits they were the "Martin" and "Miss X," respectively, of the McPherson mystery. Rushed here from San Francisco, they were questioned for six hours Saturday night. The prosecutor said his office would make a sweeping investigation to determine who was behind their asserted efforts to befog the case.

The District Attorney found the affidavits contradicted the confessions of his other witnesses in many major points and concluded that a deliberate effort was being made to confuse his evidence.

At the Hall of Justice yesterday a squad of carpenters were rushing to completion a heavy partition about the court-room of Justice Samuel Blake. Others were putting additional temporary seats in the courtroom. A third party was installing telegraph wires and other facilities for the army of newspaper correspondents who have swarmed into the city to report the trial. This morning at 10 o'clock the State opened its attack on the evangelist. The procedure under California law is known as a preliminary hearing. If, upon its completion, Justice Blake believes there is sufficient evidence to warrant an exhaustive trial, he will order the case tried in Superior Court and set a date.

The District Attorney estimates it will take a week to complete the preliminary hearing.

Only Mrs. McPherson; her mother Mrs. Minnie Kennedy, and Mrs. Lorraine Wiseman-Sielaff will go on trial. Ormiston and "John Doe" Martin, also named in the complaint, have not been apprehended.

A record-breaking throng in and about Angelus Temple on Sunday morning heard Mrs. McPherson again profess her innocence and assure her faithful flock she is the victim of persecution.

C.N.R. EARNINGS MUCH GREATER

Gain of 148.38 Per Cent. Over First Eight Months of 1925.

GAIN IN AUGUST.

MONTREAL, September 27. — Canadian Press. — Increased earnings and decreased operating ratio are shown in the financial statement of the Canadian National Railways, issued to-day, which deals with the summary of earnings and expenses for last August, and with the summary of results for the eight months of 1926, in comparison with similar periods from 1922 ,and covering the years of the amalgamation of the system.

In August last the net earnings increased by 21.07 per cent. in comparison with August, 1925.

Earnings for the last month were $3,291,076.64, in comparison with $2,718 405.07 for August of last year.

The net earnings of the railways for the first eight months of 1926, amounted to $20,828,074.63, as against $8,385,691.81, for the first eight months of 1925, an increase of $12,442,382.82 for the currentyear, equivalent to a gain of 148.38 per cent.

TWO BIG ACHIEVEMENTS MARK SEVENTH LEAGUE CONFERENCE

Admission of Germany Into Assembly and Re-organization of League.

COUNCIL ADJOURNS.

Pass Many Forms That Will Enable World Wide Peace.

GENEVA, Sept. 27.—(Canadian Press.)—The two principal achievements of the seventh assembly of the League of Nations which adjourned with the close of the week were the admission of Germany and the re-organization of the league council from ten to fourteen in membership.

Although the advent of Germany was welcomed as officially ending the animosities of the great war and bringing Germany within the scope of the league obligations and responsibilities, that advent cost the league the collaboration of pain, who resigned because she was unable to get a permanent seat in the council at the same time as Germany.

China, elected to the council to represent Asia, created a sensation in the closing days by charging Great Britain, a fellow member of the league, with an unjustifiable bombardment of a Chinese town, in which several thousand persons were killed. The Chinese spokesman declared peace would never come to China nor would foreigners ever be safe there until powers scrapped the old treaties with China and substituted new ones based on genuine reciprocity and equality.

The assembly adopted a convention which is calculated to abolish slavery in all forms wherever found. The delegates sitting independently in a world court conference drafted a reply to Washington concerning United States' reservations on the proposed United States membership in the court.

The assembly decided to convene an international disarmament conference before next September and to summon an international economic conference during 1927. The assembly also urged the council to promote treaties of arbitration as the best means of encouraging disarmament. Plans were adopted by the assembly to develop the league's activity in the suppression of the white slave traffic, the promotion of child welfare and the protection of Balkan refugees and also the establishment of an Armenian national home.

"The League of Nations will one day be universal," these were the last and prophetite words uttered by President Ninchitchich as he adjourned the assembly.

STEAMER WRECKED.

Crew Saved From Vessel Ashore on Scatarie Island.

HALIFAX, N.S., Sept. 27 (Canadian Press).—C. H. Harvey, local agent of the Marine and Fisheries Department, reported last night that he had been advised that the steamer Moon was wrecked on the south side of Scatarie Island on Saturday morning. The crew was saved.

The Moon, which is not listed in local shipping records, is said to be owned by Mr. MacDonald, of Sydney.

ALL LIBERALS.

King Says Forke Enters His Cabinet on This Basis.

OTTAWA, Sept. 27 (Canadian Press).—Premier King announced Saturday that all the members of the new Government came in as Liberals, the Liberal-Progressives of Manitoba having consented to the entry of Hon. Robert Forke, Minister of Immigration, on this basis. The Liberal-Progressive group in Manitoba will support the Government in its present policies.

TEN KILLED IN FIGHT.

Seven Moros and Three Policemen Lose Lives in Clash.

MANILA, September 27. — Canadian Press. — Seven Moros were killed and a number wounded, and three constabulary privates were killed and five wounded in a clash between a Moro band and Philippine constabulary to-day near Ebian, Sulu province.

The constabulary were attempting to round up a band which had been depredating.

Car With Headless Driver Chases Blind Pig Patrons

DETROIT, September 27. — A run-away automobile zig-zagged down a street here to-day, crashed through the side of a brick building, and came to a stop a few inches from the bar of an alleged negro bootlegging establishment, with a headless driver at the wheel.

The amazed patrons fled in all directions and the police were able to find only one witness of the accident, the bartender, who was so frightened they were some time in getting the story from him.

The driver lost control of the machine, and was decapitated by part of the wall as the machine ploughed through.

SMALLEST STONE IN CEMETERY CARVED BY BOY

Death of Orman Boyler Is Commemorated By His Cousin.

ACCIDENT RECALLED.

Stone Made By Little Lad Memorial of Motor Fatality.

It is not generally known in Peterborough that the smallest monument in Little Lake Cemetery is the work of the youngest of the many sculptors whose works are on view.

The memorial, eighteen inches high, to Orman Boyler, near the second entrance on Haggart Street, was erected by his nine-year-old cousin, a lad named Swan, who discovered the stone, part of an old memorial, during the clearing out of old Zion Cemetery. Out of the old stone the boy fashioned a little slab and on it carved the inscription:

At Rest
In memory of Orman Boyler,
Killed July 19, 1922,
Age 9 years.

Orman Boyler met his fate while driving cows on the road near Downer's Corners, being struck by an automobile and instantly killed.

MANY DEMAND EXHIBIT ROOM

Produced in Canada Exhibition is to be Biggest in Ontario.

SPACE LIMITED.

As the time draws near for the opening of the Produced-in-Canada Exhibition during the week of October 11th, the requisitions for space are daily growing more numerous. The out-of-town manufacturers are taking advantage of this opportunity to show the people of Peterborough and vicinity what they have to offer, and every day now brings requests from them for space reservation.

This exhibition is going to be one of the largest of its kind ever held in Ontario, aside from the many exhibits of the manufacturers there will be a special programme for entertainment each evening, and also a room reserved for dancing.

Among the more recent reservations received for space we note the following, some of whom have reserved from two to four booths:
The McClary Manufacturing Co.
The Maple Leaf Milling Co.
Gurney Furnace Co.
Woods Underwear Co., Ltd.
Puritan Hosiery.
Gossard Corset Co.
Chrysler Automobiles.
House of Hobberlin.
Vegetable Growers' Associa..on.
E. V. Warne.
J. J. Duffus, Ltd.
Peterboro Milk Products.
The Peterboro Examiner.
Heintzman Company.
Brinton Carpet Co.
Findlay Bros., Ottawa.
Canadian Woollens.
Imperial Oil Co., large exhibit

The Sherwin Williams Co. will also not only put on an exhibit but will give a paint demonstration each evening. In addition to the manufacturers' exhibits the government are sending some beautiful and interesting exhibits.

This exhibition is certainly going to be one of the best of its kind, and the Armories will be, if anything, too small to hold it all.

Protects Historic Sites From Building Speculators

ROME Sept. 27.—Taormina, the beautiful city of antiquity, thirty miles from Messina, on the Ionian Sea, and its neighborhood have been placed under the supervision of the National Bureau of Arts to prevent its beauty being spoiled by threatened building operations.

The Island of Capri has also been placed under similar jurisdiction, since there, as well as in Taormina, there were indications of speculative building that would mar the beauty of the countryside.

In Taormina there are extensive ruins of the Greek epoch.

GLOOMY DEAN SAYS EMPIRE IS NEARING END

Main Danger Is On the Inside, He Says in Article.

TRYING TIME AHEAD.

Says Position as World Power Cannot Endure Much Longer.

NEW YORK, Sept. 27 (Canadian Press).—The early passing of Great Britain as a world power is forecast by Dean Inge, of St. Paul's, London, in an analytical survey of the Empire, published as the latest of a series by various authors on "the modern world."

Living up thoroughly to this title of "the gloomy Dean," he sees great danger not only in the international situation, but even more from the "anti-social and unpatriotic sectionalism which is the course of industrial civilization, especially dangerous in a country situated as we are."

"The main danger is interior to the Empire," declares the Dean. "The omens at present are very unfavorable.

"Everything points to a coming time of trial for the nation and the Empire. It seems for every reason unlikely that our position as a world power will endure much longer.

"Much depends upon the friendliness of the United States, on which we certainly cannot count, though of which we should not despair.

"The cordial friendship which many Englishmen enjoy with individual Americans must not blind us either to the intense concentration of the American people at large upon what they consider their own interests or to the prevailing unfriendliness of America, as expressed by its politicians and journalists, to this country.

"If in the future we are attacked by a European coalition we may take it as probable that the United States will leave us to our fate, unless, indeed, we are invaded by a black army."

No Occasion for War

There is no occasion for war at present between the British Empire and the United States, says the Dean, since our Government invariably gives way.

"Americans by insisting upon repayment of the vast debt incurred for France, to which we rashly put our names, have secured that we shall remain permanently tributary to themselves.

"We probably shall retain our present form of government if only because there is no obvious alternative," Dean Inge concludes. "In plain living and high thinking, will be our salvation, or the salvation of the 'remnant' which will survive the turmoils of an age of transition. Plain living will be forced on us, whether we will or not.

"England is at present moving in the direction of syndicalism made in France," he asserts.

Englishman Lazy.

"The Englishman is neither industrious nor thrifty; he is disposed to be lazy, open handed and fond of good living. We owe our position as a great power to geographical situation and to comparative freedom from Continental entanglements. It may seem unscientific to attribute much importance to sheer luck."

Of the world war he says: "No greater misfortune has ever befallen Britain. There are ominous signs that it may be the last great war to be decided by naval powers."

The gloomy Dean thinks that the "future of Canada is problematical. Racially it should be secure for northern stocks since the climate is too severe for Mediterranean and still more so for negroes. There is nothing impossible in Lord Dufferin's prediction that Canada's ultimate power may exceed the power of Great Britain."

The Dean looks with disquietude on immigratino to the United States, however, and wonders why some of the British unemployed do not go to Canada.

NAMING FORKE SEALS ALLIANCE OF PROGRESSIVES AND LIBERALS IS COMMENT OF LONDON PAPER

Daily Telegraph Prophesies Strong Immigration Policy.

MEIGHEN INDISCREET.

Meighen's Offer To Assist In Hastening Legislation Praised By News.

LONDON, Sept. 27.—(Canadian Press Cable.) — The Daily Telegraph thinks that Robert Forke's appointment to the portfolio of immigration in the newly-created King Government in Canada is highly significant as it "sets the seal on the alliance between Liberals and Progressives. "The Progressives always have demanded a strong immigration policy," the paper says, "and therefore Mr. Forke's appointment heralds an active attack on Canada's population problem which is in exact converse to Britain's. There is therefore the prospect of valuable co-operation between the two in meeting each other's needs."

Referring to Mr. Meighen's resignation from the leadership of the Conservative party, the Telegraph offers the suggestion that he has been guilty of certain indiscretions of leadership and instances the "vain attempt to secure the support of French Canadians," by laying down the necessity of a general election before Canada would take a stand beside Britain in any future war.

Thanks to Meighen.

LONDON, Sept. 27 (Canadian Press).—In an editorial this morning dealing with the resignation of the Right Hon. Arthur Meighen and the accession of the Right Hon. Mackenzie King to the Premiership of Canada, the Daily News says Mr. Meighen deserves the thanks of all parties because he had made it possible for Mr. King to attend the Imperial Conference by promising to facilitate the business of Parliament to this end.

"Mr. King's instant decision upon assuming the Premiership to attend the conference," the News says, "will not only strengthen its deliberations but will effectively dissipate the unfortunate suspicion that Mr. King had no intention of giving the Cabinet of the Empire his personal benediction."

'Kill the Umpire' Is Call Fan Strikes Fatal Blow

LONG ISLAND CITY, N.Y., Sept. 27 (United Press). — "Kill the umpire," cried disgruntled fans, after Umpire Pat McTavey had rendered a close and adverse decision at a baseball game here, costing the home team the game.

A disgruntled fan, allegedly a brother of the catcher of the Long Island City Country Club team, ran onto the field and struck McTavey. The umpire died before he could be taken to a hospital, and his assailant is being sought.

FIVE DROWNED WHEN BOAT TIPS

Ferryboat Upsets in Ohio River With Ten on Board.

FIVE RESCUED.

POMEROY, Ohio, September 27.—Cnadian Press. — Five excursionists were drowned in the Ohio river here early to-day. They were being ferried across the river to their homes in Pomeroy when their skiff capsized. The skiff was carrying nine passengers and the ferryman when it went down. Five were rescued.

The names of the victims are: Mrs. A. C. Foulk, 50, Mrs. John Meiser, 52, Mrs. Robert Hunell, 38, Mrs. W. Spanogel, 424, and her seven months old baby.

SOUND MINDS NEED OF MODERN YOUTH

Pope Praises Oratory Contests Sponsored By the Knights of Columbus.

ROME, Sept. 27 (United News). —Modern youth's need of sound minds and sound bodies was emphasized by Pope Pius XI. in an address to 1,000 boys and girls here to attend an oratory contest sponsored by the Knights of Columbus.

Seated on a throne erected in the St. Damascus courtyard and surrounded by his court and the palatine guards, His Holiness watched the boys and girls, divided into athletics teams, perform various exercises.

The Pope praised those who contributed to the maintenance of such contests as those in progress. He bestowed the Papal blessing on the young people and congratulated Edward Heran, Commissioner of th Knights of Columbus in Italy.

THE WEATHER.

The "frost was on the pumpkin" both Sunday morning and this morning. Lowest temperature yesterday morning 30 degrees; this morning 29 degrees. There was heavy white frost both mornings. The early frosts will probably have the effect of giving the forest trees a more than usually brilliant hue this fall, particularly as there has been an abundance of rain, and the trees have not suffered from drought.—W.P.

SIGNS ERECTED THROUGH CITY

Local Branch of O.M.L. Has Put Signs in Neighboring Towns.

PROVE OF BENEFIT.

During the present year, a large number of road signs has been erected in the city and neighborhood by the local branch of the Ontario Motor League.

The signs at the corner of George and Charlotte Street with derections to Wallace Point and the Rice Lake district on the one side, and Norwood, Hastings and the Kawartha Lakes, on the other have proved invaluable to travellers entering the city from the Peterboro—Port Hope Highway. Signs have also been distributed among neighboring communities, the erection of which has made things easier for the traveller unacquainted with the locality. Municipalities in the vicinity desiring signs which are supplied free of charge are invited to white the local secretary, Frank G. Stinson.

This is a new photograph of Princess Mary, Viscountess Lascelles, out driving at Goldsborough Hall, her Yorkshire home, with her two sons, George and Gerald. George is now three and a half years old, while Gerald is two. They look as though they have minds of their own.

SANCTORUM MEETS AND HEARS REPORT

Local Members of A.M.O.S. Plan To Send Large Delegation To Toronto.

The first regular fall meeting of Cyzicus Sanctorum No. 24, A.M.O.S., held in their hall in the I.O.O.F. Temple, was largely attended with a full attendance of the officers present, on Friday evening.

A splendid report of the business transacted at the annual meeting of the 'Supreme Orient,' held in August last at Richmond, Virginia, was presented by Sheik J. H. Price, Grand Representative, showing a heavy increase in the membership in Canada and the United States.

At this session it was decided to accept the cordial invitation of the city of Toronto to hold the 1927 convention there in August, this vote being carried while in competition with several invitations from American cities. This means the attendance of thousands of the members of the Order during the week.

The officers and members of Cyzicus No. 24 are already formulating plans to have the Sanctorum strongly represented on this important occasion, when the members will make application for advancement to the Degree of Perfection, which carries with it the rank of Sheik and can only be attained during the Supreme Orient session.

An order has been placed for the new official Fez, so that the members will be able to be present in up-to-date uniform.

It was decided to hold an open meeting on the evening of October 29th next, when the lady friends of the members are expected to be present and the executive committee has been authorized to prepare one of the usual original programmes so much appreciated in the past.

A pleasing event of the evening was the presentation of a Past Grand Monarch's jewel to Sheik George Crowe, P.G.P. by Grand Monarch Price, assisted by Grand Director Fred Reid.

A large number of applications for membership are coming along in anticipation of the big meet in Toronto next summer. This sanctorum is living up to the motto of the Order, "We Never Sleep."

ORANGE CORNER NEWS

Threshing in this district is the order of the day.

Quite a number from this vicinity attended Lindsay Exhibition.

Social Gathering

The social held on Thursday evening at the home of Mrs. C. Lough under the auspices of St. John's Choir was a real success. Owing to the inclemency of the weather no doubt it prevented many from being present. The evening was spent very pleasantly. Mrs. Lough being a most congenial hostess made every person feel quite at home and free to enjoy themselves. A good programme was rendered consisting of community singing. Instrumentals were given by Miss Hill of Regina, who is at present a guest of Mrs. Lough; a solo by Miss Mildred Magee; several selections by Mount Pleasant quartette; solos by Hubert Lowes; readings by Miss Parker and Miss Carey. Accompanists for the evening were Miss Hill, Mrs. T. Jamieson and Mrs. W. Magee. Mr. Elmer Henry very capably occupied the chair during the evening. Refreshments were served and the very pleasant evening brought to a close by the singing of the National Anthem.

Miss Marion Carey was the guest of Miss Mildred Magee during the past week.

Mrs. Eric Blackwell and children are holdaying in Toronto and Markham.

Whooping cough has been quite prevalent in this community but with the changing of the season has pretty much gone.

Miss F. Dench is holidaying in Markham and Toronto.

We have been having a great deal of rain but are hoping for a change after the exhibitions and elections are over.

ELECTION LAW CHANGES URGED

Labor Would Have Officials Named By Chief Electoral Officer.

CONGRESS ADJOURNS.

MONTREAL, Que., Sept. 27. — (Canadian Press). — Province of Quebec delegates succeeded at the concluding sitting of the Dominion Trades and Labor Congress in defeating the aim of a resolution to do away with the amusement tax. The Ottawa Allied Trades and Labor Association had a resolution on the order paper to the effect that the tax had become a nuisance to the general public, had long since outlived its usefulness, and that therefore the congress go on record against its continuance, and seek to have such tax done away with.

The resolution committee in reporting on the matter added the words, "unless same is devoted to the maintenance of hospitals and charities."

The resolution, as amended, was carried.

A mild storm was stirred by a resolution from the Regina Lodge, 253, Brotherhood of Railway Carmen, to the effect that Congress use every effort possible to have immigration restricted to English-speaking people as much as possible. The committee proposed non-concurrence.

The convention approved of a resolution asking for legislation to provide one day's rest of 24 consecutive hours for employees engaged in the mechanical department of the theatrical industry.

A resolution asking that guards in penitentiaries be given the eight-hour day, as in Provincial prisons, was approved of.

A resolution was passed calling on the Federal Government to change the election law so that the appointment of official elecion officers should be left in the hands of the chief electoral officer. The convention also approved of the idea that members of Parliament called to the Cabinet should not have to seek re-election for that reason within a period of two years from the time of the general elections. The stand of the Congress on mothers' pensions, in favor of amending the bankruptcy law so as to make wages a privileged claim; reiteration of the demand for amendments to the Ontario Temperance Act, a demand that prisoners be paid full wages for any prison work used outside of prisons, and a demand that the depositors of the Home Bank be fully reimbursed were other matters approved of by the Congress.

SOUTH HOPE RURAL SCHOOL EXHIBITION

Large Crowd From District Attend Annual Event at Welcome.

WELCOME, September 27.—Community interest reached a high mark at Welcome on the occasion of the South Hope Rural School Fair, the event taking place on Friday, Sept. 24th, a large number of parents, friends and pupils from the entire district being in attendance. This was the concluding fair for the rural series in Durham county for this season.

There are nine schools in the South Hope Inspectorate, the list, with the teachers being, Port Britain, S. S. No 1, Mrs. Rock, teacher; Wesleyville, S. No. 2, Mr. R. Cornish, teacher; Dale, S. S. No. 3, Mrs. Meldrum, teacher; Welcome, S. S. No. 4, Miss E. Preston, teacher; Morrish, S. S. No. 5, Mrs. Honan, teacher;; Zion, S. S. No. 6, Mrs. Johnston, teacher; Pine Grove S. S. No. 7, Miss M. Gist, teacher; Canton, S. S. No. 8, Miss McNichol, teacher; Bunker Hill, S. S. No. 9, Miss Bamsey, teacher.

Five schools were entered in the school parade competition, for which Captain F. McMahon of Port Hope, was judge, Colonel J. W. Odell acting in this capacity when the winners of the physical culture exercises were to be decided. The costumes worn by the Dale pupils were particularly admired, each scholar having a sash of evergreen, and wreath centred by a crimson flower on their heads; the banner was also quite handsome, the design being worked out in the evergreen, with crimson flowers intertwined. The other schools favored the patriotic style of costume this being a common feature of practically every school fair.

Dale school was awarded first place, with Welcome and Wesleyville tied for second place. Pine, Grove, Welcome and Dale were the respective winners in the Physical Culture exercises.

Rev. D. R. Clare was the senior judge for public speaking contest, for which there were six entries, the list of winners being announced as 1, Edgar Nicholls, 2 Ruth Stapleton, 3 Mabel Bamsey.

A stock naming contest was also a feature of this fair, the six with highest standing being: 1 Edgar Nicholls, 2 Morley Moore, 3 Mildred Kelly; 4 Ted Woolacott, 5 Marjorie Moon; 6 Lawrence Ramsey.

Agricultural representative, F. C. Paterson, was the judge for this event.

General satisfaction was expressed with the quality of the exhibits shown and the number was larger, particularly in the fruit class, than at some of the other fairs in the county. The list of prize winners includes

THEY'RE NEW ... Cross-Number Puzzles

An original variation of the popular crossword puzzle is the use of numbers instead of letters in the squares. These puzzles call for ingenuity, clear thinking and a good memory. Science, mathematics, literature, history and general information are in the scope of cross-number puzzles.

On feature page you'll find a cross-number puzzle which is begging to be solved. All you have to do is fill the squares with the proper figures. Finding the proper number is, of course, the trick.

The definitions and explanations below the puzzle will help you, and since the numbers run both horizontal and vertical they form a check to show whether your work is correct.

Now go ahead with the puzzle on the feature page.

ST. PETER'S CATHEDRAL.

Speaking at the morning Masses at St. Peter's Cathedral yesterday, Rev. P. Costello gave a brief outline of the life of Saint Therese of Lisieux, the young Carmelite nun who has achieved world-wide prominence since her death, and is known as the 'Little Flower,' whose brief life was marked by wonderful sanctity and simplicity, and at whose grave numerous miracles have been recorded, sufficient to ensure her beatification on April 29th, 1923, and her subsequent canonization on May 17th, 1925.

Born at Lisieux on January 2nd, 1873, and dying in the Carmelite Convent on September 30th, 1897, this young girl was an outstanding example of sweetness and purity. Before her death, she asked that God would allow her to spend her heaven in doing good on earth, and promised to let fall to earth a shower of roses, or spiritual benefits, to those who should be devoted to God through her help.

Father Costello pointed out that Saint Therese was at one time a simple little child, like any of the children growing up in the world to-day, and that the qualities of charity and truthfulness, of sweetness and simplicity, and true love of God which distinguished her, might easily be emulated by those who regard her as a model of sanctity.

THE KIWANIS EXHIBITION.

The Made-in-Canada Exhibition which the Kiwanis Club of Peterboro is promoting is gaining in proportions each day as it draws nearer, and it is clear that local citizens will not only have an opportunity of assisting a very worthy cause but at the same time will be sure of a programme that will combine both education and recreation.

Too much emphasis cannot be placed upon the importance of realizing the desirability of purchasing Canadian-made goods.

The Kiwanis Exhibition will do much to stress that feature and will be a revelation to many people as to what is made in Canada and what is made in Peterboro, for naturally local firms are availing themselves of the advertising possibilities of the Exhibition.

The event can be confidently recommended, not only because of the manner in which the proceeds will be extended, but on its own merit as an interesting and educational exhibition that nobody should think of missing.

The young ladies who are selling the tickets should have an easy task. They are selling a good thing on behalf of a good thing, and that should make salesmanship an elementary matter.

MR. MEIGHEN'S RESIGNATION.

The announcement from Mr. Meighen that he does not intend to contest a seat in Parliament, and that he will resign from the leadership at the Conservative conference next month, will be received with more regret than surprise.

It has been intimated since the election by those closely in touch with the Conservative leader that he would give up his command and retire from public life.

Even those who are violently opposed to Mr. Meighen's political policy will, the Examiner is sure, be sorry to learn that Parliament is apparently to know him no more.

His bitterest political opponents have never failed to respect him as a fighter, a clever parliamentarian, and a man of ability and power.

He has qualities that are needed in Parliament, and as leader of the Opposition, there is much that he could do on behalf of the Canadian people in keeping the Government alert and active.

For these reasons there will be a general hope that his decision to retire is not irrevocable, and that when his announcement is dealt with by the Conservative conference his colleagues will be able to persuade Mr. Meighen that there is still work for him to do in public life.

The Canadian Parliament is not so crowded with brilliant men as to make the loss of a member of Mr. Meighen's calibre a matter of minor importance.

THE PROGRESSIVES.

The acceptance by Mr. Forke of a portfolio in the new Cabinet is regarded as marking the passing of the Progressive party.

So far as the Progressive organization is concerned, it is virtually merged into the Liberal party—a development that would be welcomed by the majority of Canadians if they were sure that it meant a return to the old two-party system.

Unfortunately, however, the disappearance of the Progressives does not have that effect, for the group system still continues because of the fact that the United Farmers of Alberta members in the House will remain as a separate and complete group, with whom Miss Agnes MacPhail, elected as a U.F.O. member, will likely throw in her lot.

Whether in other Provinces the farmers' movement as distinct from the Progressives will make headway as a result of dissatisfaction over the Progressive alliance with one of the old parties remains to be seen.

The Progressive organization gained much of its strength because of its insistence that farmers' problems could best be settled by having in Parliament a Progressive group, remaining aloof from other parties.

Now that that policy has been scrapped, the farmers who still believe in it may encourage the spread of the U.F.A. system into the other Prairie Provinces and to some extent in Ontario.

THE NEW CABINET.

Contrary to expectations in some quarters, Mr. King has chosen to select his Ministry entirely from the elected members.

In doing so he has perhaps lost a good opportunity of impressing the country with his determination to give Canada a chance to leap forward under the guidance of the best possible executive board.

The addition of two or three outstanding men to the Cabinet would have been valuable, not only to the Liberal cause, but to the country.

However, in selecting his Ministers in the manner he has, Mr. King has apparently made splendid use of the material available, and the new Cabinet contains many elements of strength and few or no members that are open to criticism upon their records.

Mr. Robb as Finance Minister is a veritable bulwark in the new Ministry. His honesty of purpose, shrewdness, common sense and business ability have impressed the people when more brilliant men have failed.

Mr. Dunning, Mr. Lapointe and other members of Mr. King's former Cabinet have won their spurs and have shown themselves capable of excellent service.

Of the new Ministers, especially those from Ontario, it can be said that they embark on their important duties with clean records and the promise of successful ministerial careers.

Hardest of all is the task that faces Hon. W. D. Euler, of North Waterloo, who has been assigned the customs portfolio.

The re-organization of the department will be his responsibility, and he should have the co-operation of every patriotic Canadian in this difficult and vital duty.

A GOOD OMEN.

The announcement that France is expecting to reduce her military equipment by retiring a considerable number of officers, raising the age limit for conscription, and radically reducing the enforced enlistment term to one year, makes about the most encouraging reading to the friends of world peace that has been set before them for years. It is true that these items have a place in France's very-much-needed economy programme, and as such might not seem to be of great significance to the rest of the world, but as indicating a rapidly-changing spirit and attitude on the part of the French people it would be almost impossible to exaggerate their significance.

Ever since the close of the war one of the great obstacles in the way of the cultivation of a better spirit in Europe has been the suspiciousness of the French and the consequent aggressively militaristic spirit manifest in nearly all their dealings with the rest of the world. Whether or not one was inclined to think this state of mind somewhat inevitable and rather to be overlooked than severely censured, it was quite evident to every one that it raised serious obstacles to any effort after European good-will. The spirit found its most tragic outbreak in the Ruhr occupation, but it has manifested itself quite outspokenly in many other incidents and on many other occasions.

This proposed reduction in France's military establishment, which seems to have met with much popular favor and is quite likely to be carried out, indicates quite clearly that a new spirit is coming in and that jealousy and fear and auspicion are rapidly giving way. The proposal looks very much like a gage of good-will that France has thrown down, and if it should prove to be so there is no doubt in the world that it will be taken up by Germany and the other nations in an altogether satisfactory spirit. It looks now as if the day of really active good-will in Europe was much nearer than any could have believed possible even one year ago.—The New Outlook.

THE WRITING OF HISTORY.

The question has been raised of late as to what is the matter with history as it is written and taught today. According to those who ought to know, Clio has been dethroned, and that form of literature which entranced and instructed our forefathers through the medium of a Gibbon, a Macaulay, a Carlyle, a Prescott or a Parkman has lost its appeal. Not only, we are told, is there a widespread indifference to historical works and a consequent slump in the market for such books, but the dignity of history, as reflected in the prestige and influence of its past masters, has been lowered almost to the point of complete eclipse.

To the professors who write and teach history this is a grievous state of affairs demanding study; and at the last meeting of the American Historical Association the matter was discussed by several eminent authorities, whose views have since been considered worthy of publication. The change that has taken place in the status of the historian is described by Professor Bassett of Smith College as almost pathetic.

"Fifty years ago," he laments, "historians like Bancroft and Prescott stood side by side with the great poets at the top of the world of letters. From men of their day they received esteem, public honors and wealth. They lived like pro-consuls over provinces of literary expression. Today the historian's influence has waned. He is no longer to be compared with the lordly pro-consul, but rather to the hard-working centurion, whose labors held back the military units on which rested Roman authority in the provinces."

As to the rewards of the historian for his work, the contrast is even more striking than the decline of his influence. Prescott, it is recalled, received $7,500 for his "Conquest of Peru," with an additional $4,000 from the publishers in England. Washington Irving made $70,000 out of a group of his historical works. Of Motley's "Rise of the Dutch Republic" 15,000 copies were sold in the first year of publication, and Bancroft profited handsomely from his voluminous "History of the United States." Even at a later date, such historians as Woodrow Wilson and John Fiske in the United States, and Froude, Gardiner and Sir G. M. Trevelyan in England, realized large sums on their works.

But today the plaint of the historian is that he scarcely makes enough to pay for the paper and printing of his productions. And the reason assigned is that the present generation of readers is not interested in history and will not buy the modern output. It is perhaps typical of the academic mind that, in their discussion of the subject, the professional members of the American Historical Association seem to have overlooked what is undoubtedly a factor of practical importance in the case—the influence of the public libraries.

Our forefathers had their own libraries, which they replenished with the leading works of their day, including histories, as they appeared. Today thousands of readers gain their knowledge of the past from the crowded shelves of the institutions which perpetuate the name of Carnegie, from the libraries of the colleges, or from the archives of the state.

Apart from this phase of the matter, the question which suggests itself is, not only whether public taste in its choice of literature has degenerated, but whether the work of the modern historian is worth reading. And on the latter point the professors in their study of the subject do not conceal the suspicion that "the fault is not in our stars, but in ourselves, that we are underlings." The modern historian is largely the product of a school which specializes in research, in copious documentation, in meticulous accuracy of detail, and in detached studies that may be instructive but are, to quote our critic, "about as readable as a telephone directory."

No one nowadays accepts Macaulay's dictum that "facts are the mere dross of history," but at all events that great writer had the faculty of making the past live in his pages, which, more than anything else, probably explains why the older historians are still read, and those of the modern Ph.D. tradition, given, as Professor Abbott says, to "printing documents by the ton," and "publishing monographs by the thousands," are not.—Ottawa Journal.

CATTLE, GRAIN AND PRODUCE

Peterboro—Toronto—Montreal
Winnipeg

CHICAGO GRAINS

CHICAGO, Sept. 27 (Canadian Press).—Although frost news was plentiful Saturday, buying orders were scarce. Better weather for wheat in Canada proved to be the chief grain market influence. Closing quotations on wheat were heavy, 5-8 to 1 3-8 net lower, with corn at 1-2c decline to 3-4c advance; oats a shade off to 1-8 to 1-4c up, and provisions unchanged to 45c down.

European demand for North American wheat Saturday was again slack and indications pointed to 3,000,000 bushels increase of the United States visible supply on Monday.

With frost reports failing to stimulate any notable enlargement of buying in the corn market, corn prices averaged lower, responsive to wheat weakness.

However, a forecast pointing to fromst on Saturday night in sections where damage may prove severe caused the corn market to rally in the late dealings.

Provisions turned easier on account of the relative weakness of corn.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Sept. 27 (Canadian Press).—The export trade in grain on the Montreal market Saturday was again very quiet which exporters state is due to the fact that the Canadian pool is underselling them 5 to 7 cents per bushel on wheat. The only business done with foreign buyers was a few loads of barley. The demand for cash coarse grains from local buyers was limited, but the tone of the market was steady.

The flour market was without any new feature to note, prices for spring and winter wheat grades were unchanged with a fair trade passing.

A fair business was done in all lines of millfeed and prices were steady. The trade in rolled oats was active and the undertone was firm.

The butter market continued dull but firm. The receipts were 2,964 packages.

The foreign demand for cheese fas good and a moderate amount of busines was transacted. Prices were unchanged. The receipts were 6,611 boxes.

The demand for fresh and storage eggs continued good and prices were well maintained. The receipts were 942 cases.

W.M.S. MEETING

Large Attendance at Gathering in Presbyterian Church on Tuesday.

ROSENEATH, Sept. 27. — On Tuesday afternoon the Woman's Missionary Society of the United church held its September meeting in the old Presbyterian church, with a large attendance present. The president, Mrs. (Rev.) Wylding, presided and opened the meeting with singing hymn 91, "Far, far away in heathen darkness dwelling," followed by the Lord's prayer in unisoy. The minutes of August meeting were read and adopted. The roll called and responded to by each member telling of her success in obtaining new members and many were added to the membership list.

After singing hymn 377, "Sweet hour of prayer," the W. M. S. watchford was repeated in unison. Mrs. (Rev.) Lovelace then read a portion of the Faith chapter found in Hebrews, 11th chapter. The devotional leaflet on faith was read by Mrs. Fred Talling. During the next few months the study is to be on India, which has a population of 318,000,000 people. Missionary work opened up 50 years ago read by Mrs. Lily Turner. Mrs. Albert Nill gave a paper on new field to our United church friends and our Indian mission who is celebrating the 50th year. Mrs. W. J. Jibb read a leaflet on how to get to India by water, and Mrs. George Ingham continued the journey and arrival at the mission after a 10,000 mile journey. Mrs. Charlie Macklin then read about Central India of 50 years ago, unlike India to-day, railroads have opened the country and the transportation has become more modern. Mrs. Robert Mouncey read about the medical work and how the attitude of the people has changed toward christianity. Education for girls has been established, 53 schools and colleges, 80 missionaries and 190 India workers that more missionaries are needed. The talk on India was very interesting. Mrs. M. Davey then sang a solo. It was decided to have Miss Mary Haig, of Baltimore, who is home on furlough from Formosa, and who is known by many in this vicinity, to give an address in the United church here on November 11th. At the conclusion of the meeting tea, sandwiches, cake and pie were served and a social half hour was enjoyed by all present.

HOW DO YOU SAY IT?

Common Errors in English and How To Avoid Them.

(Copyright, McClure Syndicate.)

THEY "LEARN YOU TO TALK CORRECT"

Too many schools, especially so-called "business schools," turn out pupils who cannot speak or write their own language correctly. Of one such pupil the following story was told in the New York Evening Post:

"She had decided not to go to high school, but to take a business course. Enthusiastically she told the principal of the high school the advantages of her choice.

"'When I get that stenography learned I can go right out and get to be private secretary to some big man,' she said.

The principal, knowing the girl, asked, "How about instruction in English? Do they give any courses in spoken or written English at your business school?"

"Sure,' the girl assured her. 'They learn you to talk and write correct'."

WISE AND OTHERWISE

Anything can happen. Kid Lewis, a boxer, was fined for trying to smuggle perfume into England.

German scientist has a new cure for malaria. Part of the old one, whisky and toots, was popular.

Never judge a man by his popularity with woman. You may be mistaken. He may be all right.

Hard work will gain you promotion in almost any line unless the boss has too many kinfolks.

FADS OF THE FAMOUS

JUDGE BEN B. LINDSEY.

When Judge Ben B. Lindsey was a small boy, long before he became known over the world as the founder of the juvenile court system, he had a great interest in aviation.

Flying is his main diversion from his work for the betterment of childhood. He first discovered it in his youth when a pioneer aviator built him a toy airplane that would fly.

Lindsey flies at every opportunity and finds aviation his greatest recreation. "In aviation lies the hope of the world," Lindsey said. "Like radio, the airplane is part of the evolution of things and it will revolutionize the world."

The time will come, he believes, when flying will make the globe too small to satisfy us and we will take a trip to the moon "to see what is going on up there."

War will be eliminated, frontiers will disappear, there will be a universal language and the nations of the world will be like one small family with harmony prevailing when the airplane reaches its full promise, Lindsey believes.

A decade ago the famous juvenile judge talked to Henry Ford about aviation, he said, but Ford considered it impractical and said nothing would ever come of it.

"Henry Ford has been a great benefactor to humanity with his automobile, but Edsel will go him one better, and become the greatest benefactor to humanity in 1,000 years if he does for the airplane what his father has done for the automobile." added Lindsey.

"I love to fly," the child's judge concluded, "and I do so whenever I have an opportunity."

Lyrics Of Life

(By Douglas Malloch.)

THE WIND

I told my father that I thought
The wind was such a funny thing:
Behaves the way he really ought,
Until the birds begin to sing.
And then forgets his manners pleasing,
And starts to pulling, starts to teasing,
Grabs someone's hat,
And things like that,
And makes folks sad, and angry, too.
"Yes," Father said, "just like boys do."

I told him that you couldn't tell
Just what it would be up to next:
It always does a thing pell-mell,
And that's why people get so vexed.
When everything is nice and quiet
The wind begins to romp and riot.
Runs here and there,
Pulls someone's hair,
Spoils someone's nap with noisy tread—
"Just like a boy," my father said.

I told him that the wind could be
So nice and helpful if it tried,
Could blow the ships across the sea,
The little lake, or ocean wide.
But now and then, without a reason,
Right in the middle of the season,
It misbehaves,
And makes big waves,
Instead of helping like it should—
"And," Father said, "like youngsters could."

DR FRANK CRANE'S DAILY EDITORIAL

REPRESSION

By Dr. Frank Crane.

It has become popular these latter days to attribute many of the evils and the deeds of humanity to a desire for self-expression.

The recent vogue of Freudian ideas has given impetus to this point of view.

It is taken for granted that repression is bad and that it is wrong to bottle up one's desires, as it may cause them to break forth in unexpected and undesirable places.

There is something to be said for this opinion, it is true, but the condemnation of repression should not be carried too far.

In a measure all strength is due to repression, or rather concentration. Concentration is in a sense another form of repression.

We get power from the locomotive because steam is confined in certain limits. We get speed because the train is confined to its road bed.

The scholar is familiar with the fact that to achieve success in his studies he must specialize.

It is dangerous for everyone to let all energy escape in any direction it chooses.

In fact the power of a force as well as a man is due to its confinement within certain limits. It is useless for us to talk about a man's being absolutely right or pure. He will have desires that beat against the cage of his will and threaten destruction. It is his duty as a decent individual to repress these desires and to confine his efforts in one direction.

All power in matter and all force in man are due to repression to a certain extent. In fact the business of education is to train a man to concentrate his faculties.

Self-expression, therefore, is not unqualifiedly to be commended. There are some things we must not express, for their repression in one direction gives us more power in another direction which we have chosen.

The Little Breadwinner

THIS little chap of twelve, hawking papers in the midst of the city's maelstrom, his clothes in tatters, his eyes eager and shifty, his voice hoarse with shouting—can you see the tragedy of his life? He left school at ten to help earn bread for his mother and brothers.

Yet, Daddy had great hopes for him. Looking down at the wee baby face he had said: I'll give the lad a good start in life—a lift on to the first rung of the ladder."

That was eleven years ago. Daddy had not counted on dying, you see. But he did die—died at the wrong time before his plans had worked out. GREAT STORM ON SUN'S SURFACE HOLES BIG ENOUGH TO HOLD EARTH

Sun Spots Are Moving To Edge of Sun, Soon To Disappear.

EFFECT ON WEATHER.

Atmospheric and Magnetic Disturbances May Be Expected.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Sept. 27.—On Sept. 15 the Astronomical Laboratory of Harvard University discovered an unusually large group of sun spots, just being brought into view by the sun's axial rotation, which represents a solar storm of extraordinary intensity.

The spot has been studied daily and the changes in appearance are clearly shown in the series of photographs obtained by L. B. Andrews, assistant in astronomy at the Students' Astronomical Laboratory at Harvard. One photograph shows the group as first seen, and others have followed the spots' movement across the sun's disc. The spot was nearest in line with the earth Sept. 20, and the last photograph, taken Wednesday morning, shows its approach to the west limb of the sun, where it will soon disappear.

The disturbed area is about 100,000 miles in extent and either one of the dark hole-like centres is big enough to engulf the earth completely. And the sun is big enough, if it were hollow to contain a million earths like ours without any signs of distension.

The dark spots themselves represent the heart of a storm centre where is raging a cyclonic whirl in the solar atmosphere that would make any disturbance on earth, even that in Florida, seem extremely small.

"If one asks if tornadoes on the earth are attributable to sun spots," says Prof. Harlen T. Stetson of Harvard's astronomical department, "we can say at present that that is purely a matter of speculation. Although no direct connection has been established between sun spots have marked electrical and been known for a long time that sun spots have marked electrical and magnetic effects upon the earth, and we may quite safely predict that good long-distance radio reception and sun spots do not thrive in the same market. Sun spots occur in regular cycles of about 11 years. The last maximum occurred in 1917, and the maximum we are now approaching should occur about 1928 For the next two or three years the solar storms should increase in number and size and even larger spots than the one photographed here may be anticipated.

"Obervation of the sun's heat by the Smithsonian Institution have connected a variation in the sun's radiation received by the earth with the changes in the sun-spot cycle, but whether it will be hotter or colder in a given locality with the appearance of large sun spots it is hardly yet possible to predict. That may yet be possible in the future when observations of the sun's changing activity are more complete. Meanwhile aurorae and other atmospheric and magnetic disturbances may be expected to continue to increase in accompaniment of the sun spot cycle."

LOSS ESTIMATED AT $970,000,000

WARRINGTON, Eng., Sept. 27 (Canadian Press)—Sir Philip Cunliffe Lister, president of the board of trade, estimates that the direct loss up to the present time on output alone in the protracted British coal tieup probably is not less than £200,000,000 (about $970,000,000).

Sir Philip, in a speech here on the coal situation, also said that there were additional indirect losses which no one could estimate.

TOLL INCREASES AT ENCARNATION

Now 178, With Belief That More May Be Found Under Debris.

ASCUNSION, Paraguay, Sept. 27, —(Canadian Press.)— The toll of dead in Monday's hurricane at Encarnacion has reached 178, according to latest advices received here. The injured now number 300, of whom 18 are in a serious condition.

The debris on the disastrous scene has not yet been completely removed and it is believed that many victims may be buried in the ruins.

Survivors are paying tribute to the heroic action of the first engineer of the Encarnacion power plant, who met death while cutting off the electric power during the height of the storm. His action is believed to have prevented the possibility of the entire city being destroyed by fire.

Escaped Circus Animals Causes Panic In Village

VALENCIENNES, France, Sept. 27.—(Canadian Press.)—Eight lions, two tigers and two bears escaped from a circus here early Saturday evening and caused a great panic throughout the city. All the animals were captured before daybreak. In the round-up three circus attendants were injured, nine severely.

One full-grown lion calmly entered a safe and most of the customers vanished without paying. Four alone remained in their chairs, one laughing loudly and declaring that he had "seen them before." The lion seized a leg of mutton that was on the safe counter and went out the back door. A tiger walked into a butcher shop and ate an entire lamb. He was captured fast asleep.

A tardy home-goer met a lion on a street corner. The king of the jungle sniffed his hand and went on, but the man remained in a dead faint. Another lion smashed in the door of a hatter's shop, curled himself up on a pile of hats, where he was captured in his sleep.

DROWNED FISHING.

Ottawa Man Falls From Boat at Black Lake on Saturday.

PERTH, Ont., Sept. 27.— J. R. Anton, aged 51, of Fifth Avenue, Ottawa, chief clerk of the Ottawa Dairy Ice Cream Company, was drowned at Black Lake, 12 miles from Perth, Saturday morning. Seemingly he over-balanced while fishing and his boat capsized. Mr. Anton was married and leaves three children. His eldest son, Norman, is a well known athlete and a member of the Rideau Athletic Club of Ottawa.

KEENE NEWS

KEENE, Sept. 27.—The old time threshing bees will soon be in full swing again. On most of the farms itis more like a get-together party when the time comes to thresh out. Many are the arns told on the old straw stack of the times they used to have when threshing. Years ago there were no blowers or stackers and self feeders on the mills when it was a steady rythm of forks going from morning till night.

The best part of the whole job was at the dinner tables. Although the housewives generally excel themselves in cooking when the threshers come, why the tables are just crammed full of everything that is good to eat, and when the men come in and see everything steaming hot they certainly do themselves justice in full.

Generally after the evening meal the old itmers pull up their chairs, out come their pipes and back comes old memories of long ago.

The younger fellows generally look upon the threshing as a time to have a little extra fun, especially if an old hen's nest full of eggs is found or the man at the blower turning it on the fellows on the straw if they forget that they have a fork. This is the time when the farmer knows how much he will get for his hard work and it is a sight to gladden any man's heart to see his granary filled to overflowing.

AN ANTIQUARIAN'S PARADISE.

I can conceive of few cities in Europe where an antiquarian might dream that he was in Paradise, compared to ancient Toledo in Spain. Walk through its precipitous and crooked streets where you will, its chaos of granite and bricks, beams and iron, and the expert eye will glisten at the treasures to be seen. The homes you pass have housed Goth and Moor, Jew and Spaniard, who probably never knew the value of their secrets. Arcades, vaults, ogives, windows, colonnades often incredibly covered with coats of whitewash, which when scratched reveal sculptures, arabesques, tracery, foliage and fantastic animals. On the doors of many will be found ancient coats of arms and bearings. Balconies of ancient wrought iron, massive old doors, studded with metal bars and decorated with strange knockers of forgotten symbols. When you fill in the background of its streets with its history going back two hundred years before the Christian era, surely this is where the lover of old things would desire to roam!

Bigger, Jumpier Frogs Are Reported In Peru

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27.—Peruvian frog legs may become a familiar item on restaurant menus through the efforts of the division of fish culture of the Department of Commerce. Dissatisfied with the 100 p.c. variety now available, G. C. Leach, in charge of a division acting on request of California interests, today asked the Peruvian embassy for data on the possibility of importing Peruvian frogs, which are reported to be bigger and jumpier than the North American species.

This New Holeproof Stocking Proves Immensely Popular

Women asked us for the 2 new features it supplies

NOW with shorter skirts the stocking hem must be concealed—the top kept higher. Here are shown two features that give this fashion safety. Both are found in a stocking of pure thread silk that provides chic distinction. Run stop, reinforced heel and famous Ex Toe give it far greater wear. Today new Paris colors have just arrived in this new number. Be sure to see them.

PLUS these 5 fashion features:

1. Exquisite clearness. In sheer weights clearness comes only through uniformly even thread. The lack of it in cheaper silks causes unsightly shadow rings. So at greater cost Holeproof selects silk judged the world's finest.

2. Correct Paris shades. Paris authorities select the newest colors. A scientific dyeing process keeps them clear and bright. Holeproof's anti-fade treatment protects from fading.

3. Superlative transparency, even in the heavier weights. There is no cloudiness, no streaking. First the silk is tested, then it undergoes the special Holeproof treatment.

4. No loose ends. Loose threads mar appearance. So Holeproof carefully trims the inside of each stocking by hand.

5. No imperfections. Style vanishes with imperfections. And here Holeproof safeguards you by nine separate inspections. It is a fact that few other fine hose are so uniformly perfect.

CAUTION!

Do not confuse this wonderful new fuel with the many so-called "Anti-Knock" Gasolines on the market. And do not be misled by other gasolines purposely colored red to resemble Ethyl.

Our well-known Premier Gasoline has as much "Anti-Knock" quality as any gasoline made or sold in Canada with the sole exception of Imperial Ethyl Gasoline. The latter is more than a gasoline—it's a motor fuel of super-efficient qualities.

For your protection, no dealer or service station will be permitted to sell Imperial Ethyl Gasoline through any pump that does not conspicuously display the official Imperial Ethyl Trade-Mark as re-produced in this advertisement.

THE HOME OF THE SILVER BIBLE.

My Swedish excursion brought me to Uppsala, the Swedish Oxford, for its great university was founded in 1477. The Uppsala Cathedral took up some of my time, for it is the largest in Sweden and was commenced in the year 1200 and took 155 years to complete. Here is buried Gustavus Vasa and his consorts and also many others with renowned names. There also is the tomb of Carl von Linde, or Linnaeus, as the great botanist is better known. Emanuel Swedenborg, the founder of the Swedenborgians, also lies interred in this beautiful cathedral. Uppsala Castle which dominates the town also deserves a visit to honor its nearly four hundred years. At the University I came across that famous treasure of the North, the Codex Argenteus, the Silver Bible, a translation into the Gothic language of parts of the Gospels, made by Bishop Ulphilas. It is the only Gothic manuscript in existence and is supposed to have been written about A.D. 500. It formed part of the spoils of war taken by the Swedes from Prague in 1648.

WOMAN OPPOSES NAME "FLAPPER"

Head of Benefit Association Asks Members Not To Use Word.

PORT HURON, Sept. 27. — A death blow aimed at the word "flapper" is being struck by Miss Bina M. West, Supreme Commander of the Woman's Benefit Association, who believes that general use of the word, as applied to the modern young woman, should be eliminated.

Miss West saying, "I do not believe there is such a thing as a typical flapper," has asked the 5,000 members of the Girls' Clubs affiliated with the Woman's Benefit Association to drop the use of the word and to ask their friends to do so.

"Just what a flapper is I do not know," she remarked today, discussing her campaign against the word, "but I do not like the tone in which it is applied to the young girl of today, nor the implication that it seems to carry that the modern girl is silly, vain, empty-headed and unstable in purpose. Evidently the thought is that the girl who wears short skirts and bobs her hair cannot have a very serious outlook upon life.

"I like serious, studious girls, for I have known many of them, and what sweet, lovable characters they have often proved to be! And what wonderful wives they have made for the men who saw the beauty behind their demure exterior! But also, I admire and love the girl who likes fun and laughter and who can meet her brothers and their male friends on a common level of jolly companionship.

"Would you call my fun-loving friend that I have described a 'silly flapper' and shake your head at her, and moralize about the good old days when you were young? Well, I wouldn't. There are venturesome spirts in every age who go beyond reason, and there may be in this, but there are thousands of girls of today living healthy, normal lives and the word 'flapper' does not apply to them.

"I remember the 'good old days' when I was young and wore street dresses dragging in the dust, the then prevailing style, and when some people shook their heads and moralized because I was one of a group of young women who actually thought they could organize and operate a fraternal benefit society for women. Quite flying in the face of nature we were in 1892, when Grover Cleveland was President, and there was much talk about certain women who dared to ride bicycles, some of them even boldly donning bifurcated skirts (about as immodest a garment as a nurse's uniform) and riding men's bicycles! Young women of today have gone far toward true freedom, physical, spiritual and economic since those days.

"For one, I fail to believe that there is morality in modes, chastity in clothes, or virtue in veils.

"So, I think that we should forget the word 'flapper' and let the fine, enthusiastic, inquiring, unshackled young woman of today go ahead and seek out her own future, unhampered by criticism of those who probably know less than she about the real life of today that she has to face."

Miss West believes that if the 270,000 members of the Woman's Benefit Association, in 2,500 cities and towns, join with the 5,000 members of the Girls' Clubs at least a considerable portion of the nation will have dropped in the limbo of forgotten slang the word "flapper" and the thought it implies.

THE COD PORT OF EUROPE.

Nearly a quarter of a century ago my travels were mostly in the north, and many a week I have spent with the Newfoundland fishers off the Grand Banks, and mixing with the French colonists of St. Pierre and Miquelon. This spring it all came back again, for I was at St. Malo in Brittany, once the stronghold of a great fleet which operates the fisheries off the coast of Newfoundland, to which they go between March and October of every year. This year 93 vessels left with 3000 Breton sailors on board. It was an impressive ceremony watching Cardinal Charost blessing them before departure. Brittany is the place to see quaint costume, for these Celts came here from England fifteen hundred years ago, and if you will stay over a week-end among them, you will see them in their Sunday best, though I have seen them display their ancient finery on Feast Days also, or at the "Pardons," as they say. Their language is not unlike Welsh and they are very simple in their nature and manner. It is a rugged coast line and at low tide it is possible to walk to the Grand Bey, an islet where Chateaubriand is entombed.

SYNOPSIS

His father's warning—"Take women's love scornfully—and forget"—has made Juan the world's greatest lover. His cynicism is checked by Madonna-like Adriana Varanese; loving her, he reforms, but incurs the enmity of infamous Lucretia Borgia, who loves him, and Donati, her Kinsman, who covets Adriana. The Borgias contrive to have Juan catch Donati in Adriana's room under circumstances that destroy his faith. Cynical again he becomes the lover of Lucretia. To save her father, Adriana marries Donati. That loathsome man leads her into the bridal chamber—

CHAPTER X.—Continued.

She could not believe that it was really she who stood there, that she was married to Donati and must face what lay ahead.

Surely something would save her from this fate! Her prayers had seemed to be unavailing thus far, but now, when she so desperately needed help, surely it would come!

Donati threw his arms around her, drew her close to him, despite her efforts to draw away.

He drew her toward the bed, paused to kiss her on her smooth, white forehead and cheeks, and then on the delicate curve of her throat. He was laughing to himself, gloating over the prize that he had won.

She looked up, met his eyes. They were dilated, and their expression made her cry out in alarm. His lips were parted, moist; his clutching hands were moist and hot, and their touch made her tremble. Never had she seen anything so hideous as his face, never had she known such terror as he aroused.

Her fright amused him.

"You cannot escape me now," he told her, triumphantly. "You are my wife now, little one, and this is our wedding night."

It seemed to her that she was choking, that she could not even cry out again, because the cry would be stifled in her throat. She wanted to scream, wanted to escape, yet knew that even if he released her in that instant her limbs would not support her.

Donati picked her up, carried her toward the bed. There was a movement of its velvet hangings.

Juan, a sardonic smile on his lips, stepped from behind them.

Donati stood for a moment as if turned to stone. He seemed hardly to know it when Adriana slipped from his arms.

"We are congenial souls," murmured Juan, advancing a step. "I anticipate a charming evening."

With a snarl of rage Donati leaped toward him. Juan, laughing scornfully, drew his sword. Donati's flashed in the candle light, and in another moment they were fighting, back and forth over the open spaces of the great room, Donati inspired by rage, Juan cool, malicious, amused even when Donati had him at a disadvantage.

It was at such a moment that Adriana, fearing for the man she loved, screamed his name and a warning: "Juan—be careful!"

The group in the room below caught the words. There was an instant's surprised silence; then, led by Cesare, they streamed up the broad stairs, a colorful line, and into the bedroom.

Cesare, at their head, saw at once what was happening. Amused, he signalled to the others to advance no further.

A woman somewhere behind him laughed softly.

"How delightful, to have this added entertainment!" she exclaimed. Others laughed, murmured among themselves. What a spectacle! There were expressions of surprise, discreetly uttered, that this Don Juan, known to be favored by Lucretia Borgia, should be sacrificed thus to make a holiday entertainment. But then, no doubt the beautiful Lucretia had tired of him, and sought thus to rid herself of his presence. And of course Donati would make short work of him!

Not one of them suspected the truth. They would not have believed that even the daredevil Juan would defy the Borgias by stealing into their cousin's bridal chamber and attacking him.

Donati grew desperate, his thrusts wilder; blood streamed from the cut made on his cheek by Juan's blade. Juan began to play with him, with a grim humor that earned its nod of approval from Cesare.

Then, suddenly, it was over. A last mad thrust on Donati's part had endangered Juan, and with a sudden twist and straightening of his arm he drove his sword through the other's body.

Donati staggered, fell crumpling to the floor. And Juan faced his audience, still smiling.

Adriana, sobbing, ran to her father. Cesare gave a curt order to two of the men who stood near him, and they ran forward to seize Juan. He did not try to escape; he had known that this must come, just as he had known that he would kill Donati. Nor did he care.

"Arrest him for the murder of Count Donati!" Cesare ordered. "Throw him into the dungeon of St. Angelo!"

Adriana cried out wildly, would have gone to Juan, but her father held her tightly in his arms. A look of resolution came over his face, as she clung to him, sobbing like a frightened child.

"This is our chance to escape forever," he whispered to her. "Go, and wait for me outside the courtyard."

Adriana looked up at him questioningly.

"Go!" he repeated, and obediently she took her arms from his neck and turned toward the door. One of Cesare's retainers stepped forward to stop her. Varanese drew his sword, and as the man stepped back Adriana slipped out of the door. Like a frightened bird on the wing she made her way down the stairs, while at the top, fighting valiantly, her father won redemption for the suffering he had cost her.

It could not be a long drawn out fight; he was too old, and not strong enough. But the fighting spirit of the Varaneses, never very strong in him came to his rescue, and when at last he fell it was with the knowledge that as a result of that sharp, bitter duel he did not die alone.

The sound of the confusion within the palace brought the guards running. They hardly noticed Adriana, who sped past them, pale as the ghost of her own happiness, her wedding veil fluttering about her, her wedding gown dragging on the rough stonse of the courtyard.

The strand of pearls about her throat broke, and the jewels went scattering into the shadows. They had been the gift of Lucretia Borgia; Adriana had hated the feeling of their smoothness on her skin, when they were put around her neck earlier in the evening.

She ran, panting with fear, until she was outside the courtyard. Where could she hide? Wildly she stared about her. At any moment the Borgia's soldiers might come to find her—she must escape them, yet must remain near at hand, to be there when her father came.

Not far away was a niche in the high wall. She crept into it, huddled there, shivering in the cold night air, to wait for the father who would never come to her again.

In the palace Lucretia stood watching, her face a mask for the emotions that surged through her. The confusion lessened a little. Now she could see Juan, standing there with a soldier grasping each of his arms. The sword with which he had fought so magnificently lay on the floor at his feet, its blade broken by the ruthless feet of the hirelings who had obeyed Cesare's orders.

A Frock Expressing Smart Simplicity in Every Detail

Nothing is more charmingly created to soften the severity of a straight-line dress than the cascade jabot as used on this model, and which falls from beneath a well-fitting collar. Shirrings at the shoulders are indicative of the newer mode, and a finely plaited skirt front lends a youthful swing. The back is in one piece, and the introduction of a narrow belt is another feature of the mode. NO. 1422 is for misses and small women and is in sizes 16, 18 and 20 years. Size 18 (36 bust) requires 4⅝ yards 39-inch figured material; ⅛ yard plain contrasting. 20 cents.

YOUR JEWEL COLOR FLOWER

By Mildred Marshall

The sapphire is both the talismanic and natal stone for today. Blessed by the gods, it brings riches to men, and insures women the faithfulness of those they love. Indeed, it was supposed to lose its color as an indication of unfaithfulness.

Pink is today's lucky hue, and brings happiness and mental strength to those who wear it.

Today's flower is the violet. It should be worn, rather than used for decoration, and is symbolic of modesty and true love.

YOUR CHILD IS AN ANIMAL

Many mothers do not realize children require as much care as other young animals. Chickens, guinea-pigs dogs, etc., quickly die if fed exclusively upon white flour "part-grain" cereals, etc., yet mothers feed children largely upon these, then wonder why they have tonsils, adenoids, bronchitis, colds, enlarged glands. The wonder is such unnaturally fed children are not always sick.

Children, should eat home-cooked whole-grain cereals, milk, eggs, steamed, leafy vegetables, fruits, salads. And Roman Meal is one absolutely whole-grain cereal, made from three whole grains and bran. What one grain lacks is provided by another.

Dr. Jackson, dietetic editor, "Archives of Therapeutics", New York, a physicians' journal, advisor to 'Defensive-Diet League", a physicians' association invented Roman Meal. It is not a cure-all. He will send you his free booklet, "How to Keep Well," if you write to Robert G. Jackson, M.D., 322 Vine Ave., Toronto, Ont.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, but do not Compel.

FOR TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 28, 1926

(Copyright, 1926, by The McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Astrologers read this as an unfavorable day, one in which the aspects are all threatening.

Under this sway the mind is likely to be disturbed and concentration difficult. For this reason it is well to avoid fatigue or unnecessary worry.

Persons who bear responsibility are likely to be irritable and impatient. It is not an auspicious rule under which to seek any sort of support or co-operation.

Those who desire employment would better delay search for positions until a more promising rule prevails.

Quick outbursts of temper, hasty words and impatient actions, are supposed to be encouraged under this rule of the stars.

This is a most menacing sway for labor making for discontent and strikes.

Old persons may suffer from this direction of the stars which causes them to succumb to slight physical disorders.

In the coming year progress is to be even more rapid than it has been in the past, astrologers predict, for there is to be accelerated movement in the domain of thought.

High tension of nerve and brain are to be prevalent and increase of insanity and mental diseases is foretold.

Persons who deplore the prevalence of scandals and the increase of libel suits may find comfort in the fact that the seers foretell a near turning-point when the human race will begin to realize its divinity.

Children may rejoice in the promise that Christmas is to bring them many novelties in toys, due to planetary influences which are said to encourage odd symbolisms in the form of playthings.

Persons whose birthdate it is may have many changes and may experience unforeseen conditions in the coming year.

Children born on this day probably will be artistic and fond of all beautiful things. These subjects of Libra are gentle and affectionate, but they are likely to have unsettled modes of living.

ALETHEA

Alethea, though not in common usage, is a most important name. It comes from the Greek Alethia, which in turn was evolved from the Greek "a" and the word meaning "to hide," and thus may be translated as "truth" or "sincerity."

The first appearance of the name is recorded in 1411, when Aletha, of Padua, lived. It was Mona Maria Aletea, a Spanish princess for whom Charles I. of England journeyed to Spain while he was Prince of Wales.

Alethea was the form which appeared in the famous Saville family and was given vogue through its prominence. But perhaps the most famous and memorable Alethea was the lady to whom the captive cavalier penned the much-quoted lines:

"Stone walls do not a prison make,
Nor iron bars a cage."

To Alethea was given the additional interest of naming the youngest bride known to English history: in 1669, at the age of nine. Alethea Brandling was married to a man named Henry Hitch. The name proved very popular in England and Ireland, where it is sometimes contracted to Letty.

Alethea, meaning wholesome, has no connection with Alethea,—the former seems to have belonged solely to the unfortunate mother of Meleager.

Coral is Alethea's talismanic stone. It has the power to drive away evil spirits, and to protect its wearer from danger and disease. Thursday is her lucky day and 5 her lucky number.

LOVE LETTERS THAT MADE HISTORY

(By Joseph Kaye.)

ANETINO AND ANGELA SARI

(The McClure Syndicate, Inc.)

In the fifteenth century there lived one of the most extrordinary adventurers that history has known. He was Aretino and bears the title of "The Scourge of Princes." His gentle practice was a species of blackmail and extortion, with the victims the princes and nobility of his time. Yet in spite of his nefarious activities he was held in the greatest respect by the powers of the land and even by the clergy and letters addressed to him by princes flatter and praise him abjectly.

Aretino was the son of a shoemaker, a man so insignificant that even his surname is unknown. The name "Aretino" which his celebrated offspring adopted, is derived from his birth-town, Arezzo. Aretino passed most of his life in Venice, where he lived in state. His scheming kept him in plenty of funds and his attachments to great nobles gave him the fear and respect of the populace. Aside from his political activities, Aretino was an author and a prolific writer of comedies and letters, and these works have come down to us and are elevated to the rank of literature.

Aretino never married but his loves were numerous. The letter below was written by him to a Venetian lady of pleasure named Angela Sari. He passed beneath her balcony one evening in a gondola and the shimmering reflection of her beautiful face on the waters of the canal attracted his attention. Thereafter he owned himself "burned by her beauty" and capitulated.

"I gave you the palm among all those who have lived your joyous life," he writes. "License with you always wears a decent mask. Whoever lavishes his gifts on you is really persuaded he is the gainer. How do you manage to make so many new friends without losing the old? You distribute so well your glances and your smiles and your favors that no one complains, and quarrels never come near you."

By a peculiar turn of his character, Aretino was a very fond father and he idolized his two daughters, whose mother was a passing love.

HER OWN WAY

by WAY

A GIRL of TODAY

A FIRST KISS

"It is very becoming, Miss Dean," said Joan's maid, grudgingly, as she threw the white ostrich feather and velvet wrap over my white gown.

"Thank you, Sarah," I said perfunctorily, as I pinned the white orchid at my shoulder, which I took from the great sheath that I had found in my room when I entered.

There was no name on the card—just this sentence had been written—"For the girl who had convinced me that this is a beautiful world after all."

"Is Miss Meredith ready, Sarah," I asked.

"Yes, she is waiting, Miss Dean."

I stepped out into the hall hurriedly and ran straight into the outstretched arms of John Meredith.

"I beg your pardon," I stuttered.

"Don't, please," he said, as his arms clasped me so tightly that I could hardly breathe. Then before I knew what he was going to do—before I could get away from him—his lips closed my eyes and afterward dropped to my mouth avidly. These kisses were rough, so much so that they almost bruised my face, so hard and quickly were they given.

So that is the first kiss a man gives a woman, I thought to myself, as I drew out of his clinging arms. I opened my eyes and looked straight into John's—he blushed like a girl.

"Forgive me," he stammered.

"I don't know whether I will or not. Did it strike you, John Meredith, that I was the kind of girl who would stand for promiscuous petting immediately you met me?"

"I don't know what you mean by petting—I have never kissed a girl before in my life, and you, Judy, only struck me as the sweetest woman in all the world.

"Judy, forgive me, I couldn't help it. Dear girl, I love you—I more than love—I—I—oh, the English language is so inadequate to express what I feel for you."

He came forward again; I tried to push him away, but he was stronger than I thought, and he drew me into a little alcove beside where we were standing and pulled me down beside him on a divan; again his mouth sought mine.

"Stop, John. It does not excuse you at all because I am the first girl you ever kissed and I must say you do it like a veteran. However, you must know that someone might be coming along this hall at any time. What if it were Joan, what would she think of me?"

"Joan would understand, Judy, she has been in love, and I think that her love for Barry Cornwall was her first glorious rapture as mine is for you. Judy, is it nothing to you that I am giving you my first kisses, is it nothing to you that for me you are my dream of love come true?"

FASHIONS

By HEDA HOYT

(Written for the United Press).

NEW YORK, Sept. 27 (United Press).—Hat ornaments and pins are being used at the rear of the hat as well as at front or sides. Many of the newer turbans drape at the rear, the drape being held in place by a jeweled pin or ornament. A great many hats use no ornamentation whatever, relying upon the simple hatband as a trim.

The feather boa is conspicuous in the shops although we see few of them worn on the streets. Occasionally, however, we see some smart women using the feather neckpiece as an accessory for the early Fall frock. A boa shading from tan to deep reddish brown appeared on the Avenue yesterday in combination with a tan crepe gown and small reddish brown velvet turban and one must admit that during these last warm days the boa is preferable to the fox fur piece which we see in numbers.

The majority of Fall and Winter coats are made with straight-wrap lines, long narrow shawl collars and narrow sleeves terminating in narrow cuffs. Both fur-trimmed cloth and fur models adhere to these lines as a rule.

The Dolman type of evening shawl or coat is by all means the smartest this year. Loose wrappy lines and gorgeous materials and furs outnumber the tailored types of wraps which found favor with smart women last Fall. Brocade combined with velvet, the velvet forming a huge collar and the lining are conspicuously beautiful. Printed velvets trimmed with fur and lined with gold or silver lame cloth are included among smart models. Again we find gold or silver lame cloth used as the outer wrap and lined with a bright-hued velvet. Some of these models are reversible so that they may be worn with either side out.

Black hats are far more numerous than colored ones at present. Some of the smart imports of black have trimming touches of pinkish tone. Next to black in popularity we find claret and wine red shades of felt. However, we fear to suggest this shade since it isn't the best-dressed women who are wearing it. Dull green may also be included among the favorite millinery colors.

TWICE-A-DAY

Present-Day Dental Opinion Urges Clearing Teeth of Film

The FILM ON TEETH to Which Science Attributes Many Tooth and Gum Disorders

MOST dull teeth and many serious tooth and gum disorders have recently been traced, by dental science, to a film that forms on teeth. It can be felt by running the tongue across the teeth—a stubborn coating that ordinary brushing does not successfully combat.

Film absorbs discolorations from food, smoking, etc. That is why, according to leading dental opinion, teeth look dingy and "off color."

Film clings to teeth, gets into crevices and stays. It invites and breeds the germs of decay. And that is why it is judged so grave a danger to the teeth by authorities.

Film is the basis of tartar. And tartar, with germs, is the chief cause of pyorrhea. That is why regular film removal is urged as probably first in correct gum protection.

Most dental authorities urgently advise thorough film removal at least twice each day. That is, every morning and every night.

For that purpose, obtain Pepsodent, the special film-removing dentifrice which leading dental authorities favor. Different from any other tooth paste.

Pepsodent curdles the film, then removes it; then polishes the teeth in gentle safety to enamel. It combats the acids of decay and scientifically firms the gums. It multiplies the alkalinity of the saliva. And meets, thus, in all ways, the exactments of modern dental science.

On dental advice, people are adopting this new way of tooth cleansing. Obtain Pepsodent, the quality dentifrice, at drug stores. Two months' supply at a moderate price—or send coupon for 10-day test. Use twice every day. See your dentist twice each year. Make both a habit.

UNCLE WIGGILY

Tod ays' Bedtime Story

By Howard R. Garis

(Copyright, McClure Syndicate.)

UNCLE WIGGILY AND THE SWEET FLAG

"Wait a minute, Uncle Wiggily! Wait a minute!" called Nurse Jane Fuzzy Wuzzy as the rabbit gentleman was hopping away from his hollow stump bungalow one morning.

"All right, I'll wait," answered the bunny. "But please don't tell me I have forgotten to put on my pink, twinkling nose!" he said as he laughed and felt with one paw. However, his nose was on all right, just where it belonged, between his bright eyes.

"I suppose you are going adventuring when you have done with your joking," said the muskrat lady housekeeper, who was a bit serious like, and not much inclined to fun.

"Yes, I am going adventuring," replied Mr. Longears. "May I have the pleasure of your company?" he asked politely, bowing with his tall silk hat.

"Oh, I'm so busy I couldn't think of coming with you," answered the muskrat lady. "But while you are hunting for an adventure I wish you would also look for some sweet flag."

"Oh, yes—sweet flag," exclaimed Uncle Wiggily. "It is now about the time of year to gather that. I suppose you want some to have in the bungalow during the winter, so if any of my little bunnies have a pain you can cure it with the sweet flag."

"That's it!" said Nurse Jane.

"I'll look for some," promised the bunny gentleman.

Off he hopped, down toward the brook, for there the sweet flag would grow, if anywhere, it being a plant that loves to be near water.

I suppose some of you, on reading the name of this story, thought I was going to tell about a waving red, white and blue flag with sugar on it. But I don't mean that kind of a sweet flag.

Sweet flag is the common name for a plant called calamus. It grows tall and green, like the "cat tails" in a swamp But it is a bit different. For the white root of the long, green calamus stalks is good as medicine, and when dried, and baked with a coating of sugar, is very good to eat, if you don't take too much.

Without its coating of sugar, sweet flag root bites your tongue, and too much of it would make your mouth smart as if you had taken mustard. So one must not take more than a nibble at a time.

Uncle Wiggily hopped along the path by the brook, and soon he saw, waving in the breeze, some tall, green stalks.

"Ah, there is the sweet flag!" said the rabbit gentleman. But when he had pulled up some of the green stalks, and had looked at the white roots on the end, he saw he had nothing but "cat tails," which wasn't what he wanted.

"Try again!" said the bunny, and he hopped on a little farther until he found real sweet flag, or calamus, this time. So he took the white roots home to Nurse Jane, who said:

"I will put them out on top of the woodshed to dry in the sun. And when the roots are dried I'll cut them into little round slices like buttons, put them on a pan in the oven with sugar and we will soon have candied sweet flag to eat and for medicine.

"Very good," spoke Uncle Wiggily, but a little later it was not so good, for he heard a voice out near the woodshed crying: "Ouch! Oh, dear! Oh, how my tongue burns! Ouchie, my lips! Oh, I'm all on fire inside!"

Running around back of his bungalow Uncle Wiggily saw the unpleasant old Bob Cat, with his silly little tail, running around trying to find water to drink.

Uncle Wiggily saw the unpleasant old Bob Cat

"Ho there, Bob Cat! Did you take some of Nurse Jane's sweet flag off the roof?" asked Uncle Wiggily.

"Sweet flag, is it?" cried the bad chap. "I took some white things off the woodshed roof, thinking they were good to eat. But, oh, how they burn my mouth! Let me get water quick! Sweet flag!! Huh!! I call it biting flag!"

"It does bite if you take too much and have no sugar on it!" laughed Mr. Longears. "But you should not have taken what didn't belong to you, Mr. Bob Cat!" And the bad chap shouldn't, I think. I don't know how you feel about it, but that is what I think.

Anyhow, when the sweet flag was properly sugared it was good to eat and the little bunnies each had a tiny nibble. And if the jumping Jack doesn't try to play marbles with the rag doll's shoe button eyes, I'll tell you again about Uncle Wiggily.

Everyone who enjoys thinks that the principal things to the tree is the fruit, but in point of fact the principal thing to it is the seed. Here lies the difference between them that create and them that enjoy.

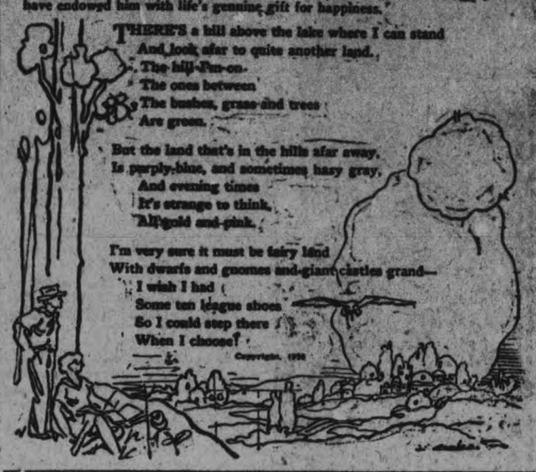
Blue Hills

By SHIRLEY RODMAN WILLIAMS

THE thing that keeps most of us going in life is the reaching out toward the blue hills over just beyond the valley, that entrancing land of just-over-there. Were it not for the looking toward the blue hills of the future with their intriguing mistiness the present would lose its zest. It's the hoping, the striving for attainment that makes life worth while—not what we already have. Teach your child to reach out toward life's blue hills with worthy ambitions and you will have endowed him with life's genuine gift for happiness.



A Fashion Model's Diary

By Grace Thorncil

SHE DESCRIBES A SMART FALL ENSEMBLE

Yesterday I had tea with a young girl who has just returned from a Summer spent abroad.

"Do get off early and come and meet me," Aimee urged over the telephone. "I've lots to chatter about."

I promised her to escape from Madame's fifteen minutes early for this is our busy season and I knew Madame could not spare me any sooner.

I hurried through a number of fittings during the afternoon, and finally was told they were through with me for the day.

This suited me exactly, and I hurried back to the manikins' room to change into my street clothes, for I had been wearing evening slippers and stockings, and evening underthings. We always have to wear the proper accessories for what is being fitted, and it means many changes during the day.

At last I stepped forth, and took a taxi to the hotel to save time.

I hesitated in the long lobby, for there were so many people there, I could not see Aimee at first.

Then a dashing young creature arose from her seat beneath the clock, and though the small hat was pulled very far down over her eyes, I could see that she was Aimee.

She came forward with a bright smile, and led me around the corner of the lobby into a cool and semi-darkened dining-room where everyone was having tea at small tables.

After the first greetings were exchanged, I had to say:

"Aimee, I've never seen you looking better. What a perfectly lovely ensemble you're wearing!"

Aimee looked down the faultlessly fitting tan crepe roma frock and the smart brown crepe satin coat lined to match, and said:

"This was one of the first early Fall things I saw in the Paris openings. I bought it on the spot, and I must admit I like it better than anything of the kind I've seen since."

Brown Crepe Satin and Brown Crepe Roma are Combined in This Lovely Outfit.

She slipped off her coat, and I saw that the frock had lone sleeves, comfortably wide all the way down, finished with a simple fold of the material at the wrist.

The little hat was brown satin, with a tan and brown grosgrain band.

THE EXAMINER CROSSWORD PUZZLE

This interesting number puzzle is worked in the same manner as cross-word puzzles. The letters indicate the starting point for each vertical and horizontal group of figures, and refer to the apporpriate definition in the key. 3—In what Shakespearean play does the character Polonius appear?
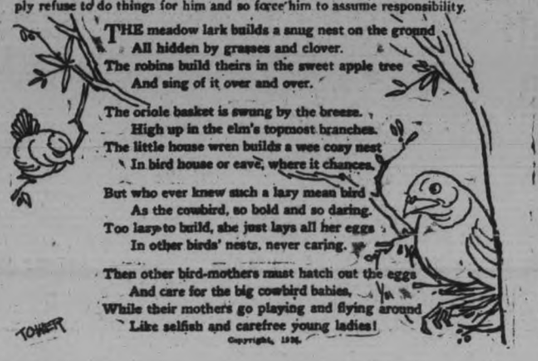
—How many sheets of paper are there in a quire?
5—How old is the Prince of Wales?
6—How many points are given for a grand slam in the game of bridge
7—Who wrote "Annabel Lee"
8—How many squares are there on a checker board?
9—Where did Columbus land when he had completed his first voyage across the Atlantic?
10—How many days are there in a fortnight?

The Lazy Cowbird

By SHIRLEY RODMAN WILLIAMS

A COWBIRD laid its speckled egg three times in a warbler's nest and each time the indignant little warbler built a false bottom to her nest and covered up the undesirable egg. If all birds would independently do the same the indolent cowbird would either become extinct or be driven to do its own nesting and nursery work, in self-defense. Have you ever known a child with cowbird traits? A child who avoided all possible responsibility and left everything possible for others to do? I advocate the same treatment for that child as the cowbird—simply refuse to do things for him and so force him to assume responsibility.



Daily Short Story

BIG RED EARS

"Big red ears that stick out—horn-rimmed spectacles—a pinch-back suit—and a foolish grin."

Sally Richart gave a last touch of the comb to her smart red bob and moved aside from the dressing-room mirror to make way for her friend.

"He's simply awful," she continued while she waited for Winnie to make herself beautiful. "And I'm so sick of the men around this place—I did hope that McNamara would get something worth while in the way of a bookkeeper as long as he fired poor, old Jamieson; but this thing—my gracious, he's terrible!"

The two girls, returning from their luncheon, locked arms and strolled back to the office.

"There he is—" said Sally with a clutch at Winnie's arm. The girls moved loftily by the young man coming down the hall. He looked at them shyly and hopefully but their glances passed over him as though he had been a lamp-post, nevertheless each itemized exactly the points already noted: ears certainly rather large and pink—spectacles—a last year's suit—and the friendly, eager smile.

From the top of her head to the sole of her foot Sally was as trim and smart as a fashion-plate, and she hated shabby, stupid people. Sally was a clever, pretty girl and she meant to get on. She had a gift of mimicry and scarcely a day passed that she did not have something new to tell of the ridiculous ways of John Hendricks, the new bookkeeper. Jeering laughter ran about the office like a darting flame whenever he came out of his inner office. But Hendricks never knew they were laughing at him. If the girls put their heads together and giggled, he chuckled in sympathy.

Poor Hendricks had a slavish desire to please and hold his job and the girls specially despised him when they found out he was doing old Jamieson's work at half his pay.

He hung around at lunch time to be invited to lunch with some of the boys, but nobody asked him—Sally's jeers had reached them too, and they thought him a "sap" of the worst sort. He had been in the office two months and nobody knew where he lived or anything about him—and nobody wanted to.

Then one day he had a bright idea—he thought about it all the week and on Saturday he kept putting his hand in his pocket to feel the little white envelope there.

It was a quarter to twelve and all the girls, freshly combed and powdered were waiting for the welcome twelve strokes that would release them for the half holiday, when Hendricks marched out of his office with an even larger and more amiable smile than usual.

"I've got two tickets for a matinee" he announced, "who'll go with me'" and waited for the rush.

Nobody answered, and Hendricks turned to the nearest girl, but she hurriedly said she had an engagement—and that engagement proved contagious—everybody had it. "Nobody would admit now that they weren't dated up," thought Sally shrewedly.

But Hendricks' smile began to fade and he grew a little white. Suddenly it occurred to Sally that his eyes had the look of a friendless dog, stoned and driven from every door. A sudden fury seized her at the shuffling girls and their covert smiles. Her cheeks flushed, and, as the boy got to the end of his painful circle, she stepped forward. "Why don't you ask me, Mr. Hendricks? I haven't got an engagement," she said.

A half-suppressed shriek of laughter went up around them but Sally scarcely noticed it, she was so amazed by the joy and gratitude that shone in John Hendricks' eyes. "I wanted to ask you most of all," he said later, "but I didn't dare."

When he took her to a cafeteria for lunch and marched her up to rear balcony seats, Sally wondered why she had done it. "I must have been crazy," she thought. But before the play began and during the intermissions John Hendricks told her his simple history. He had never gone anywhere with a girl before. His mother had been a widow and an invalid, and suddenly Sally saw a picture of the boy who went to work at fifteen and did most of the housework at night. Working in night classes after a day's toil left him no leisure, and he certainly had no money for pleasure. Now his mother was dead, he told her huskily, and he was alone. But, of course, he had a good job and he was going to work for promotion.

"Are you crying at the show?" he asked anxiously, "don't you think it's funny?"

"It's a perfect scream," she answered promptly.

One of the girls did not turn up at the office on Monday, and it developed that she was ill. When she got better she took another job and it was a year later that she met Winnie on the street.

"How is everybody?" she demanded, and when that was answered: "Is all the old gang still at the office? That dumb Hendricks, is he still there, working for promotion?"—

"Oh, no," said Winnie, "he's gone. You know Sally Richart took him in hand and started to improve him. She made him cut his hair so his ears didn't show so much, and wear rimless glasses, and buy some decent clothes, and then she improved him out of his job into a better one—now she's got him so much improved that she's going to marry him."

RACE OF PYGMIES FOUND IN GUINEA

Little People of Peaceable Nature Offer Explorers Gifts.

WELTEVREDEN, Java, Sept. 27 (Canadian Press) — In dense mountain jungles never before successfully penetrated by white men, the Dutch New Guinea expedition of American and Dutch scientists has discovered an entirely new group of pygmies. Details of the discovery were received here yesterday from the Associated Press correspondent accompanying the expedition. The despatch was carried by a bushman runner.

Entering a country in which previous expeditions had been decimated through fever and hardships, the scientists, after four months of travel, came upon the strange small people, living a quiet and secluded life, hemmed in by rugged jungle covered mountains and cut off from the rest of the Papuan tribes.

Matthew W. Stirling, of Berkley, Calif., one of the leaders of the expedition, described the bushmen as unusually friendly.

"Also," he said "contrasting with the loud yellings and menacing attitude of other natives below, the pygmies of the mountains talked in undertones or whispers, and seemed afraid of being too obtrusive. They were not timid, but quite intelligent and always cool and collected.

"The first thing they did was to give us all a present. The present consisted of their small bows and arrows, rattan arm bracelets, ornaments, bananas, betel nuts.

"Their whole material culture was entirely difefrent from that of the Papuans. They raise tobacco, sweet potatoes, bananas and pigs. They brought us a pig, and all gathered round to make a ceremony of killing it."

FAILURE TO PLAY AIR-TIGHT BALL COSTS FIREMEN SOFTBALL GAME TO FAMOUS PLAYERS SATURDAY

Puts Local Team Out of Running for Ontario Championship.

ERRORS COSTLY

Dunkerly in Best Form, But Has Poor Fielding Support.

Failing to play the air-tight ball that their opponents did, lost the Firemen the softball game in the Armouries on Saturday night and put them out of the running for the softball championship of Ontario.

The final score was 15-11 in favor of the Famous Players, winners of the Toronto Softball League.

Errors in the infield which meant five runs lost the game to the Firemen. In hitting, the Firemen had the best of the game, but their line-up was such that their poorest hitters were all in a group and when one did get on, the others following failed to come across with the hits.

Dunkerley, with lightning speed, deserved better support as he pitched one of the best games of his career, striking out seven of the hard hitting Famous Flayers, one of them being Rose, who connected for three home runs in the first game. Bell, for the other side, also pitched fast ball, but he is not as an effective pitcher inside as in outside playing.

"Jake" Hall was the hitting star of the game as he got three doubles and one single in five times to bat. Dobson also connected five times in five times to bat.

The errors in the first part of the game had a bad effect on the morale of the team especially the pitcher, and for a couple of innings, Dunkerley was rather wild, walking three men.

The fielding of the winners was the very best, only one error being chalked up against them, when Marchmont made a wild throw to Harper on first. Cartwright for the winners made a splendid running catch of Crary's deep left field hit in the eighth.

The fielding of Nichols and Crary was also very noteworthy, each pullink off some spectacular catches.

In the first Deniord walked, Harper singled, Marchmont struck out, Rose made first on Gimblett's errors with Deniord scoring. Bossin singled, scoring Harper, and Rose and Jackson struck out; Cartwright walked. Loser lifted one to Nichols.

Weese tried to bunt but failed. Westbrook walked, Delahaye struck out; Nichols singled; Crary hit one to left field.

The Famous Players went out three in a row in the second. Gimblett struck out; Hall doubled, Dobson singled; Dunkerley sacrificed scoring Hall and Dobson; Weese walked; Westbrook struck out.

The winners came back with two more in the third, Marchmont singled. Rose struck out; Bossin singled; Jackson doubled scoring Bossin and Marchmont. Cartwright made first on a hot drive to Delahaye; Loser and Bell went out on infield flies. The Firemen went out one, two three.

Famous Players scored three in the fourth. Deniord singled; Crary dropped Harper's fly; Marchmont popped one to Delahaye; Rose tripled, scoring Deniord and Harper; Bossin singled, but was caught stealing second; Gimblett failed to catch Jackson at first. Cartwright went out on an infield fly. Weese walked; Westbrook struck out; Delahaye singled; Nichols struck out; Crary singled, scoring Weese; Gimblett rolled one to Bell.

Loser, Bell and Deniord failed to reach first in the sixth. Hall doubled Dobson doubled, scoring Hall; Dunkrley singled; Weese sacrificed scoring Dunkerley and Dobson; Westbrook struck out; Delahaye singled but was caught stealing second.

In the seventh, Deniord popped one to "Jake" Hall first; Harper made first when Gimblett dropped the ball; Marchmont singled; Rose walked, filling the bases, but Dunkerley came through with the stuff and saught the next two out on infield flies.

Nichols struck out; Crary went down on an infield fly; Gimblett singled; Hall doubled, scoring Gimblett; Dobson singled; Dunkerley walked, filling the bases, but Weese hit one out to first.

Cartwright struck out in the eighth; Loser singled; Bell made first when Hall dropped the ball but was caught stealing second. Deniord singled; Harper doubled, scoring Loser and Deniord; Marchmont singled and Rose lifted one to Crary. Westbrook went down on an infield fly; Delahaye walked; Nichols was caught on a foul tip; Crary hit one to third base.

QUEEN'S DEFEAT BIG FOUR IN OPENING GAME

Intercollegiate Titleholders Win Exhibition Tussle in 1926 Rugby Opener.

TAME AFFAIR

Below What is Expected of Pre-Season Training Battle.

MONTREAL, Que., Sept. 27.—(Canadian Press).—Senior rugby made its debut for the 1926 season here Saturday when Queen's University, Intercollegiate champions, defeated the Montreal Big Four squad, 14 to 1, in an exhibition game which fell far below even what is expected of a pre-season training battle.

The game was a tame kicking affair, in which Carl Voss, of Queen's, outpunted the four different Montrealers who endeavored to match kicks with him. It was Voss's superiority in kicking which made the gains for Queen's and the majority of their points came in the same old way for the tricolor,—ability to take advantage of the other team's fumbles.

Eleven of Queen's points were directly the result of poor work by the local squad. After scoring two points by rouges in the first half, with a minute left to play big Monahan, counted an easy touchdown for Queen's. Montreal were in possession on their own 10-yard line. A kick was called and Monahan was allowed to sift through without opposition to block Burnham's effort and recover behind the line.

Again in the third quarter, Montreal was defending in its own ten-yard area and, despite the fact that they were handling a greasy ball atempted to break through the line. The pass went wrong with fatal results. Jimmy Wright pounced on the ball and dove for Queen's second unearned touchdown. Britton converted with a beautiful drop kick.

Howard, Queen's middle wing, was knocked unconscious attempting to buck the line and was rushed to the Royal Victoria Hospital suffering from a concussion.

Montreal—Flying wing, Brookes; halves, H. Bennett, Sheppard, Booth; quarter, Harrison; snap, Parkes; insides, Stark and Destroishaisons; middles, Carruthers and Foran; outsides, Tucker and Consiglio; subs, Burnham, Lanthier, J. Bennett, Whittal, Dickson, Thomas Adams, Crowley, Rodgers, McCaig, Giles, Ross and Work.

Queen's— Flying wing, Britton; halves, Voss, Chantler and G. McKelvely; quarter, Baldwin; snap, Skelton; insides Shaw and Hamilton; middles, Howard and Monahan; outsides, Walker and Wright; subs, Clarke Reist, Curhan, Young, McPherson, Lindsay, Godwin, Inksetter, Greaves, Baird, Wilson, Hanford, Brown, Agnew, Stringer.

Referee, Joe O'Brien; umpire, Tim Murray.

PILE SUFFERERS

Can You Answer These Questions?

Do you know why ointments do not give you quick and lasting relief?

Why cutting and operations fail?

Do you know the cause of piles is internal?

That there is a stagnation of blood in the lower bowel?

Do you know that there is a harmless internal remedy discovered by Dr. Leonhardt and known as HEM-ROID, now by McDermid & Jury and druggists everywhere, that is guaranteed?

HEM-ROID banishes piles by removing the cause, by freing blood circulation in the lower bowel. This simple home treatment has an almost unbelievable record for sure, safe and lasting relief to thousands of pile sick sufferers, and saves the needless pain and expense of an operation. Don't delay. Try HEM-ROID today. It will do the same for you.

CUBS ARE TROUNCED

Dazzy Vance Shows Best Form of Year in Opener.

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—(Canadian Press).—Held scoreless for eight innings by two St. Louis pitchers, Cincinnati staged a rally in the ninth and scored two runs takine the final game of the season at Cincinnati from the now champions, 2 to 1. Fourteen thousand fans braved a bitter wind to witness the windup.

Brooklyn trounced the Chicago Cubs twice yesterday, 3 to 1, and 6 to 2, in the final game of the season for both clubs. Dazzy Vance flashed his best performance of the year in the opener, yielding but three hits and retiring 15 Cubs on the strikes, which equalled Vance's best major league performance for strikeouts established against Chicago in 1924.

Jess Petty twirled steady ball to win the second game.

The New York Giants took the final double-header from Philadelphia by the same score in each game, 3 to 2. This gave the Giants the season's series by 12 games to 7. Fitzsimmons yielded but six hits in the opener and won his own game in the sixth inning with a single which drove in the winning run.

In the closing fray Greenfield allowed only three hits, two of which were made by Cy Williams.

GORDON SOCCER CUP FINAL POSTPONED

Work Before Pleasure is Soccer Players' Motto.

NO OPTION

Local soccer fans were again disappointed on Saturday afternoon through the failure of the Thistle and Quaker Oats not playing the scheduled Gordon Soccer Cup Final at Nicholls Oval.

The Thistle F.C. executive had completed arrangements for their players to be present at the playing pitch at 2.45 promnt, in preparation for the kick off at 3 o'clock and the night before the Quaker Oats executive reported everything OK for the soccer tid-bit of the season but the game did not take place.

Up till 11.45 in the morning, the players anticipated the match but their prospects were nullified when they received instructions a few minutes later that six of the players must work the afternoon, which caused the Thistle Executive to inform the opponets of their predicament.

This situation created a great amount of work to the local secretary who had to notify all the players, also Mr. Kitney at Nicholls Oval who had made preparations for the field and the goal-nets fix up on the goal posts.

All soccer enthusiasts will agree that the palyers had no other alternative but work.

BROWNS LOSE TO YANKEES IN DOUBLE-HEADER

Babe Ruth Smashes Out Three Home Runs on Saturday.

YANKEES FEEL SECURE

Cleveland's Margin on Second Place Cut Down Two Games.

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—(Canadian Press).—The Browns took both ends of a doubleheader from New York yesterday, 6 to 1 and 6 to 2, but the Yanks with the American League's scalp securely tied at their belt were not worried much. "We had a hard fight but we finished fine and that's all that counts right now," said Manager Huggins, after Saturday's triumph for the Yanks. Babe Ruth, who smashed out three home runs on Saturday, one in the first game and two in the second, played only one inning yesterday. He had his forty-seven homers and a cowbell presented to him by a fan at the conclusion of Saturday's fracas.

Yesterday's contests at St. Louis saw reserves of both teams in action and Manager Sisler of the Browns in a pitching role in the second game. Sisler pitched two innings, walked two, struck out three and allowed no hits.

Cleveland's hold on second place was endangered yesterday when the Athletics took two games from the Indians, 8 to 5 and 2 to 0, thus cutting Cleveland's margin to two games with another to be played today. If Philadelphia wins tomorrow's contest and three from Washington, the Indians will be crowded from second place. Ehmke outpitched a relay of Cleveland pitchers in the opener while Walberg proved effective in the second game.

Detroit's heavy artillery, Manush, Fothergill and Heilmann, unlimberin yesterday's doubleheader at Detroit, the Tigers beating Boston, 11 to 2, and 5 to 4. It was the Tigers' last appearance of the season and they celebrated by falling hard on Zahniser and Welzer in the first game, and getting to Wingfield late in the second. Manush apparently clinched the American League batting title, making six hits in nine times at bat.

The White Sox closed the American League season in Chicago yesterday by defeating Washington, 7 to 4. The local drove Jones off the hill in the third inning and then hit opportunely again Marberry and Loftus.

FOOTBALL SCORES

NEW YORK, Sept. 27 (Canadian Press) — Football, struggling for a place on the already crowded athletic horizon, celebrated its eastern getaway with a string of upsets and unusually close battles. Not the least of the surprises was Cornwall's hard battle to down the Geneva eleven by the slim margin of 6-0. The Big Three get into action next Saturday.

Draw Match With Dunfermline Athletic Places Them in Third.

PAISLEY SECOND.

GLASGOW, Sept. 27 (Canadian Press).—Dundee lost the leadership of the First Division of the Scottish Football League on Saturday when they were played to a draw on their own ground by Dunfermline Athletic. This creditable performance on the part of the Athletic, who are playing their first season in Senior soccer, was sufficient to place Dundee third, the Rangers taking command of the league with Paisley St. Mirren following next.

Saturday's games saw the defeat of both Airdrieonians and the Celtic, the former falling before Morton at Greenock and the cup-holders succumbing to the Hibernians at Easter Road. This was Celtic's first defeat of the season and was administered by a margin of one goal.

Aberdeen also encountered their first reverse when Rangers took their measure by three goals to two at Ibrox Park, but in spite of this result the Aberdonians retained their fourth place in the league.

St. Johnstone furnished a surprise by travelling to Hamilton and handing a four goals to one defeat to the Academicals, a feat that was duplicated at Kilmarnock where Heart of Midlothian got the better of the Ayrshire club.

The second win of the season came Queen's Park way Saturday, when they secured the points by the odd goal in seven from Partick Thistle. The amateurs had had a series of four defeats, relieved by a victory over Dunfermline, but they piled up figures in the loss column again when St. Mirren beat them a week ago. Their victory over Partick was timely and much needed.

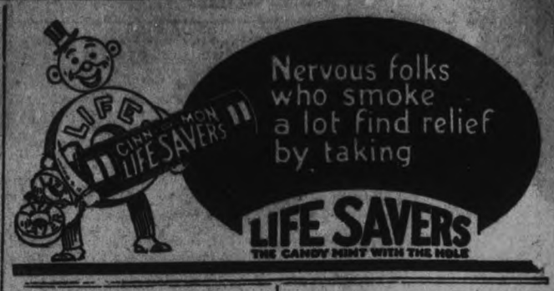
American's Criticism Shocks Loyal Verger

HALIFAX, N. S., Sept. (C. P.)—Writing in the Canadian Motorist, Lorraine Gould tells of a visit to St. Paul's Church in this city which, she says, recreates early Canadian history, and with its Royal pew and Royal gifts brings before us our parentage.

"We joined the verger and the party of United Staters to whom he was telling stories of precious relics; finally we went with the verger to see the museum collection in a room of the church. Before we had quite completed the round of these, a nasal voice announced 'We are coming to sign our names in that book too.' The verger courteously went through his little speech, 'You may sit in this chair where sat the Prince of Wales, use the pen he used, and sign your name in the book bearing his signature,' 'Wa'll.' drawled Democracy's daughter, 'he doesn't write a very good haud, and you can tell him that from me the next time he visits here.' 'The aunt and I bolted unable to control our mirth. I have never seen so shocked a visage as the loyal merger's."



YOUNG'S POINT SCHOOL FAIR

Ideal Summer Weather Added Much to Success of Event.

MANY PRIZES

YOUNG'S POINT, Sept. 27.—On Tuesday, September 21, Young's Point held its annual School Fair. There were about one hundred people in attendance, and the success of the occasion was very gratifying. Ideal summer weather added much to the pleasure of the afternoon. Six schools were included in the section.

The school parade was as usual one of the popular features, but this year they paraded on the school grounds, each school separately.

S.S. No. 6, Smith, carried off the prize for the parade. Miss Sharpe was the teacher. The judges commended the teacher and the pupils for the way they responded to the commands given.

Daisy Wilson of S.S. No. 8 won the five dollar gold piece donated by Mr. Elliott for the public speaking, the subject being "The National Flag of Canada."

Myla Bogue of S.S. No. 6 won the singing contest.

A good programme of races was run off before the Fair was brought to a close.

The exhibits, which were in a large tent, were of a splendid quality and very numerous.

The following is the list of prize-winners:

Oats in sheaf—S.S. No. 12, Orville Miller.

Field corn—S.S. No. 14, Douro, Morley Bullock.

Sweet corn—S.S. No. 14, Douro, Truman Dunford.

Among those from a distance noticed at the School Fair were: Mr. and Mrs. John Hill from Deer Bay; Mrs. Angelsy from Peterboro; Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Wilson, Buckhorn; Mr. John Wilson, Toronto; Miss G. Brown, teacher at Buckhorn; Mrs. John Darling and Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Rosborough, Lakefield.

NEW STEWARD IS APPOINTED

Lorne Evans Succeeds F. J. Laver on Official Board.

NORHAM NEWS

NORHAM, Sept. 27.—At the Official Board meeting held in Mount Olivet United church on Wednesday evening, Lorne Evans was appointed steward to fill the vacancy resulting from the death of Fred J. Laver. Mr. Evans was also appointed Recording Steward of the Norham Circuit. Mr. Laver had also filled this position for several years. Aubrey Woof was elected delegate to the Cobourg Presbytery which meets in Oshawa on Tuesday, Sept. 28th. No action was taken re the appointment of delegates to attend the service council which meets in Massey Hall, Toronto on Oct. 5-7.

A miscellaneous shower was tendered Mr. and Mrs. Harry Reddom, at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Reddom, Brighton township, on Tuesday evening. Mr. and Mrs. Reddom were married in Campbellford on Wednesday, Sept. 5th. They had been for a motor trip around the lakes and upon their return were met by some 75 friends and relatives who gathered to wish them bon voyage through life and express appreciation of Mr. Reddom's faithful service in Bethany church and Sunday school. The guests were all assembled when the bride and groom arrived. After an hour or more of friendly visitation the gathering was called to order by Robert Ryckman, who spoke a few words of greeting and called for an address to the bride and groom which was read by George Clarke, after which Rev. T. F. Everson, pastor of the circuit, gave a short address welcoming Mrs. Reddom to the community, church and Sunday school. Mr. Reddom is a trustee of Bethany church and secretary of the Sunday school.

A dainty lunch was served at the close and the gathering dispersed at an early hour.

Laroy Newman left on Thursday for Toronto, where he intends spending a few days with relatives before entering the University, which opens on Sept. 28th.

Miss Orletta Gummer is visiting with friends in Toronto.

Miss Louisa Goodfellow has gone to Guelph where she is taking a course in the agricultural college.

Several new members were received into the United church here at the close of the service last Sunday morning.

Albert Vanblaricom has purchased the farm near Codrington, owned by the late John Dusenbury.

A new wire fence has been built along the west side of the parsonage property.

Miss Maude Isaac, of Toronto, is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Oney Isaac.

AUTUMN MEET AT THE WOODBINE

The autumn meeting of the Ontario Jockey Club at the Woodbine, Toronto, attracted the finest lot of horses ever raced over a Canadian course. Quality and quantity were there, and the racing generally was of a high order. The photograph shows how Commander J. K. L. Ross' champion Canada-bred Tatling outclassed her opposition in the Maple Leaf Stakes.

USE RUBBER BANDS.

The latest evolution of an ancient boyish pastime does not appear to be one that will add to the safety or comfort of the average Peterborough citizen. Among the boys of the city the use of rubber bands as slings, with moistened paper balls as missiles, has fallen into disfavor, and the popular pastime now consists of shooting pins at each other and at passers-by. Needless to say, none of the victims have so far expressed any marked preference for this kind of sport.

A meeting of all ladies interested in bowling at the K. of C. alleys is called for eight o'clock to-morrow (Tuesday) evening at the K. of C. Rooms.

THEATRE

AT THE REGENT

LAUGH RECORD ECLIPSED AT REGENT THEATRE.

"The First Year" John Golden's Stage Success Screen Hit.

It's your own loss if you don't arrange to attend the Fox Films production, "The First Year," now playing at the Regent Theatre. When the picture was seen for the first time it established a new record. It is far and away the funniest story that was ever enacted before a camera.

The picture comes to the screen with the reputation of being the cleverest comedy drama ever presented on the American stage. The celluloid descendant of the John Golden footlight hit is going to entertain thousands more than the original version. Aside from the fact that the story itself is excrutiatingly funny, the producers have invested it with a cast of prime favorites. Matt Moore, Kathryn Perry, John Patrick, Frank Currier, Virginia Madison, Margaret Livingston, Carolynn Snowden and J. Farrell MacDonald are all members of the star line-up.

"The First Year" refers of course to the first trying period of married life, a period of disillusionment popularly conceived as tragic but now shown by the makers of this hilarious film to be supremely comic. From first to last the picture is a series of laughable situations that hold the audience in a good natured mood.

The production is a masterpiece of humor. If you don't respond to every bit of it you are smile-proof. It makes no difference whether you are old or young, married or single—"The First Year"-is your picture. You'll love it and then you'll want to do all your friends a favor by recommending it to them.

BRITISH CONSERVATIVE PARTY PLANNING TO PREVENT LABOR FROM WIELDING POWER AGAIN

Diehards of Party Meet Opposition To Plans From Baldwin.

FEAR OF DEFEAT.

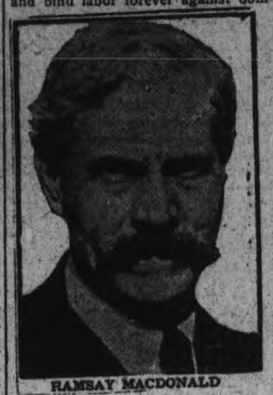
Change in Membership and Power of Lords Is Proposed.

By MILTON BRONNER

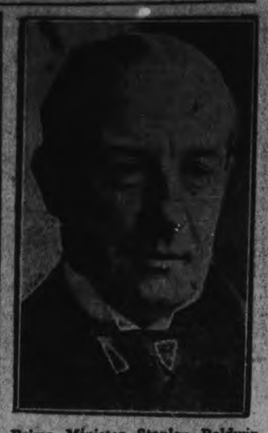
LONDON, Sept. 27. — Observers who thought the general strike of five months ago was the greatest labor struggle of all time will have an opportunity to change their thinking.

The greatest struggle, it appears will take place this fall, and the battlefield will be in Parliament.

The die-hards of the Conservative party are collecting strength for a mighty offensive against union labor. They will attempt to measure out punishment for the general strike and bind labor forever against dominating the government again or tieing up industry.



RAMSAY MACDONALD



Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin

Tories Are Bold

Emboldened by the collapse of the strike, the Tories plan to put the unions in a straight jacket as tight as the one imposed in Italy by Mussolini. There are just two deterring factors—Premier Baldwin, titular head of the Conservative party, who is unwilling to pursue a policy of revenge, and in the second place, the fear that extreme measures would cause such a revulsion of sentiment that Conservatism would be defeated in the next election.

The leader of the resistance will be the former premier, Ramsay MacDonald.

The die-hard programme briefly is:

1—Amendment of the Trades Disputes Act, to make unions liable for damages where they enter wrongfully upon a strike.

2—Secret ballots by union members—under government supervision—before a strike can be declared.

3—Drastic limitation of picketing.

4—Protection of Conservative and Liberal unionists from obligation to pay dues which would be used in backing the Labor party politically.

Strike Vote Asked

The object of the proposition to require a complete secret ballot before a strike may be called is intended to prevent sudden or general strikes. The Conservatives say, also that ballot stuffing would be easy unless there is government control, and therefore they demand such control.

This argument was furnished by the extraneous comment of a judge who passed on a labor case during the recent general strike.

The court gave it as its opinion that any strike called by a union or its officials, without a ballot when its rules require one, is illegal, in that its funds can't be used for the purposes of the strike. It held further, that any application of union funds in support of a breach of contract in organizing a strike—ballot or no ballot—was illegal.

Wider Attack

But even wider attacks upon labor are planned, both by acts of omission and commission.

The die-hards are afraid that labor may get command of the House of Commons. Therefore, while they have a majority, they want to "reform" the house of lords. Under the Liberal government of H. H. Asquith, now Lord Oxford, the lords were shorn of most of their power.

Practically all veto of money bills was taken away from them. Die-hards visualize a Labor government passing some sort of capital levy, with the lords helpless to block it. Therefore, they want a smaller house of lords in which some of the members would be hereditary and others elective by representative bodies of the community. They want this House of Lords to pass on money bills and to have other authority. In other words, they want a fairly permanent block in the path of the labor government, if one ever again materializes.

A Conspicuous Omission

The present Tory government is also responsible for a notable act of omission. In Washington in 1919 a draft convention was adopted designed to limit working hours to eight per day and 48 per week. Last March at a conference in London the ministers of labor of Belgium, France, Germany, Great Britain and Italy signed an agreement on its interpretation.

Belgium recently kept its words and passed the necessary bill. In Germany a bill has been drafted for submission to the Reichstag. France has done nothing. Italy increased the working hours. The present government of Great Britain allowed Parliament to adjourn without taking any steps at all. On the other hand, it adopted a "permissive" bill, allowing coal miners to work longer hours.

The annual regatta of the Intercollegiate Rowing Association at Poughkeepsie has not been won by an association member since the Syracuse eight flashed first over the line in 1920.

300 CHINESE CASUALTIES

Most of Those Killed Or Wounded at Wanksien Were Soldiers.

SHIPS RETURNED.

LONDON, Sept. 27 (Canadian Press).—Casualties among Chinese during the recent trouble at Wanhsien over the seizure of two vessels on the Yangtse River, totalled 300, according to official British advices to-day. Approximately 200 of these were soldiers, while others were civilians, wounded or killed by gun fire.

(Chu Chao Hain, the Chinese delegate, charged before the League of Nations Assembly at Geneva last Friday that more than 1,000 Chinese had been killed when British gunboats bombarded Wanhsien).

The official telegrams say the steamer Wanliu has been returned to the British naval commander at Ichang, bearing the bodies of Commander F. C. Earley and two British sailors killed in the fighting at Wanhsien. The steamer Wanhsien has arrived at Kwaichow and a crew has been sent to return it to the British.

Y. M. BUILDING IS RENOVATED

Repairs, Alterations and Redecoration Improve Appearance.

PLEASANT INTERIOR.

Thanks to the labors of cleaner, carpenters, painters, and decorators, the Y.M.C.A. building now presents a fine interior.

Special subscriptions from the Board of Directors and three other friends provided a fund which has been used for the renovation and re-decoration of the lobby, the reading room, the boys' room, and the game rooms.

The walls have been newly papered, and the rooms generally brightened up. In addition to the cleaning and decoration, new cork linoleum has been placed in the dining room.

The dormitories and hallways have been repainted in attractive colors, and new rugs have been placed in each room.

In the bowling alleys all defective work has been replaced, and the alleys finished with electric sander and entirely re-surfaced, are now better than ever. The gymnasium and locker rooms have also been redecorated.

Mr. Roper to-day expressed the hope that the members of the Y.M.C.A. would respond to the generosity and interest shown by the directors. He thought there should be a greater interest than ever before in the activities of the institution, and an effort by the members to obtain a larger enrolment for the coming winter, which he believed was destined to be a very successful season.

ROTARIAN SAYS MOST MEN ARE MENTALLY LAZY

"Tired Business Man" Wastes Leisure Hours Says Alex. Mowat.

PERSONALITY.

Rotary Urged To Support Children's Aid Society Tag Day.

"At least 90 per cent. of us are mentally lazy," declared Rotarian Alex. Mowat in the course of a most helpful address to the Peterborough Rotary Club to-day on the subject of "Personality."

Rotarian Mowat, after an analysis of what was meant by personality, dwelt briefly upon the manner in which personality could be developed both by association with others and by individual effort. In regard to the latter, he gave some very useful advice as to means of self-development. It was possible, he pointed out, to adopt simple health habits that would improve one's self physically.

"If there is one phrase that I am particularly annoyed at," said the speaker, "it is the expression, 'tired business man'." Modern business had a tendency to give more leisure time, and Rotarian Mowat regretted that so much of this leisure time was wasted. He would not deprive anyone of the pleasure of the movies, cards and other recreations, but there was much spare time that could be devoted to mental development. People should read and study more good books, see and study more good plays, possess more good pictures.

A hearty vote of thanks was tendered the speaker, whose addresses are always greatly appreciated by Rotarians.

Rotarian Andrew Brown reported a good surplus from the Rotary evening at the Duffus recreation hall, and on motion of Rotarians Jack Primeau and Andrew Brown, a vote of thanks was passed to Mr. J. J. Duffus for his kindness.

An aftermath of this bowling episode was a duet by Rotarians Brown and Jack Seels, who were losers in the special match, and had to sing as a penalty, although in protest it was pointed out that this was passing the penalty on to the whole club. Both were presented with bouquets of garden vegetables.

Mr. John Edgar, secretary of the Children's Aid Society, was present and asked for the moral and financial assistance of Rotary in connection with the Society's Tag Day on October 9th.

He was assured of the co-operation of the club in this effort.

Rotarian W. R. Morris called the attention of members to the International convention at Ostend next June. He is chairman of the On-to-Ostend committee, and was able to give preliminary information as to transportation details.

Past President V. J. McElderry was chairman to-day, and the attendance was large.

GIRLS' CONFERENCE.

Young Ladies From Y.W.C.A. Spend Week-End at Stoney Lake.

A very successful Girls' Conference was held under the auspices of the Young Women's Christian Association over the week end, at Mr. and Mrs. F. Brownscombe's cottage at Stoney Lake. Young ladies to the number of about fifteen attended and held a very enjoyable and inspirational meeting, at which the aims of the Association were emphasized in a striking way and the members present much benefited by the inspiration and jolly companionship afforded by the Conference.

On Saturday, before supper, a business meeting was held, and the evening session was devoted to an outline of activities and suggestions by those present, a review of "Our Responsibilty,' 'in which were emphasized the need of promoting the all-round ideal of the Association, bringing in new girls, creating a friendly spirit and helping with classes and activities. This was followed by a sing-song, the fine new "Y" song book being used stunts, refreshments, and a "Half Hour with the Stars."

On Sunday, the Bible Study period of the morning was devoted to consideration of "The Manhood of the Master," outlining his qualities, in His joy, magnanimity, indignation, loyalty to His cause, power of endurance, sincerity, self-restraint, fearlessness, affection, and scale of values. The Religious Program of the Y.W.C.A. was also outlined, with recommendation that the Christian spirit of the Association should permeate all classes by each member living up to truest ideals, and a review of the Bible Study Classes and Foreign Work.

In the afternoon, the report of the Findings Committee, composed of the Misses E. Outram, G. Glover and V. Peryer.

Those who loaned cars to take the young ladies to the Lake and bring them back included Mrs. T. Barrie Miss M. V. Jory, Miss P. Adams, Messrs. T. Brightman, J. Adams, N. Staples, H. Boyle, and J. W. Jackson.

From Sheep to Governor in 12 Hours

When the prize sheep of J. T. Bretour's herd at Burford, Ontario, opened his sleepy eyes on the morning of August 28th, he little thought that in scarcely more than twelve hours his luxuriant back would be worn as a top-coat by the Lieutenant-Governor of the Province of Quebec.

But that is just what happened and how the feat was accomplished was related by His Honor Lieut.-Governor Narcisse Perodeau, who referred to the smart garment he wore in opening the Canadian National Exhibition in Toronto recently.

"This overcoat dropped from the skies, "stated his Honor, which is just what it did.

Since no Lieutenant-Governor of a sister Province had appeared at the Canadian National Exhibition in an official capacity for over 20 years, the Executive of the Canadian woolen and Knit Goods Industry decided to mark the presence of the Hon. Mr. Perodeau in this way.

At 5 a.m. the best sheep in the herd of Mr. Brethour was shorn at Brantford by his nephew. Mr. Russell Templar. By 2 p.m. the wool had been scoured, dyed, blended, carded, spun, warped, woven, finished and shrunk, and a fine piece of herringbone tweed was given to Mr. Quinlan, a Brantford tailor. By 4 p.m. the coat was finished and ready to wear.

Then in a watertight package it was rushed by motor to a flying field, picked up by aeroplane and brought down at the Exhibition by Parachute Jumper J. L. Clapp, who jumped from the machine into the water, where he was picked up by a motor launch at exactly 5.45 p.m.

The Hon. Mr. Perodeau was accompanied by his daughter, Mrs. Yvonne McKenna, his A.D.C., Lieut.-Col. Papineau, His Honor Mr. Cockshutt, Lieut.-Governor of Ontario, Miss Cockshutt, and Colonel Fraser, all six being dressed in "All Canadian" costumes. His Excellency during his visit to the Exhibition inspected the Canadian Co-operative Wool Growers exhibit, which consisted of a miniature factory, operating machinery, and samples of many finished and raw products from all provinces in the Dominion. He also made a special visit to the Canadian Pacific exhibit and expressed his admiration of the model train from Wembley which is electrically lighted and operated and runs in front of a frieze which takes the observer from Quebec to Vancouver.

Wheat Values Rally With Eastern Buying

CHICAGO, Sept. 27 (Canadian Press). — Buying on the part of houses with eastern connections rallied wheat values to-day, after downturns at the start. Falling off in the amount of wheat on ocean passage attracted notice and so too did the corn market firmness associated with the further spread of the frost area. Opening unchanged to ½ off, wheat rose all around later to above Saturday's finish. Corn started at ½ down to 5-8 up.

Industrial Alcohol Active Massey-Harris Takes Drop

TORONTO, Sept. 27.—(Canadian Press). — Industrial Alcohol developed into an active leader during this morning's exceedingly busy session on the Toronto Stock Exchange. Alcohol held fairly steady, closing morning an eighth lower at 22 7-8, one of retrogressive stocks in general firmness conspicuous by its weaker tendency, was Massey Harris, which closed the morning 1 3-4 lower at 70 1-4.

Kelvinator was strong spot at 18, point higher. Atlantic Suger firmed a quarter at 26 1-4 and Canada Steamships preferred was three eighths firmer at 89 3-4. Canners strengthened a half at 66. Brompton was active but unchanged at 37 1-2 and International Petroleum, Unlisted leader, also closed unchanged at 33 1-8.

Castle Trethewey Active On a Dull Market

TORONTO, Sept, 27.— (Canadian Press)—Trading on the Standard Mining Exchange to-day was slow, with total sales aggregating 350,022 shares. Castle Trethewey was active with 18,600 shares traded in advancing two points to 137. Argonaut sold three points higher at 33 3-4 while Wright Hargraves declined three points to 865. Mining Corporation sold one point lower at 350 and Noranda also showed a downward trend of nine cents to 17.91. Keeley was one point higher at 164. Towagmac weakened two points to 325. Dome Mines advanced fifteen cents to 11.25. The majority of issues were unchanged.

Amer. Smelters Take Drop Strong Pressure On Steel

NEW YORK, September 27. Canadian Press. — Prices in to-day's stock markets lacked uniformity with frequent changes of control between the "bulls" and "bears."

United States steel common was under pressure most of the day, despite the circulation of rather vague rumors that an "important development' would take place on or before Chairmans Gary's 80th birthday on Oct. 8th.

Selling pressure was directed chiefly against American Smelting, which yielded in sympathy with another drop in silver prices in London and few specialties, such as Foundation Company and Warner Pictures A. Equipments pointed upward under leadership of Baldwin, and a demand for some of tobacco, public utility, merchanising, chemical and minor oil shares.

Van Sweringen issues, particularly Chesapeake and Ohio, resumed leadership of railroad group in early afternoon.

A salesman has to strike a man right to make a hit.

When it comes to getting there perspiration beats inspiration.

The time to keep cool over the coal situation is past. We must warm up to it before long.

Some people could say what they think and still be quiet.

Chancelor Wilhelm Marx, who has taken the German nation severely to task, declaring "to sneer, to criticize, to abuse the existing state of authority and at the same time refuse to help reconstruct the state in no way conducive to the state's welfare, and, moreover, it is most unpatriotic."

EX-LABOR PREMIER CRITICIZES HOUSE FOR NON-SETTLEMENT OF THE BRITISH COAL DISPUTE

Opening Session Reviews Cabinet's Attempts To Settle Tie-up.

NO PEACE SIGN.

Expected Government Will Vote Second Instalment of Relief Money.

LONDON, Sept. 28 (Canadian Press).—Yesterday's debate in Parliament on Great Britain's prolonged coal strike brought no sign of peace in the coal fields.

The day was the first of the two-day series of scheduled discussion of the tie-up that has held the country in the paralyzing grip of industrial warfare for nearly 23 weeks. Parliament's meeting yesterday was to confirm again the Government's emergency powers regulation during the crisis. To the House of Commons the opening session was occupied by lengthy reviews of the Cabinet's attempts to bring about a settlement which were broken frequently by sharp bursts of criticism from the Labor benches.

After the week-end speeches of the coal miners' general secretary, A. J. Cook, in which he talked about "an organized retreat," the public was prepared for new peace moves, but late last night none was forthcoming. Ramsay MacDonald, the former British Labor Premier, appeared to voice the general pessimism pervading the House when he declared he was sorry to say that the outlook seemed to be that the House would be meeting at this time next month again to empower Government to carry on during the emergency.

Premier Baldwin told the members that the Government was about at the end of its rope as a mediator. He criticized the mine owners for not accepting the Government's invitation to a three party conference and again urged the coal miners to return to work on the terms offered them.

The viewpoint of the owners, who evidently are satisfied with the drift of workers back to the pits in some districts, was not heard at great length during the debate, but Mr. MacDonald warned them that there was no sign of the miners' surrendering or of serious breaks in their ranks.

Mr. MacDonald said: "If the miners, some weeks from now, or perhaps some months from now, in some places go down into the pits again, shepherded by despair and starvation, the owners will then come to the Premier to thank him for his assistance, but there would be no triumph, for all that would have happened would have been the increase of hate and the banishment of hopes of peace and goodwill."

During the debate Chancellor of the Exchequer Churchill referred to a suggestion of former Premier David Lloyd George, that the mines should be taken by the Government. Mr. Churchill declared emphatically that the Government had no intention whatever of being led into a course of action which would lead to the temporary nationalization of the coal fields.

The House of Lords quickly confirmed the emergency regulations and adjourned for at least a month.

There was a general feeling in the lobbies last night that there are no prospects for an early strike settlement. There is a possibility that the House of Commons will sit most of this week so that it can debate the results of the National Conferenec of Miners' Delegates which will be held on Wednesday.

Esperanto Wedding Will Follow English Courtship

LONDON, Sept. 28.—A wedding service in Esperanto will be conducted for the first time in the history of the Church of England on October 9, when Stanley Coleman, a London lawyer, will marry Fraulien Muzza Schonau, an Austrian teacher, in St. George's Church here.

As Mr. Jackson does not speak any of the eight European languages known by Fraulein Schonau, their sole means of communication since they met in Salzburg two years ago has been the international language of Esperanto.

This is thought to be the first time a woman has been wooed and won entirely in Esperanto. Mr. Jackson unlimbered his Esperanto so handily that he outwooed a wealthy Count, also enamored of Fraulein Schonau.

RADIO OPERATOR SENDS MESSAGE

Kenneth Ormiston Declares Stories Published Without His Authority.

BEING SOUGHT.

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 28. — (Canadian Press)— The Times says it received a telegram yesterday from Windsor, Ontario, signed by Kenneth G. Ormiston, former radio operator, of Angelus Temple, who is sought in connection with the Aimee Semple McPherson case.

Message read:

'Stories published about me attempting to negotiate for immunity are without my authority. I have nothing to fear except a divorce action."

At Windsor Telegraph office it was declared the message was left under the door with sufficient money for its sending.

Ormiston, the object of nation wide search by officers is charged jointly with Mrs. McPherson and five others with criminal conspiracy to obstruct justice in connection with the Evangelist's disappearance.

Sought in Windsor.

WINDSOR, Sept. 28. — (Canadian Press). — Kenneth G. Ormiston, former radio operator at the Los Angeles Temple of Aimee Semple McPherson, who disappeared in May, shortly before Mrs. McPherson was kidnaped from a bathing beach, is being sought in Windsor as a result of a telegraph received yesterday by the Los Angeles Times from, "Kenneth Ormiston,' sent from Windsor.

A search of local hotels made today failed to reveal the whereabouts of Ormiston, but a man answering his description was seen at the Prince Edward Hotel by Harry Rush treasurer at the hotel. The management of the hotel, however, was unable to say if the man was a guest at the hotel.

According to a description of the missing radio operator furnished by the Los Angeles newpaper, Ormiston walks with a decided limp of the right leg. Mr. Rush said the stranger he saw in the lobby of the hotel on Saturday afternoon was quite lame and that he carried a cane.

CUSTOMS OFFICIALS UNUSUALLY ACTIVE

Duty Is Now Demanded On Petty Purchases at the Border.

WINDSOR, Sept. 28 — Unusual activity on the part of the Customs authorities here has been in evidence for the past few days, and those who have been in the habit of bringing across the river petty purchases are being compelled to pay duty, even where the cost was trivial. Yesterday two special officers, one of them a woman, were on duty at the Ouelette Avenue members of the Royal Mounted ferry dock. With them were two Police, who kept a sharp eye for smugglers. Cigaret smokers were stopped by the officers and asked what kind of goods they were smoking, and where it was found they were of American manufacture they were told to "step inside" and pay duty on the remainder of the package.

Picked Wrong Man in Fight Pushes Barrow Two Miles

ST. BONIFACE, Man., Sept. 28 (Canadian Press). — Chief William Thompson, of the St. Boniface fire department, accompanied by a great crowd of children and grown-ups, and with the din of a fire siren constantly in his ears, wheeled his brother-in-law, George Manson, two miles through the prinipal streets of St. Boniface yesterday. The brother-in-law, who weighs in the neighborhood of 200 pounds, was comfortably seated in a wheelbarrow. The Chief thus paid one of two wagers which he lost when Gene Tunney took the world's heavyweight boxing championship from Jack Dempsey last Thursday. As a result of the second wager, the Fire Chief must let his moustache grow untouched for the next two months.

MANY VACANCIES MAY BE FILLED IN SHORT TIME

Appointment of Two Judges To Customs Commission Gets First Attention.

THREE SENATORS.

Cabinet Meeting To-day Expected To Dispose of Some Matters

OTTAWA, Sept. 28. — (Canadian Press. — The cabinet has been called to meet again this afternoon. Yesterday's meeting was short, but it is probable that the one to-day will be longer and that some of the matters which are pending will be disposed of. The appointment of two more judges to the customs inquiry commission. The appointment of Counsel for the Commission and enlargement of the scope of the inquiry are among those things which the Prime Ministed indicated would have the first attention of cabinet. It is understood that the government has adready approached certain judges with a view to their serving on the commission with Sir Francois Lemieux.

Other appointments which will probably be made before the Prime Minister goes abroad include three vacancies in the Senate. Two of these vacancies are in Quebec and one in Nova Scotia. Premier King announced last week that he expected to be able to bring Colonel J. L. Ralston, of Halibax, into the cabinet some time this week. Col. Ralston will fill remaining vacancy in cabinet. that of National Defence, if arrangements can be made to find him a seat. There will be appointments to the posts of Lieutenant Governor in both the Provinces of Ontario and Manitoba.

Premier King will go to Quebec, to welcome Canada's New Governor General, Lord Willingdon.

Development Coming.

LONDON, Sept. 28. — (Canadian Press Cable). — In an editorial reviewing with entire favour Premier King's cabinet, the Times says the whole country already is shaping confidently for a period of tranquil development. Mr. Meighen's last act the Times adds, was one of characteristic and becoming patrotism.

"The policy of Canada first," paper continues, "need not be taken as a mean, selfish pre-occupation of local interests alone—autonomy involves knowledge and responsibility and the great difficulty is that the Dominion statesmen are absorbed in local politics and seldom have time to study anything but the matters immediately in hand while unwilling to trust any one else to act in their name.

'Though it is a small event in itself, it is satisfactory from this point of view the Canadian Liberals have found a fitting representative for the Washington post and it will prove a convenience to all parties in Canada to have their own permanent representative on the spot.

JUDGES SELECTED.

OTTAWA, Sept. 28. Canadain Press. — It is reported that the government has selected two additional judges who will act with Sir Francois Lemieux in conducting a further inquiry into the Customs department.

One is said to be Mr. Justice Wright of the Supreme Court of Ontario, and the other Mr. Justice Brown of the Supreme Court of Saskatchewan.

Hon. N. W. Rowell is designated as chief counsel and will have with him R. L. Calder, K. C.

It was stated at the Prime Minister's office this afternoon that no official appointments had been made yet.

The seventy-fifth anniversary of the opening of the first free library in England will be observed next year. The library was in Manchester and Dickens, Thackeray and Bulwer-Lytton were speakers at the opening.

ENTRANCE FORCED INTO CELLAR OF CAMPBELLFORD R. C. CHURCH

Crow Bar Marks on Front Door Chief Brown Found.

NO DAMAGE DONE.

Ku Klux Klan Ceremony Attracted Large Crowd.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

Campbellford, Sept. 28. — An attempt to force an entrance into the Catholic church here, late Sunday night, was reported to Chief Brown yesterday b Rev. C. J. Phelan, parish priest. On the front door were marks that suggested the use of a crow bar. The padlock on the cellar door appeared to have been hammered, but was still locked and unbroken. However, the hasp which was held by the lock had been pried loose and the door was open, according to the Chief of Police, who said he examined the premises in company with Father Phelan. It is understood that there are no stairs from the cellar to the main body of the church. The building was undamaged except for the drawn screws in the hasp of the cellar door.

The pastor of the church told Chief Brown that he fancied he heard a noise around the church late in the evening, and especially locked the cellar door.

Friday Fair Day.

The Fair directors are hoping that they will have as large a crowd for their annual exhibition next Friday as the throng that attended the hooded demonstration of the Ku Klux Klan Sunday night when a class of candidates was initiated in the presence of Klansmen from all parts of the district. The ceremony of the flaming crosses attracted a large gathering of people from the town and country. High officials of the order were present from London, Ont., Toronto and Belleville.

Estimates of the attendance Sunday night ranged from 3000 to 4000, and with the latter figure showing on its turnstiles next Friday the Fair Board would be as highly elated as the Klansmen.

The Board feels that it deserves a bumper crowd. It is offering $2200 in prize money. Attractions include three horse races, a soft ball game at 1.30 o'clock between Campbellford Clerks and Warkworth, and a baseball match between Hastings and Campbellford. The 40th Regimental band under the direction of William Pearson, A.L.C.M. (Eng.), will play a programme for which they have been specially practicing.

Six Months' Term.

For killing a sheep, with intent to steal the carcass, William Parcells was sentenced to six months in jail by Magistrate Payne. The sheep was owned by William Ross of Meyersburg.

Alberta Smiles Under Beams Of Old Sol Once More Sound Of the Reaper Is Heard

LETHBRIDGE, Alta., Sept. 28—Four days of continuous fine weather have caused a smile of gladness to spread all over the face of Sunny Alberta, and there has been a renewal of that bounteous optimism characteristic of the West. Yesterday, from Calgary to MacLeod, and from McLeod to Lethbridge, binders were at work wherever grain was still uncut. Over the same wide stretch of territory millions of stooks of wheat were being dried out in the brilliant sunshine and gentle winds. If present weather conditions continue, threshing will be resumed tomorrow in the Lethbridge-Cardston area, and will be general over Southern Alberta before the end of the week.

That serious loss has been sustained in wheat by wetting during the previous four weeks is undeniable, and the oat crop, caught by early frost, and broken down by snow, has suffered to a still greater extent, with prospect of serious scarcity in seed oats next spring.

Taking everything together, however, provided we have four weeks of weather like the present, Alberta farmers will be much better off than seemed possible a week ago, and money returns from wheat may not fall very much below last year.

NORTHUMBERLAND BALLOTS TO BE RECOUNTED BY JUDGE M'GLADE

Application On Behalf of W. A. Fraser—Recount on Wednesday.

SITS AT COBOURG.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, September 28. —A recount of the ballots cast in Northumberland in the Federal elections will be begun by Judge McGlade at Cobourg, at 9 a.m., Wednesday.

Following a telephone intimation Saturday night, an official notice was received on Monday by R. J. Allan of this town, returning officer, and his assistant, A. L. Linton, requiring them to be present with all the electoral stationery, ballots, envelopes, lists of voters, and the other papers, which are packed in some half dozen mail bags, ready for delivery to Ottawa.

Obviously the demand for a recount has been made on behalf of the Liberal candidate, Mayor W. A. Fraser of Trenton, who was defeated by M. E. Maybee, M.P., by 391 majority.

T. F. Hall, K.C., of Cobourg, represented Mr. Fraser when the ballot boxes were formally opened here on September 21st. He said at the conclusion of that detail that a recount would not be applied for because the number of rejected ballo was less than 25. The week-end news came therefore as a surprise, especially as no confirmation could be obtained either here or at Cobourg of the rumours of irregularities in the voting which had been gossiped about the streets since election night.

PASSENGERS SAFE.

NEW YORK, Sept. 28 (Canadian Press). — Passengers aboard the Ward Line steamer Mexico, which was grounded yesterday on a reef off the Yucatan coast, were removed today by the steamer Rio Brava and will be landed at Havana. There were about ninety passengers on the stranded ship.

The Mexico was still fast on the Madagascar reef to-day, according to the word received at the Ward Line offices to-day.

Loud Blow-Out Startles Apprehensive Citizens

Nervous citizens started in apprehension this forenoon when one of the tires on the service car of the Gillespie garage burst with a report that could be heard at a distance of several blocks. An eye-witness of the event declared it was one of the loudest blow-outs ever seen or heard in the city.

The mishap occurred at the intersection of King and George streets, as the car was passing over the switch of the street car lines.

FORMER REEVE LEAVING SMITH

Presentation Made To Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Graham By Community.

COMING TO CITY.

Over a hundred people, representative of all sections of the community, assembled last night in the basement of Gilmour Memorial Church, to do honor to Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Graham, on the occasion of their departure from Smith to take up residence in the city. Rev. W. S. Edgar occupied the chair, and Alex. Edmison, on behalf of the community, presented Mr. and Mrs. Graham with a beautiful illuminated address, an oak hall table and mirror, Jacobean style, and a pair of oak candlesticks.

The meeting opened with the singing of "The Maple Leaf," followed by a programme of musical selections and recitations. At the conclusion of the programme, Mr. Edmison, calling Mr. and Mrs. Graham to the front, read the address, which was as follows:

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Graham,—It is with mingled feelings of pleasure and pain that we tender you this

Sleeps Between Flashes Of Traffic Signal Lights

BELMAR, N.J., Sept. 28.—A new use has been found for the traffic flasher lights which are becoming numerous throughout New Jersey. State Trooper Russell Hurden has found a man who utilizes the delays between traffic "Go" signals to good advantage by sleeping.

The trooper, on his rounds in the vicinity of South Belmar, came upon a car parked at the curb with a man sleeping over the steering wheel. The trooper aroused the driver.

"Oh," said the man with a yawn, "I was waiting for the red light to turn."

The trooper investigated and returned to the car to report that the red light was a lantern to warn of a road excavation.

RESCUERS SINK SHAFT TO TRAP DEEP IN MINE

Work Ceaselessly in Effort To Reach Entrapped Miners.

HOPE IS RETAINED.

Late Reports Last Night State Rescue Tunnel is Near Completed.

IRONWOOD, Mich., Sept. 28.—(Canadian Press). — Entombed miners of the G. Pabat mine spoke last night to the men who are toiling to rescue them. Tapping on a pipe leading down into the mine was heard by one of the workers, Erik Petimosa. He returned the signal, then, clear and distinct, came eight separate taps, repeated several times.

IRONWOOD, Mich., Sept. 28. — (United Press). — No sound from the forty two men entombed, and the steady hammer of drills working day and night to reach them, marked the efforts of rescuers yesterday to save the miners trapped for 72 hours in the G. Pabat iron mine, here.

The fate of the men is in doubt, but rescue work was pushed in the hope that 12 hours would see the piled-up rock penetrated. Unless there are outlets, the supply of air in the mine is exhausted, and the men would be dead.

While three separate shafts were being sunk by emergency crews, a diamond drill was pounding through the rock in an effort to make a small hole for air, and through which concentrated food would be lowered.

Air and Water.

The other attempts is by a lateral tunnel being dug from an adjoining mine a quarter of a mile away.

Sufficient air and seepage water is thought to be in the level to keep the men alive until they can be rescued.

Particular faith is held in Tom Trewarth, a shift boss, who is imprisoned with the men. He has been in the service of the company for 39 years and has a thorough knowledge of the mine.

Relatives Watch.

The sight of distressed women and children drove gaunt-eyed men to super efforts yesterday in their attempt to reach the entombed.

Three separate shafts, each having as an objective the eighth level of the mine, 700 feet under ground, where it is believed the 43 men were entrapped, and a diamond drill are the means by which the rescue workers hope to learn the fate of the imprisoned men.

Most closely watched is the diamond drill, which must bore 400 feet more before it can reach the eighth level. Communicating can be established through this if it is ascertained the men are alive. Food tablets, badly needed if the men are alive, can be lowered to them through the small drilled hole.

Will Give First Aid.

Prepared to give first aid are physicians and a United States bureau of mines relief car. Officials of the mining company have equipped relief corps to care for the men if they are found alive.

The other efforts at succor are moving with all the speed which large crowds of workers can make. Two are in the 45 degree angle shaft filled with debris, which chokes the entry to the eighth level. One effort is being made from the top, with carriers removing the debris blocking the way. Another is from the bottom of the shaft, reached through lower levels after descent by another shaft.

It is believed the dirt and rock lodged in the shaft, but extended only part of the way down, can be dislodged and an opening obtained to the trap.

IRONWOOD, Mich, Sept. 28. — (Canadian Press.)—Certain that he had heard signs of life, Alfred Maki, a grim and gaunt miner, was hoisted to the surface last night after a trip through G shaft of the Pabst mine here to obtain communication with the 43 imprisoned men.

Maki, who was lowered 400 feet into the shaft, dangled from the end of a rope, tied about his waist, carrying a flashlight which aided him in penetrating the wreckage and debris for a distance of fifty feet.

"I heard men working," he declared, "like men working in the earth far off. I could not tell where the sound came from. It was far off. I tapped the water pipes but got no answer."

He stayed down on his expedition for about 15 minutes.

Maki, one of the group of workers who claimed to have heard distinct signals on the water pipe late in the afternoon was unable to get responses to the signals while in G shaft.

HASTINGS MAN WADED THROUGH SEA-FILLED STREET, WAIST HIGH WATCHED STORM FURIES WORK

Bruce Richardson in Very Centre of Tornado's Raging Course.

NARROW ESCAPE.

Saw Houses Blown Away—Many Roofs Ripped Off.

(Examiner Correspondence)

HASTINGS, Sept. 28—A grateful young man in Miami, Florida, is Bruce Richardson, formerly of this town, who, in a letter to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Richardson, graphically relates how he escaped unhurt in the recent terror of death and destruction that has made the whole world gasp. He was employer at Miami Beach where the tornado of Saturday, Sept. 18 focused its fury and where the sea, racing with the wind, flung itself far up on the shore among the smart business buildings and homes newly built there in their false security.

In the early stage of the storm on Friday night, Mr. Richardson was huddled with others in the building where he was employed. Later he waded waist high across the street to a restaurant where the reinforcements of the elements held him with an awed white-faced crowd while wind and water desolated magic cities of the magic land that boasted its sea and zephyrs and laid its streets almost at the water's edge.

Mr. Richardson, who is well known throughout the district as the clever home player of the Hastings lacrosse team of a few years ago, wrote in part as follows, Saturday Sept. 18, a few hours after the worst of the storm had passed, from the wrecked plant at Miami

Warned by Newspapers

Beach where he was employed:

"We were warned of this storm papers but had no idea it would in the late editions of Friday's come to this. It has been raging all day, and has just let up a little about an hour ago. It is now 10.30 p.m. Saturday (18th inst.). There is still a strong wind blowing accompanied by heavy rain, something very unusual for us to witness, practically a 24-hour storm.

The three of us who stayed here at our plant last night and three other fellows, who live in a small cottage next to our plant, were all huddled together and prepared to make a break for the open, away from this building if the roof or walls gave way. We stood there all Friday night afraid to take any chances outside for the wind was blowing trees, roofs of houses, cars and everything that was loose, past our place making it too dangerous to go outside. The walls and roof hung together until daylight, then we struck out for the engineer's car and started to get away in it but got stalled on the road.

Ocean's Invasion

Then we did get scared for the ocean started to rise and we had to wade in water up to our waists going to the Commoner Hotel which is just across the street from our plant. People from cottages all around were going there because their homes were completely flooded. Nearly all were in their bathing suits with coats or bath robes around them.

About 7 a.m. the storm subsided, and I started for my rooming house the Catskill Hotel. That place

MANY MEMBERS.

The ex-service men of Peterboro formally aligned themselves with the new branch of the Canadian Legion of the British Empire Service League at a mass meeting held in the Great War Veterans' Association rooms last night.

A motion was put before the meeting for the consideration of members of the G.W.V.A. and as a result it was unanimously resolved that the property would be handed over to the new organization.

The occasion was a momentous one for those present and the good feeling existing in the meeting augured well for the future of the new unit, the purpose of which is to unite the ex-service men of this Dominion to work for the common good.

W. S. Dobbs of Toronto, chairman of the Ontario Provincial Council, attended the meeting, and explained the aims and objects to the new members.

Exactly one hundred men signed the application form last night, many more signifying their intention of joining at the next meeting.

On the completion of the application forms the election of officers to head the new branch took place.

Comrade C. H. Ackerman was honored by being elected the first president of the Legion, his nomination being unanimous.

Other officers were elected as follows: J. Abraham, first vice-president; Dr. N. R. Sutton, second vice-president; executive committee — R. E. Layfield, N. E. Crowe, Rev. Paul Costello;; trustees—W. Huycke T. J. Johnston, E. Massey-Cooke, G. Coutts, J. Milby.

The auditors report was read and adopted and several motions pertaining to the welfare of the unit were passed.

It is expected that an emergent meeting will be held in the near future in order that the final arrangements may be completed and the various activities arranged for.

Highest Price Ever Paid For Holy Bible—$305,000

NEW YORK, Sept. 28. —Dr. Otto H. F. Vollber, German bibliophile, gave the details to-day of his purchase of a vellum copy of the Gutenberg Bible from the St. Paul Monastery at Lavantthal, Carinthia. At the National Arts Club, where he is exhibiting his incunabula, Dr. Vollber said he had paid $305,000 for the first printed edition of the Bible, instead of $275000 as reported.

"In addition to the purchase price of $275,000," he said, "I had to pay a Government tax of 10 per cent., a commission of 10 per cent and a contract stamp tax of 2 per cent.

The price paid by Dr. Vollber for his Gutenberg is described by the National Arts Club as "the highest price ever paid for a printed book."

LARGEST TELESCOPE.

PARIS, Sept. 28. — A telescope that will increase the observable universe millions of times is being built here by Dr. George Willis Ritchie. The reflector of the instrument is 19 feet 8 inches in diameter and required two years alone to build. Objects will be so magnified that the moon, for instance, will appear as it would if it were but ten miles from the earth.

CANADIAN MINISTER AID NEGOTIATIONS

Three Purposes Underlie Decision To Send Minister To Washington.

OTTAWA, Sept. 28. — At least three purposes underlie the decision of the King Government to have Canada represented by a Minister of its own at Washington. First, the duty wil devolve upon Hon. Vincent Massey as it does upon all diplomatic representatives, to make his country better and more widely known by the United States. Along with this will be the cultivation of generous and friendly sentiments between the two countries.

To Spread New About Canada.

It has been frequently pointed out by journalists on both sides of the line that there was an amazing scarcity of Canadian news in United States papers that even in a large number of the larger papers in the East no Canadian news was carried. It is probable that some effort will be made, in a most friendly way, to encourage, and facilitate the publication that the better and the more the United States knows of Canada the closer will be the relationship.

To Defend Scope of Authority.

As to the discharge of the official duties common to diplomatic posts Mr. Massey is likely to have defined for him, when the Prime Minister and himself confer with the British Governmen during the Imperial Conference, the scope of his authority as Canadian Minister. It had even been proposed when the idea was first discussed during the Borden regime, that in the absence of the British Ambasador, the Canadian Miniser might act for the formr. That however, was during the war and post-war days, and such an authority would not be approved today either by the Imperial or the other Dominion Governments. Canada's Minister will, it is known, be for Canadian interests only.

The presence of Mr. Massey also will facilitate transaction of State business between the two countries.

WAYS OF TRAVEL IMPROVE IN CHINA

Situation In That Country Becoming Much Easier Says Report.

TORONTO, Sept. 28.— (Canadian Press). — That the military situation affecting travel in the Yangtse Valley in Central China is much easier, is indicated by cable received at the Foreign Missions office of the United Church of Canada reporting the arrival at Shanihai of three men, five women and twelve children from West China Mission. Within one week they travelled 1,300 miles down Yangtse River, passing Wanhsien and Hankow where disturbances occurred two weeks ago. Other missionaries, who left Chungking in West China last week are remaining at Ichang, part way down the Yangtse, and wil return to their fields at Changking when the opportunity arrives.

SCUTARI BESIEGED.

Revolutionaries Defeat Government Troops and Capture Theire Guns.

VIENNA, Sept. 28. —(Canadian Press). — (Associated Press). — News reaching here from Italian sources is that Scutari, Albania, is beseiged by revolutionaries, but that Government reinforcements are expected from the South. The revolutionaries, stirred by the murder of Major Cima Kol, a followed of Bishop Fan S. Noli, who was Premier for a short period in 1924, attacked Scutari. They were met by Government troops outside the city, defeating them and capturing their guns. According to the Italian news, the revolutionaries then called upon the Governor of Scutari to surrender the city. He refused and the city is now beseiged.

ORANGEMEN HEAR PREMIER OF ULSTER

Sir James Craig Urges Loyalty To Throne, Flag and Constitution.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 28. — (Canadian Press.)—"I urge upon one and all that no matter what happens at any time and in any place never to despair so long as you hang together as loyal brothers under throne and constitution which have made our Empire what it is and under the flag which has flourished over Empire for generations past."

This was the message which Sir James Craig, Premier of Ulster, delivered at the banquet tendered in his honor here last night by the Orange Associations of Greater Winnipeg.

Sir James outlined the scheme which he has for enabling men of Ulster visiting Canada with the object of becoming settlers and expressed pleasure that the people from Ulster were happy and prosperous in Canada.

FORMER REEVE

address. We are glad of the opportunity it affords of expressing our appreciation of your earnest Christian character. We all esteem you, both for your own sakes and for your work's sake. We feel pain at the thought of your leaving this district, where you, Mr. Graham, were born, and where you have lived all your life so far, and where you, Mrs. Graham, have lived all your married life.

You, Mr. Graham, have given ungrudgingly of your time and talent to service in the Township and County Councils, having held the highest post within the gift of the township, that of Reeve. Every movement for the moral and spiritual elevation of the community has found in you an ardent and zealous supporter. The Gilmour Memorial Baptist Church has had Grahams connected with it since its inception; your father before you being a loyal and devoted member during the greater part of his lifetime. In this respect, you have been a worthy son of a worthy father. You have been a faithful and reliable member for many years, serving with distinction on both the Deacons' and Advisory Boards. You both have been the kind of church members whom any pastor would delight in; regular in your attendance, generous in your giving, and painstaking and earnest in your service.

You, Mrs. Graham, have been a useful and valued member of the Ladies' Aid and the Ladies' Mission Circle. On Communion Sundays the table of the Lord's Supper was well looked after in your hands.

We are sorry that you are leaving the association of a lifetime, but it is a source of satisfaction to know that you are not going very far away; that the tie that binds us will merely be lengthened, not broken, and we anticipate that in the future we shall have many opportunities of renewing our fellowship with you both.

We wish you much joy in your new home and many years of true prosperity in your well-earned retirement.

(Signed) W. S. Edgar.
Ed. Mahood.
C. E. Moore.
G. W. Mann.

Mr. Graham, in his reply, thanked the community for their handsome gifts, and referred to the many recollections evoked by the sight of numerous associates and school chums seated before him. The affection and esteem of the community was also voiced in short speeches by Messrs. G. W. Mann and Ed. Mahood.

The programme consisted of a violin solo by Harold Stinson, piano solos by Jean Scott and Beatrice McGregor, a vocal solo by Mrs. J. A. Young, recitations by Phyllis Moore, and a ladies' quartette: Mrs. J. A. Young, Mrs. Joseph Mann, Miss Beatrice McGregor and Miss Jean Paul. Miss Mabel Paul was accompanist.

Community singing and games for the rising generation, followed by refreshments, marked the latter portion of the evening.

KNIGHTS SUPPORT FUND FOR MEXICO

Local Council Decides To Contribute For Relief Purposes.

At a spcial and very well-attended meeting of the Knights of Columbus, held last evening in their rooms, with the purpose of considering the Mexican situation, it was decided to co-operate with the Knights of Columbus of America in raising a fund of one million dollars for the relief of Mexico, and the local Council will send its quota to this fund.

The meeting was addressed by Brother Thomas Begley, of Lindsay, District Deputy, and other members also entered into the discussion which took place. Past Grand Knight J. J. Duffus presided.

It was felt that the matter under discussion was of importance not only to Catholics but also o Christians of the entire world the speakers asserting that the Calles Government is professedly animated by a spirit of infidelity, the officials seeking to implant in the soil of Mexico absolute disbelief in all religion and to drive out of the country the very name of God. Its purpose is to stamp out Christianity of all kinds, wehther Catholic or non-Catholic, and freedom of belief is being denied ministers of every religion, they continued.

PLOT TO BLACKMAIL PREMIER MUSSOLINI

Leader of Fascist Murder Party Is Arrested—Preparing To Flee.

LUGANO, Switzerland, Sept. 28. —The arrest of Amerigo Duminin in Rome has been announced as the result of an insult to Premier Mussolini, but the correspondent has excellent authority for stating that the reason is of far more serious and important nature.

Dumini was the leader of the four Fascists who murdered the Socialist Deputy, Matteotti in June 1924, and with his companions were let off wit nominal punishment after a trial before a carefully-selected jury. Dumini is held by anti-Fascists to be the depository of terrible secrets involving Premier Mussolini and this murder.

He has been arrested now as a sequel to an investigation by the Rome Police. It is alleged he was making preparations to escape to France and blackmail Mussolini in the interest of the Roberto Farinacci faction of the Fascist party against Luigi Federzoni.

Dumini's activities after his release from prison last June had caused the police to keep a watchful eye on him. At the time of the Parma bank scandal Dumini sided with Farinacci and headed a punitative expedition against the Parma Fascists, who, influenced by Minister of Interior Federzoni, had started a press campaign blaming Farinacci for that scandal. Dumini, however, was badly mauled by Farinacci's opponents and had to flee the city in a motor car.

A Dramatic Interview.

Eventually, as the result of a dramatic interview between Farinacci and Mussolini, the Parma scandal was hushed up, but his extremists friends throughout Italy were never spared by Federzoni. Men whom Farinaci, before he was ousted as secretary-general of the Fascist party, had placed in responsible positions both in the party and Governemnt have been systematically replaced by Federzoni's men.

The attempt of Gino Lusetti to assassinate Mussolini recently was made the occasion of Fascist extremists of a return to the offensive against Federzoni who was accused of being responsible as Minister of the Interior for insufficient police protection of the Premier. Federzoni, to demonstrate his zeal for Mussolini's safety and silence his opponents, sacked the chief of the Rome police and caused the arrests of thousands of anti-Fascists throughout Italy. His opponents however, would not put up with such "diversions," as his police measures were called and loudly demanded the head of Federzoni.

It is an open secret, however, that Federzoni cannot be removed from office, that this was the heavy price paid by Mussolini for the King's absolution after the murder of Matteotti Attacked Police.

"Cries of "Federzoni must go," intermingled with cries of "Long live Farinacci," were raised in several towns by the extremists. At Triese, Capadistria and other towns, bands of extremists Fascists attacked the police stations and exchanged revolver shots with the carabineri, Federzoni's faithful guards. Several Fascists and carabineri were killed in these clashes.

These clashes were the subject of violent discussion in yesterday's meeting of the executive of the Fascist party in Rome, which culminated in a proposal by Secretary Turat of the party that an independent Ministry of Police be formed, evidently with a view to withdrawing control of police from Federzoni and placing them under supervision of Mussolini himself. Fredzoni threatened to resign and the proposal was set aside.

The arrest of Dumini is taken as a move by Federzoni to silence Farinacci. Having got his information—Farinacci was Dumini's counsel in the Chieti trial—Farinacci intended to use Dumini as a weapon of black mail against Mussolini. Federzoni told Mussolini about it and intimated that the surest way to prevent Dumini's flight from Italy was to have him arrested. Now that Dumini is in the hands of Federzoni, the latter apparently feels he is better protected against the Farinacci Fascists and Mussolini as well.

HARVEST SERVICE HELD IN TEMPLE

Brigadier Bloss Returns To City After Absence of Thirty Years.

LARGE ATTENDANCE.

Highly successful harvest thanksgiving services were held in the Salvation Army Temple during the past week-end. Colonel Taylor, field secretary, who was accompanied by Brigadier Bloss, the divisional commander, was well received, this being his first visit to Peterborough after an absence of thirty years. The Colonel's address was most appropriate for the season. "Thankful for the opportunity of harvest thanksgiving, occasioning as it does a break in a continuous round of materialistic effort and struggle to give thanks unto the Giver of every good and perfect gift for His far-reaching Providence. God's thoughtfulness following us every step along life's journey. Reaping evidences, sowing and strong comment and condemnation of those influences at work in our national life who sow seeds of hatred of God and religion, of law and order and expect to reap prosperity and contentment. Illustrations of the devil incarnate in human form who sow and entice the young and old to engage in dope and drug habit and of the terrible reaping which inevitably results were vividly brought to the attention of the congregation by the Colonel.

Large attendances were counted at each of the four services conducted. The Temple was beautifully decorated with fruits and vegetables of every description, the kind gifts of friends and members of the Army in Peterborough and surrounding district. A special offering amounting to one hundred and four dollars was given by the soldiers and friends at the evening service.

On Sunday next, the junior congregation will hold their annual Rally Day services, and will also observe their harvest festival. These meetings will be addressed by the Young People's Sergeant-Major, R. C. Braund, Assistant Young People's Sergeant-Majors Boorman, Leggott and Lashbrook, and other Young People's workers. The Brown ton Sunday School will unite in the Simcoe Street Temple for the afternoon service at 3 o'clock.

MAN DROPS DEAD AT LUMBER CAMP

Death Comes While Sawing Some Timber at Peterborough Lumber Camp.

APSLEY, Sept. 28. —Harvey Trickey, a well-known local man, dropped dead on the Peterborough Lumber Camp, near here, recently. He and three other men were working together, and while he was sawing some timber, he dropped to the ground, exclaiming "Oh," and within a minute or two had passed away. His body was taken to Peterborough but was brought to Aspley for interment in the cemetery. Mr. Trickery was 62 years of age, and an Orangeman, a member of the local Orunder whose auspices the funeral will be held. His only known relative is a sister, but her address is unknown.

A Grand Rapids man who was afraid he might become the father of twins, for the second time, and feared the extra expense that would be entailed, took out a $5,000 insurance policy to be paid if his fears were realized. As it happened, he wasted his money.

TUESDAY, SEPT. 28, 1926.

. . . UPBUILDER OF THE HOME . . . NOURISHER OF THE COMMUNITY SPIRIT . . . ART LETTERS AND SCIENCE OF THE COMMON PEOPLE.

THE SILENT MR. FERGUSON.

Mr. Ferguson refuses to be hurried in making his long-awaited announcement in regard to the Provincial election, and the longer he hesitates the stronger becomes the conviction of the public that the problem that is worrying the Premier is just how wet or how dry should be his policy.

There is a wet wing in the Conservative party—as, of course, there is also in the Liberal ranks—which is urging upon Mr. Ferguson the contention that he cannot expect any support from dry Liberals, and that he might as well cash in on the support that he can count on from wet sections of both parties.

On the other hand, from rural constituencies held at present by Conservative members come reports to the Premier that a policy leaning toward wetness will mean the loss of many of these ridings.

So the hesitation of Mr. Ferguson can be easily understood; there are rocks along both courses, and the political mariner cannot afford to take any chances of shipwreck.

But the public is beginning to get impatient; if there is to be a Provincial election before Christmas the people of the Province would like to be told about it soon.

INVESTIGATING THE CUSTOMS.

Premier King has announced an energetic policy in regard to cleaning up the Customs Department mess that will be approved by the country generally.

It is understood that the services of Hon. N. W. Rowell, K.C., have been secured to assist the commission, which will be enlarged to include three judges instead of one, and which will investigate customs conditions in all parts of the Dominion.

This activity on the part of the new Government is thoroughly in line with public opinion, which demands a complete and thorough investigation of the administration of the department.

The election promises of Mr. King in this regard were accepted at face value evidently by the electors, and he does well to deal with the important matter promptly.

Sir Francois Lemieux, who was the commissioner appointed by the Meighen Government to continue the inquiry, will be the head of the larger commission now to be given control of the probe, and it is hoped that no feature of the administration of the Customs Department will be left uninvestigated.

Out of the inquiry should come many constructive suggestions that will add to the efficiency and morale of the customs service.

NO REASON FOR BREAKING THE LAW.

One motorist referring to the Examiner's recent editorial on the stop-street plan declares that he doesn't obey the bylaw because he doesn't believe in it.

That would be a decidedly dangerous attitude if it were generally adopted in regard to laws of all kinds.

On the statute books there are numerous regulations in which many of us perhaps don't believe, but if we are law-abiding citizens we, as a rule, obey them anyway.

In fact, if each citizen were a law unto himself and each motorist only obeyed the sections of the Traffic Act that he believed are right, the administration of the general laws would be decidedly difficult and motor traffic would find itself in a state of confusion.

There are drivers who are heartily in favour of the stop plan; there are others who are just as decidedly opposed.

That is not the point.

The bylaw is in force, and it is the duty of the driving public to respect it whether they think it a wise measure or not.

And it is the duty likewise of the police to see that those who don't respect it have an opportunity of facing the Magistrate with an explanation.

"I don't believe in it," it may be said, will be found to be useless as a defence.

A BASEBALL S.O.S.

The attention of Examiner readers generally and to those who are interested in sport in particular is directed to the appeal from the Royals ball club for financial assistance in connection with their trip to Merriton on Saturday when the midget baseball championship of Ontario is at stake.

It will be realized that the Saturday journey will be an expensive proposition for a young aggregation who have not been very strongly supported throughout the playing season, and who have already had to stand the expense of several long trips.

Winning Provincial championships is good advertising for Peterboro.

Last year, after several successful seasons during which the reputation of Peterboro as a baseball centre was heralded everywhere, none came this way, but the Royals are in excellent position now to put their home city back into the championship column.

It would be a pity if lack of funds cheated them out of victory at the last moment.

Surely this prosperous and sport-loving city will not allow a Provincial championship to slip away merely because $100 is needed to finance the city's representatives.

A fund is being opened to defray the Royals' expenses, and the Examiner will be glad to receive and acknowledge donations from citizens willing to help in bringing a championship to Peterboro.

Tickets are going fast for the Kiwanis Made-in-Peterboro Exhibition. The citizens of Peterboro usually know a good thing when they see it.

THE FIGHT.

All the world, they say, loves a lover, but not so much, we hold, as it loves a fight. Preachers preach. Bespectacled professors deplore. Pacifists are horrified. No matter. Forty centuries have not blotted out the cave-man. Somewhere, in all of us, hid by a thin veneer, is a love of strife. The primitive instinct lives on, flaunting civilization, defying moralists, a still dominant passion in our time.

Two or three thousand people stood before the Journal office to hear the news of the election. Five or six thousand stood in the same place to hear the news from Philadelphia. Two thousand wanted to know who was going to govern them, and how. Five thousand wanted to know whether Gene Tunney could knock the head off John Harrison Dempsey. What a lesson in human psychology!

And so all over the civilized world. All the statesmen and divines and philosophers and thinkers in Christendom combined could not have drawn the crowd that looked at Dempsey and Tunney. Lloyd George and Mussolini, President Coolidge and King George, Clemenceau and Trotzky, all of these, and all the rest of world rulers thrown in, could not have brought a two million dollar gate, or half of it. Only a fight could do that.

Yet the one hundred and thirty thousand who paid two million dollars and sat through a downpour to watch the fight, represented but a fraction of the interest in it. In ten thousand newspaper offices from the Golden Gate to the Arctic Circle, men fumed and toiled to tell millions the news. At the end of perhaps ten million radios millions of others breathlessly followed each round. Before the newspapers of Moscow and Rome, of London and Paris, of Berlin and Madrid, tens of thousands of men watched for the story. Two hemispheres followed this fight.

And always it is the victor that is cheered. Had Dempsey retained his crown, a continent would have rocked with cheers. It rocked with cheers for Tunney. "The King is dead, long live the King."

"The intrepid warrior famoused for fight,
After a thousand victories once foiled,
Is from the book of honor razed quite,
And all the rest forgot for which he toiled."

Today Tunney is the god. He will be mobbed by men, get scented notes from women, be showered with golden dollars—the most famous American of all. He will cross the seas, shake hands with the great, be acclaimed as Foch never was, be the equal of Doug. Fairbanks. And then some day he will go into the movies, and know the bright lights, and marry a star of shadowland, and come to love luxury; and some night he will step under the arc-lights again, with muscles softer, and heart fainter, and stamina weaker—and a new god will be crowned. So, at all events, it has ever been.—Ottawa Journal.

CELEBRATING CONFEDERATION.

Two things ought to be kept in mind in arranging for the celebration of the sixtieth anniversary of Confederation. One is that it ought to be distinctively Canadian, the other that the celebration should not be confined to one day. Confederation was a Canadian achievement, remarkable because it brought about a profound change in the mode of government by purely constitutional means, with no suggestion of violence. The form of government was changed from a Legislative to a Federal union. This was important, not only because it put an end to disputes between Upper and Lower Canada, now Ontario and Quebec, but because the more flexible form of government facilitated territorial expansion to the Atlantic on the east and the Pacific on the west. It would have been impossible to govern the new and greater Canada from one centre. Objection is sometimes made to the Provincial Legislatures as adding to the expense of government, but they are absolutely necessary for the control of such matters as education and municipal affairs.

The progress of Canada since Confederation affords abundant material for celebration. Sometimes a view of a short period of our history is discouraging. But these periods of slow progress are mere eddies in the great stream of progress. A view of a longer period, such as that following Confederation and down to the present time, is most encouraging.

The first census was taken in 1871. Since then the population has increased from 3,689,257 to 9,364,200 (estimate for 1925); the acreage of wheat from 1,646,781 to nearly 22,000,000; the mineral production from $10,221,255 to $224,846,837; the manufactured products from $221,617,773 to $2,781,165,514; external trade from $141,844,412 to about two billions; mileage of steam railways from 2,695 to 40,061, in addition to 1,737 miles of electric railway, none of which was in existence in the earlier period.

These are a few of the marks of material progress. Other things have not been neglected. In 1881 the enrollment of children in the schools was 891,000. In 1924 it was more than two millions. The number of teachers in the same period increased from 18,016 to 62,302. The expenditure on education was $11,044,925 in 1901 and $119,484,033 in 1925, nearly a twelve-fold increase in less than a quarter of a century. There are some who grumble at this expenditure, but willingness to spend money in this way is one of the marks of a high standard of civilization.

Confederation is one of the landmarks of the political development of Canada. It would not be out of place in celebrating that event to go back farther and trace the growth of self-government from the earliest times. Especially interesting and instructive is the period which includes Lord Durham's report and the controversy between Governor Metcalfe on the one side and Baldwin and Lafontaine and the Reformers on the other side, ending in the establishment of responsible government. This might be regarded as having a partisan complexion, but as we now all enjoy the benefits of responsible government we may all join in commemorating the achievement.

Then there is the romantic story of the early explorers and missionaries and of the pioneers of old Canada. Parkman's fascinating volumes give the history of the old French regime. The struggles and hardships of the pioneers of Upper Canada who laid the foundations of the comfort and prosperity we now enjoy are full of human interest and it is right and fitting that in a historical celebration we should be reminded of these things. This reminder should not be confined to one day. Particular attention ought to be paid to Canadian history in our schools during the whole year. The school regulations might be modified so as to allow of more time and emphasis being placed upon the subject. Another good suggestion is that at the Canadian National Exhibition, the Western Fair, etc., the year 1927 should be known as Canadian Year, and an effort made to arrange exhibits and organize pageants illustrative of Canadian history.—London Advertiser.

Mr. Meighen has made his announcement. How about a word from Mr. Ferguson?

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE.

MONTREAL, Que., Sept. 28. — (Canadian Press). — The foreign demand for Canadian grain on the Montreal market yesterday was again indifferent and local exporters generally reported business dull in all positions. There was some enquiry from local and country buyers for car lots of coarse grains and prices ruled steady.

While the export trade in Spring and Winter wheat grades of flour was quiet, the local and country demand was fair and a moderate amount of business was worked. Prices in both cases were unchanged.

The movement of all lines of millfeed continued good and the undertone was firm. A stronger feeling developed in the market for rolled oats and prices were advanced another ten cents per bag with a fair business passing.

The volume of business transacted in fresh and storage eggs was again of a substantial character and prices were well maintained. The receipts were 1,076 cases.

Owing to the more liberal supplies of Quebec potatoes coming forward a weaker feeling prevailed in the market and prices declined ten cents per bag. Sales of odd cars of white stock were made at 81.10 per bag of ninety pounds, ex-track. The tone of the market for New Brunswick cobblers was steady and prices were unchanged at $1.30 per bag of ninety pounds.

The demand for beans was quiet and car lots of choice white handpicked were quoted at $2.25 per bushel, and smaller quantities at $2.35 to $2.45 per bushel.

The butter market continued quiet but firm. The receipts were 594 packages.

The feature of the cheese trade was the firmer tone and prices were marked up a fraction. The volume of business was small. The receipts were 8,999 boxes.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, Sept. 28. —(Canadian Press). — Offerings in the wheat pit proved to be extra light and traders who were short had to bid prices up to get the grain. Talk of reduction of crop estimates in Canada accompanied a sharp falling off in Canadian marketing of wheat. Closing quotations on wheat were firm, 3-4 to 1 1-4 net higher; corn unchanged to 3-4c off, and oats 1-8 to 3-8c down. Provisions were unchanged to 45c up.

A development to which significance was attached was the fact that yesterday's 2,043,000 bushel increase of the United States wheat visible supply turned out to be almost 3,000,000 bushels less than had been looked for.

The chief outstanding feature, though, was the lack of any aggressive selling except at about the day's top figures. Under such circumstances, the market ruled firm practically the entire time and closed near to the highest level reached.

Corn and oats weakened as a result of there being no material accession of buying orders despite a further spread of frost.

Provisions ranged higher in line with the hog market.

CHICAGO CATTLE.

CHICAGO, Sept. 28. —(Canadian Press). — Cattle 33,000; practically no outlet for weighty steers; most yearlings steady to 25c lower top $12.00; bulk fat steers and yearlings $8.50 to $10.00; vealers steady to 50c lower.

Hogs 25,000; very uneven; good to choice 130 pound average late $12.25; best 210 to 230 pounds average $13.75 to $13.85; latter price top; bulk 160 to 200 pounds $13.00 to $13.75; bulk 260 to 300 pounds average $13.00 to $13.40; most packing sows $11.00 to $12.00; heavies downward to $12.50.

Sheep 39,000; fat lambs mostly 25c lower; bulk westerns $13.25 to $13.60 best kind held above $13.75 late; heavy buck lambs around $11.50.

STERLING EXCHANGE.

MONTREAL, Que., Sept. 28. — (Canadian Press). — Sterling Exchange rates were quoted here yesterday as follows:

Sterling demand $4.83 7-8.
Sterling cables $4.84 3-8.

FADS OF THE FAMOUS

ADOLPHE MENJOU.

Collecting bits of paper, less than one inch square, is the fad of Adolphe Menjou, Paramount featured player.

Specifically, Menjou is Hollywood's most enthusiastic stamp collector. Four much-thumbed leather-bound volumes are filled with official marks of every Government and almost every province in the world. Many of these tiny bits of paper are valued at thousands of dollars.

As a connoisseur of stamps, Menjou is regarded as one to be rivalled only by Scott, the accepted authority. Every tiny scroll, every water-mark, every picture of a long deposed monarch is known to him. He can spot a counterfeit a mile distant.

"Stamp collecting to most people, is dull and tedious work. To me it is the most fascinating game in the world," said Menjou. "What a story each of the stamps could tell! What a wealth of news they have transported—letters of long-forgotten loves, important legal documents upon which the fate of nations revolved, missives of joy and of sorrow, of wealth and of poverty—all have been carried by these tiny bits of paper.

"Stamp collecting has still another appeal. The surest and politest way of disposing of an unwelcome guest is to produce one's album and start to go through it, carefully and lengthily explaining the history of every stamp it contains."

A statue of Henry Clay in Pottsville, Pa., is said to be the only one of the "Millboy of the Slashes" outside of his home state of Kentucky.

Cattle brands of range kings of the past and present form a unique ornamentation for the outer walls of a new hall just completed at the University of Texas.

DR FRANK CRANE'S DAILY EDITORIAL

TOO YOUNG TO KNOW
By Dr. Frank Crane.

Herbert Hoover is a strange sort of politician.

When he makes a speech he usually says something worth thinking about.

In a late utterance he pointed out that the aim of education should be to produce normal children, but that as yet no one knows what a normal child is.

The child a prize fighter would pick as normal and the one a poet would choose would be entirely different in character.

The standard in normalcy depends upon the individual who does the picking. "In our image" is the usual guiding motto.

Beyond a few fundamentals—such as good health and an active mind—men run into disagreement.

The reason we do not know what a normal child is like is because we do not know what a normal man is like, because behind it all we do not know what we are here for.

What was man put on this whirling globe in space for, anyway?

What is his biggest job here?

He is placed here without definite instructions. He finds himself groping around trying to understand what he is to do, what he is to be, what he is here for?

On such questions we get an infinite variety of personal opinions, but no proved answers—a multitude of sparks, but no steady flame.

We do not know absolutely whether Jack Dempsey, Sergeant York, Eugene V. Debs, or Percy Bysshe Shelley comes nearest to living the kind of life men are intended to live on our earth.

We can only watch, think, and come to our own conclusions.

In terms of planets, our earth is younger. Mars is still younger. Civilization and thought are younger yet. Humanity is nearer its source than its ending.

The earth will go spinning through space—a great laboratory wherein men will work out their experiments and their destiny, if we accept the word of scientists—for some billions of years.

In that time the answers to the great questions: What am I? Why was I put here? What am I supposed to become? may be found.

We do not know them now. Perhaps because we are too young to know.

Common Errors in English and How To Avoid Them.

"BETWEEN" AND "AMONG" IN THE SENATE

The United States Senate paused for a laugh in the midst of a solemn treaty debate while Senator Ashurst of Arizona exhibited a grammatical error in the terms of the treaty. He declared that "any school-boy would be marked down for the error."

Senator Ashurst referred to the use of the word "between" instead of "among" when reference was made to the United States, Great Britain and France.

"If Arthur James Balfour and Henry Cabot Lodge don't know how to use the English language nobody does," said the Senator from Arizona, "and yet here in a solemn treaty we find this egregious blunder, for which any schoolboy would be marked down."

"It may not be of any moment," rejoined Senator Lodge," but I contend that the use of 'between' as referring to three or more persons is just as good as 'among'."

With that, the debate on the treaty was resumed.

WISE AND OTHERWISE

The proposed coal mining measure indicates someone has been doing some deep thinking.

Lyrics Of Life
(By Douglas Malloch.)

"AMERICAN"

No rich and proud and powdered dame
Grandmother was. This rugged land
To which she came
Required the sort of woman's hand
That fits the plough, the sort of heart
Courageous in a rainless year,
The sort of art
To spin a shirt or yoke a steer.

I know not whom or what her kin,
I only know she crossed the seas.
She may have been
Kindred of kings, or slave of these.
What matter? She was done with kings.
Whatever race she may have known,
Among new things
In this new land, she made her own.

And I would rather be the spawn
Of some new race, a race like mine,
A race at dawn,
Than weakling of some fading line.
Whatever ancient race or clan
Another boasts his house to be,
"American"
Is race and clan enough for me.

A THOUGHT FOR TODAY

I RESOLVE

"To keep my health
To do my work;
To live;
To see to it I grow and gain and give;
Never to look behind me for an hour;
To wait in weakness, and to walk in power;
But always fronting onward to the light,
Always and always facing toward the right,
Robbed, starved, defeated, fallen, wide astray
On with what strength I have!
Back to the way!"

Winking at the brim

THERE'S something very satisfying about draining a sparkling beaker of Andrews. The beaded bubbles wink and sputter at the brim. The flavor sits most pleasantly on the tongue.

Andrews is a gentle corrective. It purifies the blood stream and cleanses internally. It fortifies the constitution against the attacks of petty illnesses.

Taken occasionally, it promotes radiant health and a happy frame of mind.

DIAMOND WEDDING DAY IS OBSERVED

Mr. and Mrs. Cory Forbes Were Married Sept. 24, 1866.

HAVELOCK, Sept. 28—To reach the sixtieth wedding anniversary is an event that comparatively few are privileged to experience. On Friday evening, September 24, Mr. and Mrs. Cory Forbes celebrated this happy occasion at their home at Oak Lake.

Sixty years ago the wedding of Mr. Cory Forbes and Miss Margaret Althouse was solemnized in Colborne and the long years of married life have been spent at Oak Lake where they were pioneer settlers, there being no roads through that district when they moved there.

Mr. Forbes was born in Colborne on November 4, 1847, and his wife, who is one year his senior, was born in the Township of Seymour on August 20, 1846.

Of the family of eleven children, three daughters and five sons are living namely: Mrs. William Colby, Glenalda; Mrs. Charles Derushey, Deer Lake Settlement; Mrs. M. Hogan, Havelock; Mr. Lee Forbes, Chandos; Mr. Percy Forbes and Mr. Archie Forbes, Oak Lake; Mr. Amos Forbes, Glenalda; Mr. Edward Forbes, Havelock.

All of the family attended the celebration with the exception of Mr. Lee Forbes, who unfortunately was unable to be present. During the evening Mr. and Mrs. Forbes were presented with a purse from the family, the presentation being made by Miss Mildred Forbes. The friends and neighbors of the aged couple also remembered the occasion by presenting them with a number of beautiful gifts. An address was read by Mr. Norris Whitney on behalf of those who were thus expressing their interest in the event.

A dainty lunch was then served after which the guests departed with many wishes that Mr. and Mrs. Forbes may live to enjoy many more years of wedded life.

WELCOME PERSONALS.

Mr. and Mrs. Rex Snow and children of "The Bluffs," Muskoka, were the guests of Rev. and Mrs. Clare this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Lane of Oakwood are visiting their son, Rev. J. Lane of Canton.

Miss Preston spent the week end at her home in Lakefield.

The young people of the neighborhood enjoyed a very pleasant evening on Thursday last, at a "corn roast" at the home of Mr. John Pearce.

Mr. Austin Chestnut and his cousin, Mr. Howard Cox, motored from Toronto on Sunday and spent the day with his parents.

RALLY SERVICE.

Three Sunday Schools on Fraserville Circuit Held Special Services Sunday.

BAILIEBORO, Sept. 28. — The rally day services were observed in the three Sunday schools on the Fraserville circuit on Sunday; at Bensfort in the morning, at Fraserville in the afternoon and at Bailieboro in the evening.

The churches at all three appointments were handsomely decorated, ladened with autumn leaves and flowers, while scores of bouquets of asters and other flowers were carried by the students and deposited upon the trays.

At Bailieboro the trays were held by Misses K. Bateman and R. Dawson. The service was taken by the superintendent, F. Dawson, assisted by the pastor, Rev. H. W. Foley. The service was followed after the direction of the programme, and proved to be very successful. An interesting feature of the programme was a pageant given by the junior classes, representing the splendid Christian teachings and the great services rendered by the United Church of Canada.

The choir also ably rendered an anthem, and a brief address was given on "Our Country" by Rev. Foley. R. Barnard read the scripture lesson, 1st Corinthians, 13th chapter.

The offering went in aid of the religious education of the United Church of Canada.

At all three of the appointments the services were well attended.

CAPITAL CITY SAYS FAREWELL TO BARON BYNG

Thousands Assemble at Station on Departure of Governor-General.

MINISTER PRESENT.

Most Demonstrative and Demonstrative Ever Given To Departing Representative.

OTTAWA, Ont., Sept. 28. —(Canadian Press). — Byng of Vimy went home yesterday, thousands assembled to bid him goodbye. His send-off was probably the most demonstrative, and certainly the most democratic ever given to a departing Governor-General.

Long before the train time the station was filled. Beyond the gates, people with official standing began to fill the space round the end of the Vice-Regal train. The space became to small and the train was pulled out a little to enlarge it. Again it filled and by the time their excellencies arrived there train was almost out of the long train-shed and the platform was thronged. Only a comparative few in the enclosure had official status. The rest had slipped in some how. When the final good-byes were said cabinet ministers were jostled by messenger boys in the line which filed past to shake hands with Byng of Vimy, and officers in the full dress of the Navy, the Air Force and the Militia made way for bewildered ladies who found themselves swept into the line.

For half an hour, the hand-shaking continued. Then their Excellencies stepped upon the platform of their train, the Guard of Honor which fringed the crowd with scarlet came to attention and the train shed rang with repeated cheers. The crowd had closed in until tracks and platforms, buffers, baggage trucks and ice-wagons were covered with the cheering throng. The train moved out slowly as the band played "Should Auld Acquaintance Be Forgot." Lord and Lady Byng waved from their platform until the train was lost to view.

Representative of official and private life were there. Ranking senior officers of the Navy, Air Force and Militia were conspicuous in their showy uniforms. Returned soldiers in mufti wore their medals. Politicians from opposing camps fraternised. Mesenger boys fought their way through the crowd with last minute boxes, obviously containing flowers for Lady Byng. One of these found himself facing Lord Byng. Embarrased with cap in one hand and a big flimsy box from the florists in the other, the boy dropped the cap and grasped the hand the retiring Governor General had extended toward him. A timid old lady on the edge of the platform stumbled on the gravel ballast of the track. She looked frantically round for her escort. A huge be-medalled man in the kilts of the Cameron Highlanders caught her up and set her down in front of the man she had gone to lok at from afar. Byng took her hand, bent over to speak to her and for a few moments they laughed together to the exclusion of everybody else.

The Vive-Regal train was made up of the two special cars the Cornwall and the York. In addition the Government had ordered that the Killarney be attached to the end of the train. It is the coach which housed the Prince of Wales on his official trip in 1919, and was for some time the late Lord Shaughnessy's private car. Lord Byng is said to prefer it to any other car he had used in Canada.

Bouquets were put aboard the Killarney all afternoon long, one, of red roses, stood almost as high as Lady Byng herself. It was tied with the Colours of the Cameron Regiment.

Lady Byng takes with her to England, Miss Sandford, who came out from England, as her Lady-in-Waiting. The only member of Byng's staff to return with him is Capt. Lord William Scott.

Premier King, ex-Premier Meighen, Sir Robert Borden, practically very members of the new cabinet, Sir Henry Thornton, President of the Canadian National Railways, Consuls resident in Ottawa, representatives of the Church, the fighting force, the returned soldiers and of several women's organizations attended the send-off.

RALLY DAY SERVICE.

Sunday School Held in Morning at Young People's Anniversary.

MARMORA, Sept. 28.—The United Sunday School held its annual Rally Day service on Sunday morning. The rostrum and windows looked exquisite in their decoration of flowers and foliage. The sunniness of the day occasioned a good attendance of scholars, teachers, and parents. In the special order of service, the following scholars took part:

Exercise—James Linn, Jack McInroy, Joe Dale and Bert Kouri.

Recitation—Grace Prentice.

Recitation—"The Master is Coming," Miss Gladys Williams.

Duet—"Tell the Little Children," Myrtle Potts and Jessie Williams.

Missionary exercise, concluding with hymn, "From Greenland's Icy Mountains."

China—Myrtle Potts.
Japan—Edith Henry.
India—Dorothy Marett.
Africa—Mary Boyd.
New Indian—Helen Rose.
Canadian Indian—Nellie Davidson.

GETTING READY FOR THRESHERS

Women Have To Cook and Men To Clean Barns.

DOURO, Sept. 28.—Threshing is a sort of distasteful, dreaded job on the farm. Especially is it a bugbear to the women who often have trouble to get help for the extra work entailed. Pickles have to be made up, plenty of delicious pies and cakes made, vegetables have to be prepared, a larger table or tables than the family usually needs has to be got ready to be loaded down with good things to eat. There are heaps of dishes to wash, many loaves of bread have to be baked before hand, and there is the cleaning up afterwards. Children always ask to stay home on threshing day to see the excitement and listen to the men's conversation.

A few years ago the men used to have to cut and prepare a pile of coarse wood for the steam engines but nowadays few steam engines are left. Gasoline has supplanted the steam. The latter are fine when they run but sometimes they don't.

The men have granaries to clean bins to prepare, and neighbors to notify so that help will be on hand when the mill arrives.

On the morning of the threshing day the neighboring farmers arrive one by one, the engine starts a chug-chug, and the work starts. All days there is a busy hum as the sheaves are "fed" to the mill and the grain is separated from the straw and carried away to the bins.

Messrs. Coughlin and White do most of Douro's threshing in recent years. Here and there other mills do some of the work but mostly it is "Martin" and "Jack". There are few jars while these jovial threshers are around and soon comes the "move" on to another "job". It is always said of threshers that one is glad to see them come and glad to see them go.

"As Home His Footsteps He Hath Turned...."

(Examiner Correspondence)

WARKWORTH, Sept. 28—After an absence of 35 years from the place of his boyhood, Joseph G. Boyce of Stratford and London, returned to Warkworth yesterday a stranger in a strange town. He wandered into the Leonard House, bought himself a cigar from the clerk, chatted a few minutes about his business, struck a light, and strolled out again down the street in the direction of Morganston where he had lived with his parents until he was seventeen.

In those days Warkworth was the community centre of a large area of Northumberland, and is yet. The boy Joe Boyce was drawn to it, as youth has always been drawn by the lure of adventure, of contact with their fellows.

Yesterday no one knew him in that same street, no one spoke to him in friendly salutation, nor did he recognize one of the many who passed him. And lonesome as he had often been in his 35 years of wandering he was never so lonesome as yesterday when he came HOME — to its disappointment and disillusion.

"None of the names on those stores is the same as when I was a boy here, and I haven't seen a soul I knew. I wanted to see the old home again down at Morganston so I took a little holiday roughing about. I saw it today, and it looked pretty shabby."

Joe Boyce's thirty-five years' absence have not been like the long sleep of one Van Winkle for he has worked in the United States and latterly in Western Ontario, but his home coming was less cheerful than old Rip's. In the nostalgia that finally drove him back to the place of his youth there was probably none of the utter solitariness of his wandering about Warkworth yesterday.

And as he turned back toward the Morganston road he remarked, "I have wanted to see the old place again, but I'll never come back. I'm more at home around Stratford and London."

WED SECOND TIME.

LONDON, Sept. 28. — After 50 years of married life, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Tyson, of the Home of the Variety Artists' Federation, were married recently for the second time on their golden wedding day. This time they wanted to have a church wedding, as the first ceremony took place in the register office. The bride was 69 and the bridesmaids were 75, 82 and 95 years old.

PREMIER DEFINES FRENCH POLICIES

France Is Determined To Pay Her Debts, Says Poincare.

BAR-LE-DUC, France, Sept. 28—Premier Poincare, making his first political speech since taking over the helm of the French Government last August yesterday expressed the hope that the settlement of the war debts soon will come up for discussion in Parliament.

Addressing the General Council of the Department of the Meuse, of which he has been a member for forty years, the Premier said that France has never repudiated her foreign debts, and that she is determined to pay them in accordance with her capacity and within the limits of the possibility of transferring money abroad.

To Stand for Economy

At the same time, the Premier gave notice that he will resist all attempts to break down the economies provided for by decree, and foreshadowed a fight on that question when the Chamber reconvened. M. Poincare was in fine form despite his strenuous life since he took up the task of rehabilitating French finances, and was warmly supported by the entire Council He was applauded enthusiastically when he recalled that France has never yet repudiated her debts, and was given grave attention when he said that France was ready to consider closer relations with Germany, providing they were in accord with the peace treaties and France's alliances.

Building again for Greater Service

To the sound of the riveter's hammer and the song of the carpenter's saw, it rises ... a fitting climax to the sixty years in which this institution has played a vital part in the promotion of Canada's welfare.

And it foretells an era of even greater service ... for it will be devoted to the manufacture of the popularly priced Pontiac Six ... the new member of the General Motors family whose success has already electrified the automotive industry.

Containing well over 100,000 square feet of floor space, the new Pontiac Six building is merely one phase of an expansion program involving $650,000.00 and affecting, directly or indirectly, all of the corporation's six different makes of cars.

New facilities and equipment ... more modern machinery and more efficient arrangement of productive units ... even greater provisions for a superior order of craftsmanship and quality—thus does General Motors of Canada reiterate its determination ever to serve its public better, ever to provide the maximum values that human skill and capable organization can produce.

By building again for greater service, General Motors both strengthens its powers to build a better car for every purse and purpose—

—and prepares itself to meet the ever-increasing demand for its newest product ... a demand that spreads throughout the Dominion and the Empire overseas.

EQUALITY IS BASIS OF LEAGUE'S REPLY

Lord Cecil States Power's Offer To U. S. Was Most Reasonable.

GENEVA, Sept. 28 (Canadian Press).—That the United States could not reasonably ask for more than a position of equality with members of the League of Nations was the opinion expressed last night by Viscount Cecil, chief British delegate to the League, when asked for his views on the recent treatment of the reservations put forward by the United States in connection with its adherence to the world court.

"Equality," said Lord Cecil, "was the basis of the powers' reply to Washington. I do not know whether the United States will be satisfied but I think the powers' offer is reasonable."

Lord Cecil declared he believed the recent League Assembly meeting was highly successful as it showed growth in the spirit of solidarity and confidence in the League of Nations.' He defended his resolution for an interpretation of the meaning of the covenant of the League by saying that many persons were beginning to fear the League would infringe on strictly national affairs, whereas it should restrict its activities to matters international.

Answering criticisms that Great Britain has no definite League policy he asserted that his country would support the League with all the means at its power as a great instrument of co-operation and conciliation.

PRESBYTERY MEETS AT STIRLING CHURCH

Rev. H. B. Kenny Elected Chairman—Stirling News.

STIRLING, Sept. 28.—On Thursday last the Belleville Presbytery of the United church met here. The Rev. A. J. Wilson, B.A. of Napanee conducted the devotional exercises, followed by the roll call.

On motion it was decided that a chairman or ex-chairman be not eligible for re-election.

Rev. H. B. Kenny of the Tabernacle church, Belleville, was elected chairman. Rev. G. C. R. McQuade of Odessa was re-elected clerk and Mr. H. C. Martin of Stirling re-elected treasurer.

Organization being completed standing commitees were appointed for the year, in all thirteen: Home Missions, Foreign Missions, Religious Education and Young People's Work, Colleges and Students' Statistics and Roll, Finance, Church Property and Boundaries of Pastoral Charges, Ministerial Relationship Maintenance and Extension, Stewardship, Sabbath Observance, Visiting Records of Congregations.

Reports of committees were heard which caused lively discussions. Rev. D. C. Ramsay, M.A. and Rev. C. W. Barrett spoke on behalf of Queen's Theological College and Rev. Dr. E. N. Baker for the new Albert Boys College which opens Thursday, September 30.

Rev. Fred J. Horwood having resigned his charge at Marmora, Rev. C. W. Barrett was appointed interim Moderator for Marmora circuit. Rev. H. B. Kenney was elected to represent the Presbytery on the executive of the Settlement Commitee of which he is a member.

Members of the Presbytery were invited to attend a conference on Dominion and World Service, Massey Hall, Toronto, October 5, 6 and 7, when outstanding speakers will give addresses.

Some matters were laid over until next meeting. Report of conference committee on change of boundaries of Presbyteries and report regarding the election of a Commissioner to the General Council.

The next Presbytery meeting will be held in Holloway church, Belleville.

The Ladies' union of St. Paul's United church served dinner to the delegates present.

The Ladies' Aid of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church held the weekly sewing meeting on Wednesday last at the summer home of Miss Ethel Anderson at Oak Lake. There was an attendance of thirty-five and a most enjoyable afternoon was spent. Lunch was provided by some of the members.

Rally Day was fittingly observed in the different churches here on Sunday. The services at St. Andrews church included the baptism of the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Foster.

Confirmation services were held in St. James' R.C. church on Sunday, September 19. Rt. Rev. Archbishop Spratt of Kingston, Fathers Nicholson of Kingston and Killeen of Belleville were present. Twenty-two were received into the church. A very large congregation was present.

FASCISTS IN RIOT.

Enter Theatre and Smash Memorial Tablet Erected Last Year.

PISA, Italy, Sept. 28. —A band of Fascists entered the Theatre Verdi, here yesterday, and before an approving crowd smashed the tablet placed there last year to commemorate the playing of Othello by Tita Ruffo.

The demonstration is believed to be the result of an article which appeared a few days ago in the Fascist newspaper Impero, calling attention to anti-Fascist propaganda alleged to have been carried on by Ruffo, whose sister is the widow of the murdered Matteotti. Ruffo is acused of financing an anti-Fascist ponrnal in South American and using all his influence among Italians in both North and South America against the Fascist reg ime.

OBITUARY.

THERESA G. SHAUGHNESSY

HASTINGS, Sept. 28.—After an illness since last Christmas, Theresa Grace Shaughnessy, 22, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Shaughnessy, of town, died at her home Monday afternoon. Miss Shaughnessy was beloved by all the townspeople who knew her. She is mourned by her parents, two sisters, Mrs. T. F. Wiese, of Belle River, Ont., and Mary at home, and by three brothers: Leo of Midford, Oregon, James of Memphis, Tenn., and Edward at home. The funeral will be held on Wednesday at 9 a.m. to the Church of Our Lady of Mt. Carmel, and thence to the Parish Cemetery.

PEARL PALMATEER.

WARKWORTH, Sept. 28. — The death occurred on Sunday of Pearl Palmateer, thirty-five years of age, daughter of Charles Palmateer of Morganston. The funeral will take place from the family residence on Wednesday afternoon to the Christian Church Cemetery at Morganston. Miss Palmateer is survived by her parents, one brother, Foss, of Toronto, and two sisters, Lottie and Mossie, at home.

CECIL SKUCE.

CAVAN, Sept. 28.—Cecil Skuce, son of William Skuce and the late Etta Staples, Mount Horeb, died suddenly at Mount Horeb on Sunday afternoon from spinal meningitis. The deceased had, although not feeling well, separated the milk on Saturday morning. He was buried on Sunday evening.

MRS. JAMES DRURY.

NORWOOD, Sept. 28.—The funeral of the late Mrs. James Drury, who passed away on Wednesday last at the home of her son, Mr. Thomas Allen of South Dummer, was held from her son's residence on Friday afternoon last.

The deceased, who was 89 years of age, was married three times. Her first husband was the late James Spence, and to them were born one son, Mr. Samuel Spence of Windsor, and one daughter Mrs. William Clysdale of Essex. Her second husband, the late Andrew Allen, died about twenty years ago, leaving a family of six, namely: William Allen of New York, A. F. Allen of Comber, A. G. Allen of Peterboro, Joshua Allen, Asphodel, Thomas Allen of Asphodel, and Mrs. Henry McIntosh of Mount Clemens, Mich.

Her third husband was the late James Drury, who passed away at Norwood in January last at the ripe old age of 96 years.

WEDDING BELLS.

DORIS—CONDON.

DOURO, Sept. 28. — A beautiful autumn wedding took place Wednesday morning at 8.30 at St. Joseph's Church, Douro, when Miss May Condon, R.N., eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Condon, was united in marriage to Mr. Frederick R. Doris, of Keene. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father McCarney. The bride was beautifully gowned in shell pink georgette, over pink satin, with edgings of silver, black velvet picture hat, pink stockings, black satin shoes and squirrel-trimmed navy blue needlepoint coat. She carried a bouquet of pink roses.

Miss Rita Condon, R.N., sister of the bride, was bridesmaid. She wore maize georgette over satin, black velvet picture hat, maize stockings, black satin shoes and brown coat. She also carried a bouquet of pink roses.

The groom's gift to the bride was a rope of pearls, to the bridesmaid, a white gold bar pin, and to the groomsman, Mr. Earl Doris, his brother, a sterling fountain pen.

After a wedding breakfast, served at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Doris left for Rochester, N.Y., where the honeymoon will be spent. The bride travelled in a dress of poudre blue georgette over satin. On their return they will reside on their farm near Keene. The young couple received many handsome gifts.

SHEEP STEALER GETS SIX MONTHS

Found on Farm of Mr. W. Ross at Campbellford.

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 28. — One of the residents of Campbellford will have no need to worry over the high cost of living for the next six months, Mr. W. Ross, who was looking over his farm one day last week for a strayed colt, came across a young man in the act of killing and dressing a sheep. Upon investigation, it proved to be one of the several sheep, Mr. Ross has been missing from time to time, so the purloiner was asked to accompany the Chief on a trip to Cobourg where he was sentenced to six months.

Cars Damaged.

Two cars collided on Sunday afternoon on Front Street, each car meeting with considerable damage. Mr. Grafton, of Oshawa, stalled his engine in the centre of the street and Mr. Melvin McComb, coming down the street from the grounds was unable to steer clear of Mr. Grafton's car and ran into it. The radiator of Mr. McComb's car was shoved back while Mr. Grafton's car was wrecked also.

Personals.

Dr. and Mrs. G. A. Wood and son left on Sunday for their home in Syracuse, N.Y. after spending the past two weeks with Mrs. Wood's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Atkinson, and with Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Maybee, of Belleville.

Mr. Bert Beavis and Mrs. G. Ivey have been in Peterborough during the past week to be near Mrs. Beavis, who underwent a serious operation there last week. Mrs. Beavis is in a very critical condition.

Mrs. F. C. Maybee and daughter Lois spent the week end with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. Atkinson, Rear street.

Mrs. James Alexander went to Belleville on Saturday to be near her sister-in-law, Mrs. Frank Reed, who was seriously injured last week in a motor accident. Mrs. Reed (Miss T. Arnold) formerly of Campbellford, was badly hurt when a slow moving freight hit their car. Mr. Reed escaped with a few bruises.

The people of the community turned out in large numbers on Saturday in spite of inclement weather, to partake in the bargains of the different stores on 'Dollar Day.' Articles of sale were greatly reduced in price and many benefitted by this.

A large number attended the picture show held on Thursday evening in the High school under the auspices of the Campbellford Cloth Co. The pictures were enjoyed by all present and Messrs. Collison and J. H. Bell contributed to the musical part of the programme.

Messrs. Leslie Clegg and Everett Thomas left on Monday for Toronto to attend Toronto University.

Mr. Bernard Kerr, of Young's Point, spent the week end with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Duncan Kerr.

SYNOPIS

His father's warning—"Take womens' love scornfully—and forget"—has made Juan the world 's greatest lover. His cynicism is checked by Madonna-like Adriana Varanese; loving her, he reforms, but incurs the enmity of infamous Lucretia Borgia, who loves him, and Donati, her kinsman, who covets Adriana. Through circumstances Juan's faith in Adriana is destroyed; cynical again, he becomes the lover of Lucretia. To save her father, Adriana marries Donati, but Juan hides, in the bridal chamber and kills Donati. Adriana flees; her father is killed; Juan is captured; Lucretia rejoices.

CHAPTER X.—Continued.

He would not escape now, she told herself. Beside the men who held him stood others, their swords drawn. Even he could not elude them, could not fight his way to freedom with no weapon. And yet—yet one never could be sure of him.

She had thought that his heart was hers; had been sure of it, time after time. He had held her life in his two hands. She had ignored all other men, all the plans in which her brother sought to enroll her interest, that she might remain in her rooms, preparing for his coming, and when he had come, then she had rejoiced in his presence and in the happiness he brought her.

And now she knew that always he had played with her, that another had been enthroned in his heart. She had fought against recognizing the contempt that had looked out from his eyes; had told herself that he could look at a woman in no other way.

She had been abject before him, had made her clever, cruel mind subservient to his. Never had she tried to hide her love of him, but rather had she gloried in showing him how great it was.

She had been grateful for his caresses, avid for the slightest token of his affection.

And now she knew that always he had laughed at her, scorned her, used her only as a means, she told herself, of forgetting that white-faced slip of a girl who had just run sobbing down the stairs.

His eyes met hers, mocking her, gibing at her. She grew hot as she thought of the things he must be remembering.

She could save him now; a word to her brother, and Juan would be taken to prison, and then at once set free. Or she could let him go to his death and let her heart die with him.

She knew which he would choose. But she would not admit to herself that he preferred death to her. Meeting his gaze, she pleaded with him; her dark eyes begged him to show some least sign of caring for her, that she might save him.

The mockery in his glance answered her.

Her face hardened into its mask again. Angrily she clenched her hands stood rigid, her mouth a straight, hard line, her eyes narrowed, while the soldiers led him past her, down the stairs. Yet, despite her quick, flashing anger, she could not but feel admiration for him. She had wanted to give up everything for love—he had sacrificed his life for it.

She stood listening to the footsteps descending the marble stairs, his and those of the soldiers who gripped his arms so tightly. The sound was like the tolling of bells for her own burial. She wanted to run after him, to command the soldiers to release him. But pride came to her rescue, that and the knowledge that he would be quite likely to refuse her aid.

He would go through the streets of Rome for the last time; for the last time would look up at the moonlit sky, and breathe the free, soft air. It was near dawn; birds would be twittering in the shrubbery of the walled gardens that he would pass. Never again would he hear them.

They would take him to the grim prison at the Tiber's edge, and down into its depths, into a dungeon cell below the water level. There might be a window, a tiny, inch-wide slight through which he could almost see the sky.

She wanted him to suffer; to find, while waiting for the death that he had courted, that he desired the life he had so mockingly thrown away. She told herself that this must happen. She would delay his death, would go to him, and taunt him.

And something within her whispered that when she went, she would offer him life, and love. Hating herself for her humility, she told herself that perhaps now he would give her what he had denied her before, would not longer thrust her love aside.

She had seen men who faced death, after defying it. They had changed, had become like children, begging for what they had scorned.

She did not ask that, knew that she would despise him should he so change. But perhaps, after a day, or two days, or three, of solitude and despair, if then he saw her—saw her beautifully garbed, with pearls threaded through her hair, lovelier than ever before—it might be then that he would realize her desirability as never till that moment.

And then—ah! then, what happiness she would know. No more of Rome, with its intrigues and quarrels! With Juan she would go to the sunny, quiet hills, where they would spend long, lovely days of peace and beauty, listening to the splashing of a fountain, watching the birds wheel against the sky.

Dawn, and lazy afternoon; dusk, and blue twilight; evening star, and crescent moon; with him she would live through them all, content.

And Juan, led to the prison which he thought never to leave save when they carried his dead body forth, was glad to go.

Soon even the beautiful, cruel memory of Adriana would be blotted from his mind. The strange, jagged pattern that his life had made would be cut short, ended suddenly because of love, as his father's had been. Now he could understand the act of the girl who had stabbed his father. Love such as hers, such as his for Adriana, that nothing could kill—such love could find its end only in death.

CHAPTER XI.

To Juan it was a relief when the door of his dungeon closed behind him. Even its horrors could not touch him, for his own despair was too great to let anything hurl him into deeper wretchedness.

Through a tiny slit of a window, high in the wall, he could see the barest scrap of sky, when morning came. He knew well enough why that window had been built into the wall—to taunt the poor wretches who might be imprisoned in the dungeon with a glimpse of the world which in all probability they would never see again.

Well, he did not wish to see the outer world, he told himself. He wanted only to die as speedily as possible. He wondered if there was any way in which he could taunt his jailers into killing him at once.

The floor of the cell was covered with dirty water, about two feet in depth. As Juan looked down at it a huge rat, with slimy, dirty body, swam across it. Accustomed though he was to luxury, Juan did not even flinch as it came toward him.

When a man had loved Adriana, and found her false, he said to himself, what could squalor matter?

To him it seemed that he was already dead; life held nothing for him now. If only he could forget Adriana's pale delicate face; forget the expression in her eyes that day in the garden beside the dreary, gray church, when she had looked at him as if he were all the world to her!

HASTINGS MAN WADED THROUGH

stood up well. The windows were all broken and the roof torn up in a few places causing the rain to come right through and down to the main floor. My room was a mess, but I am not complaining.

Houses Piled Together

You cannot imagine what some people came through. A short distance from our hotel there were about 50 or 60 small cottages, all occupied. The land is very low there so just imagine what happened to them. They were all piled up in a heap and men were rescuing people from them. All places along the beach which felt the brunt of that last big storm are now piled up in a heap also.

Cars were overturned and houses flung on top of them. When I got home this morning I struck over to the Beach, along the main street, Ocean Drive, and there I got cornered in a restaurant for the second storm which was worse than the one through the night for the wind changed and blew from the opposite direction. Among the crowd of us in the restaurant was a hysterical woman who could not be quieted, making it that much harder for the rest of us to bear up. Believe me it was no pleasant sight to look across the street and see the whole roof of some building rise up in the air and be carried along for a block or two before falling to the earth.

Companions in Distress

Men, women and children were huddled together in groups, drenched by the rain with white faces and teeth chattering from the cold air.

A large government dredge with 28 men aboard sank just a short way from shore. Some were rescued, I don't know how many. The others went down. A big coast freighter is lying up on shore along Fishers Island. That island also has about 50 to 60 families living there and it was completely washed over by the seas. Our chief engineer managed to get over here from Miami proper. He had to lay planks over holes to get the car over the new causeway. The old causeway, the one mostly used by the public is impassable, partly washed away.

The chief says its worse over in Miami than here, but I don't see how that could be possible. He said a big five-masted ship was washed from the bay up into northeast First street, and a small motorboat was washed right inside one of the stores. The land is low at that place, but even so, one can hardly realize the possibility of such occurrences as that.

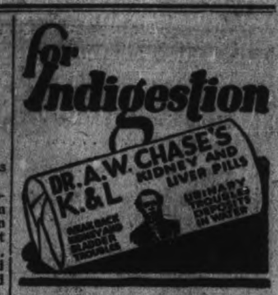
His Home Ruined

The chief himself is all in. His home is a complete ruin, roof ripped off, windows smashed, and his furniture which was the very best is ruined. His wife has been visiting in New York where they formerly came from, and she was to have left by boat from there for Miami today He could not get any word to her and is almost sick at thinking what she will come into when she arrives.

Looking from the Beach over to the city you can see the many smoke stacks and tops of buildings blown away. Also Carter's million dollar pier which is under construction on the Beach—the whole end of it was carried away. It stood off the storm we had last July, but it could not weather through this one. There is all sors of wreckage out at sea and along the shore. I will not attempt to estimate the number of deaths, but I am very, very thankful that I am alive to write this letter to you, and I sincerely hope that I will never be in any more storms like this.

Our plant is a complete wreck, the roof off, and water knee deep in the engine room. I don't know what they will do, but I hardly think they will rebuild over here. Do not worry about me. I am all right. Help is being rushed to the ones in need.

I hope everyone at home is in good health. Take it from me—the north country is the place to live in."



CROPS ARE LATE BUT VERY GOOD

Douro Farmers Find Most of Harvest Yields Well.

DOURO, Sept. 28.—The spring of 1926 was so cold and backward that dire predictions were made as to the crop. In the spring and early summer growth was very slow and the best that was hoped for was a half crop. But when warmth and moisture came together the growth was marvellous and instead of no crop or a half crop there was a good crop. Even peas which are now a sort of gamble as a crop are good this year.

May has always been considered the hay month but this year in May there was no hay growth to speak of but in June it grew fast and proved eventually to be a heavy crop. Corn and gardens are good, oats and barley are good, wheat was fair and in many cases good, turnips on account of the work of an insect are a failure here as elsewhere. Potatoes are large but scarce in the hills. The grain yield is not proving quite as good as the straw would indicate but Douro can join in Thanksgiving to the Giver of all good for a bountiful harvest. Pastures have not been badly burnt up at any time so that the milk flow though decreasing in late summer as it always does was never very low.

FRENCH OFFICERS SHOOT GERMANS

Incident Occurred Shortly After a War Veterans' Re-union.

GERMERSHEIM, Germany, Sept 28.—A Bavarian Government Commissioner has completed his investigation into the shooting of three German officers. He has determined that in the course of a dispute two French lieutenants in civilian garb shot and seriously wounded a shoemaker, Richard Holzmann. Two Germans who witnessed the shooting, followed the Frenchmen to learn their identity, and, according to the Commissioner's version, the officers thereupon fired at the pursuers, killing one and wounding the other.

Excitement of the incident is growing among the inhabitants, as it comes only a short time after a clash between the French and Bavarians at a war veterans' reunion.

Chief Justice Taft Will Not Comment on Quebec Liquor Law.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28 (Canadian Press).—"My dear fellow, I have been out of politics for a long time, but I still know enough about politics to know what I ought not to talk about."

This was the reply of William Howard Taft, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, when asked by a newspaperman for his opinion on the workings of the Quebec liquor law. Mr. Taft has just returned from Murray Bay, Quebec.

PLAN TO ELIMINATE ORIENTAL LABORERS

Lumbermen of British Columbia Plan To Reduce Asiatic Staffs.

VICTORIA, Sept. 28. —(Canadian Press). — Definite plans by which Oriental labour would be eliminated from the lumber industry of British Columbia over a period of years through successive reductions have been laid before the Provincial Government here by a large lumbermen's delegation which appeared to protest against the workings of the new minimum wage law. In a memorandunt which was made public after the meeting with the Cabinet the lumbermen outlined a scheme by which they would voluntarily accomplish the of Asiatic labour to a minimum.

Under this plan 25 per cent. of the Orientals now employed would be dismissed during the first year of the new law's operation; 25 per cent. the second year, and so on, until only a few Orientals were left in jobs which white men refuse to fill. The scheme would require the addition of six hundred new white men to the lumber payroll of the Province, the first year in place of Orientals, the lumber men stated. This would involve heavy sacrifices on the part of those who have invested in the industry.

UNCLE WIGGILY

Tod ays' Bedtime Story

By Howard R. Garis

(Copyright, McClure Syndicate.)

UNCLE WIGGILY AND BOBBIE RINGTAIL

Bobbie Ringtail was lost. There was no doubt about it: he could not be found anywhere. Upstairs, downstaire and in the lady's chamber, Bobbis Ringtail was looked for, but it was of no use.

"Where is my brother? Oh, where is he?" sobbed Bettie Ringtail, slapping her little black paws together.

What's that? You didn't know little girls had paws? Oh, I forgot to tell you that Bobbie Ringtail was a little animal boy—a raccoon—and he had rings of fur on his tail which is the reason he had such an odd name. And, of course, Sister Bettie, being also a raccoon, had rings on her tail. And she had little black paws, almost like the hands of a baby.

"But, where is Bobbie?" asked Bettie again and again.

"I don't know, my dear," answered her mother. "We must look for him. Your father is searching and we must do the same."

Uncle Wiggily looked in hollow trees.

Over the fields and through the woods went Mrs. Ringtail and her little girl Bettie, looking for the lost Bobbie. They looked in hollow trees, under fallen logs and even in holes of the earth. In one hole they found Jackie and Peetie Bow Wow, playing Indians.

"No, we haven't seen Bobbie," barked the little puppy dogs. "But if we do we'll send him home," whined Peetie.

Bettie and her mother traveled farther and farther and pretty soon they met Uncle Wiggily Longears, the rabbit.

"Are you coming adventuring with me?" asked the bunny gentleman.

"We are not adventuring, we are looking for Bobbie," sadly explained Mrs. Ringtail.

"Please, Uncle Wiggily, will you help us find my little lost brother?" begged Bettie.

"Of course I will!" said Mr. Longears. "Here now, to make it quicker you go one way and I'll go the other way, Mrs. Ringtail. And we shall see who will be the first to find Bobbie."

So Uncle Wiggily hopped over the fields and through the woods as fast, as he could hop, calling, now and then, the lost 'coon boy's name. But Bobbie did not answer. Uncle Wiggily looked in hollow trees and under fallen logs and in holes of the ground, but it was of no use. In one hole he found Jollie and Jillie Longtail, the mice children, but when Mr. Longears asked them about the lost raccoon Jillie squeaked:

"No, we haven't seen Bobbie!"

"But if we do we'll send him home!" whispered Jollie. The mice children were very quiet.

"How did Bobbie come to get lost?" asked Jillie.

"His mother told me he went to the brook to wash a piece of fish before he ate it, and he never came back," said Uncle Wiggily. Raccoons you know, are very clean animals. They wash all their food before they eat it, except ears of sweet corn.

So Uncle Wiggily hopped on farther and then, all of a sudden, he heard a voice calling:

"Bob Bob! Bob!"

"Ha! There is some one else hunting the lost Bobbie," thought the rabbit gentleman. But the voice went on calling: "Bob—Bob White!"

"Oh, it's the quail bird!" exclaimed Uncle Wiggily. "He has a whistling call that sounds exactly like 'Bob White.' I know what I'll do. I'll get the quail bird to whistle his call of 'Bob! Bob! Bob!' without the 'White' part. The quail can fly around much faster than I can hop, and he can go much farther."

"I'll be very glad to help you find lost Bobbie," whistled the quail bird, when Uncle Wiggily spoke to him. So he flew around calling: "Bob Bob! Bobbie!" And in a little while a voice answered:

"Here I am! Who wants me? What's the matter?" and the quail saw Bobbie Ringtail asleep under a pile of leaves not far from the little raccoon boy's hollow tree home. "Oh!ugh—um!" grunted Bobbie as he stretched out his paws.

"Come home at once! You're lost!" whistled the quail.

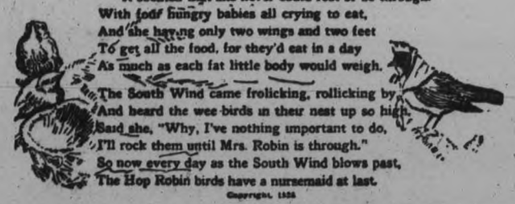
"No, I wasn't lost!" chattered Bobbie. "I washed my fish and ate it and then I felt sleepy so I curled up in the leaves and I've been there ever since!" And so he had. Home he ran and his mother and sister were glad Bobbie was found, even if he really wasn't lost. They thanked the quail bird and Uncle Wiggily, and the quail flew away whistling: "Bob! Bob White!" And if the buttonhook will pull the cork out of the molasses when it falls in, I'll tell you next about Uncle Wiggily's sweet flag.

Hop Robin's Nursemaid

By SHIRLEY RODMAN WILLIAMS

HOW we all appreciate the little kindnesses done in passing. So often they mean more and spread more happiness than the big, carefully planned things. It's because they're unexpected and are prompted by genuine impulses rather than any sense of duty and without any expectancy of reward. The child who is taught to do the little unexpected kindnesses in passing not only gives happiness to another, but gets pleasure himself, for nothing makes one's soul bloom and grow as unselfishness

POOR Mrs. Hop Robin had so much to do
It seemed that she never could rest or be through.
With four hungry babies all crying to eat,
And she having only two wings and two feet
To get all the food, for they'd eat in a day
As much as each fat little body would weigh.



The South Wind came frolicking, rollicking by
And heard the wee birds in their nest up so high.
Said she, "Why, I've nothing important to do,
I'll rock them until Mrs. Robin is through."
So now every day as the South Wind blows past,
The Hop Robin birds have a nursemaid at last.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, but do not Compel.

FOR WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 29, 1926

(Copyright, 1926, by The McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Friendly stars guide this day, according to astrology. Venus, Mars, and Saturn are all in benefic aspect.

Women should push all their financial interests while this configuration prevails. Large salaries are to be commanded by many.

This is a happy day for lovers and those engaged under this rule should benefit greatly.

Theaters now will come much into the public consciousness and success is foretold for new plays which touch the spiritual note.

New players will gain fame through dramas that are the opposite to the sordid studies of human nature offered recently astrologers foretell.

Again army officers are to come into public notice and to be much honored because of service to the nation, the seers prophesy.

Mars to-day presages benefits for surgeons and physicians who will be able to do much in safeguarding the public health in the new year.

Heavy rains, lightning and floods may be expected in many parts of the east where farmers may suffer heavy losses.

Science continues under a stimulating rule of the stars making for tremendous discoveries that will revolutionize our ways of living, the seers foretell.

According to astrology we are to improve health and physique to such an extent that life will be prolonged to the century mark.

America is to win fame as the country which produces more beautiful men and women than any country in the world has known, it is prognosticated.

Among the children of the world are future geniuses who are to outdo the achievements of all history, the seers announce.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the augury of a happy, quiet year in which, however, they have the temptation to speculate.

Children born on this day may be unusually talented but correspondingly indifferent to practical matters. They will require careful training.

HER OWN WAY by A GIRL of TODAY

JUDY'S DILEMMA

"Judy, do you know you have completed my cure," said John Meredith. "Never again can I call myself cursed by life; never again can I say that I am not as other men are, for I find that I can be moved by pure emotion—thank God for that! And you do love me, Judy, do you not?"

The question brought me back with a thud. I stood up and shook my soft feather trimmed evening wrap into place.

"You do love me," he whispered again.

"I don't know," I told him honestly.

"But your soft lips did answer my kisses, your yielding form did not stiffen in my arms; you acted as though you loved my caresses, and surely no woman does that unless she loves the man who gives them."

"My dear John," I said, "that is an exploded notion. Our mothers were taught that no girl could love caresses for their own sake, as men do; but suddenly we have found out that we are human; there is something very sweet in your kisses John."

Again he pulled me toward him. "Judy, you do not deny your emotions, you do love me, you must love me. Darling, take pity on me, I have missed so much, I have never had any joy or real happiness before in all my life."

"Judy," called Joan, "are you ready?"

"Yes, dear, I was just coming."

"Well, then, I'll send for John," she said as she came through the drawing room door out into the hall.

John also stepped forward. "I am here with Judy, Sis," he said.

In spite of all his efforts to keep emotion out of his voice it slightly trembled.

Joan looked at me rather curiously but only remarked, "I never saw you looking so lovely, Judy; I don't think I ever saw you in white before. If anyone had asked me, I do not think that I would have said that pure white, without a vestige of color to relieve it, would be the most becoming to you."

"I would have said so," broke in John impulsively, "From the moment my eyes rested on her yesterday I knew that only the absence of all color that we always associate with angelic purity would bring out her radiant beauty."

"Jack, anyone would know you had always lived with books," exclaimed Joan.

"Of course that poetical language sounds perfectly natural to you, but probably any other of Judy's young men would have said, 'Gad, Judy, you are certainly some chicken, decked out in ostrich feathers'."

"Don't be silly, Joan," I said, for John's face showed his acute mortification.

CONDITION—Rolls of flesh on the diaphragm.

TREATMENT— Stretching and deep breathing are the logical procedure to correct this bodily defect. Stretch your hands over your head as high as they will go, then inhale slowly, hold your breath as long as you can and exhale slowly. Do this several times, night and morning. It is excellent, not only for the figure, but for the general health and the complexion as well.

WHAT'S IN A NAME?

Facts about your name, its history; its meaning; whence it was derived; its significance; your lucky day, and lucky jewel.

ALINE

Of curious Teutonic origin is Aline. It signifies "noble," and belongs to the great cycle of names evolved from the prefixes Aethel or Adel, which mean high-born or noble. Athalaric, the conqueror of Rome, was a forerunner of the feminine Aline. Since he was often known as Alaric, the process of evolution is more easily discernible.

Early in the ninth century, the feminine name of Adolphine was coined in Germany and brought to England. Though it was soon contracted to Doline—a name still common in Germany—the original name remained long enough to become the predecessor of Aline, through slurring the consonants. One of the daughters of Waltheof, Earl of Northumbria, was so called, and it is believed that her christening set the fashion for the barbarous names which made their appearances in England about that time.

Aline bears no connection with Eileen, which is the Irish version of Eleanor; nor with Aileen, which is another form of the same name, though the similarity in pronunciation is striking. Aline, however, is more popular in this country than either of the other two.

Aline's talismanic gem is the ruby. It will protect its wearer from danger, and disease, and bring her courage and success. Tuesday is her lucky day and 3 her lucky number. The lily of purity is her flower.

GERMANY MAY HELP FRANCE IN FINANCES

Plan To Market Parcel of German Railway Bonds Losing Favor.

BERLIN, Sept. 28 (United Press)—Sources close to the Government informed the United Press to-day that the plan to market a large parcel of German railway bonds for the assistance of French treasury was losing favor. Instead, it has been proposed that $150,000 worth of the bonds be transferred directly to France. The French Government would then offer the bonds to United States banks as security for a French loan in Wall Street.

The marketing plan was evolved during the conversation of Foreign Ministers Briand and Stresemann, when Germany tentatively agreed to assist France financially in return for political concession from her old army. The respective Cabinets have had a decided report of the conversations, and it is presumed that further negotiations will take place soon.

LOVE LETTERS THAT MADE HISTORY

PRINCE DE CONDE AND ISABELLE DE LIMEUIL

(By The McClure Syndicate, Inc.)

In the days of the frightful struggle in France between the Protestants and the Catholics; Catherine de Medici, the sinister brains of the Catholics, sought to ensnare into her trap the Prince de Conde, one of the notable leaders of the Protestants. The instrument by which she hoped to realize her plan was her maid-of-honor and kinswoman, Isabelle de Limueil, a most beautiful woman. Isabelle was agreeable and soon had the impressionable Prince under her power. Through her intrigues, Isabelle got herself into trouble, was arrested and put in a cell. Conde was grief stricken at her plight and when news of this reached him through another, he sent her this letter:

"I am sending you one of my dressing gowns which has served me, and you also, when we were together, begging you to believe that I should prefer you to your gown, since I should be of more service to you than a sable. Let me know that you are anxious to retain me in your good graces, now that you are a captive, as when you were at liberty. It remains to make use of me and to give me the opportunity of coming to free you from the trouble in which you are, for you must acquaint me with the means of doing so. I have eyes which do nothing but weep, and strength which is inanimate, since it is not commanded by you.

"... If I do not see you soon I would as lief die as live. I desire it as much, or more, than my salvation."

And when he wrote this letter to Isabelle his wife was on her death bed.

YOUR JEWEL COLOR FLOWER

By Mildred Marshall

Those who wear the amethyst, today's talismanic stone are promised temperance in all things. Leonardo claimed that this stone controlled evil thoughts, quickened the mental powers of those who wore it, and made them shrewd in business matters. It is also believed to have the power to protect soldiers from harm, and to guard those who wore it from dangers of contagious diseases.

For those born on an anniversary of this date, the topaz is the natal gem. Symbolic of the sun, it drives care and worry away from its wearer, and dispels all fear.

Yellow, India's sacred color, is today's lucky hue. It is believed to bring great happiness to its wearer.

Cleveland Clinches Second Place In American League

ALL SAINTS' ROYALS HAVE EDGE OVER WESTERN ONTARIO WINNERS IN PLAY-OFF FOR MIDGET TITLE

Both Local Pitchers Prove Too Much For Merriton Batters.

STRONG FIELDING.

Collins in Centre Features Game By Snaring Hatton's Fly.

(By F. D. C.)

The Royals of the All Saints' Athletic Association got away to a nice start in the Midget O.B.A.A. final yesterday when they trimmed the Merriton youngsters, Western Ontario winners 13 to 2, at Riverside Park.

Merrriton came here with a great record, having put Guelph away after the Royal City kids had knocked off the Toronto representatives, and the gang from the peach belt were expected to prove formidable opposition for Harry McFadden's youngsters.

On the day's play, however, the Royals were much the better team, with a big edge over Merriton, both offensively and defensively.

Both Cripps, the speed ball pitcher, who pitched the first four innings for the Royals, and Ernie Holmes, the curve ball twirler, who finished the game, had the edge on the Merriton batters. Only one run was scored off each of the local twirlers who had nice stuff and were supported snappily by their teammates.

On the other hand Rountree, the much-heralded pitcher of the visitors, was touched for sixteen hits, while the defence work of the Merriton crew was full of holes. In fact the Western Ontario representatives made more errors than hits. Royals were on top of them all through the engagement and won as handily as the final figure would indicate.

Hope and Hollingsworth in the Royal infield contributed nice defensive plays and Collins in centre had the feature out of the game when he made a long sprint to snare Heaton's fly on the dead run in the sixth. Kelly, the visiting second sacker, was the best fielder for Merriton, despite two errors.

Hollingsworth with four hits and Hatton and Grosse with three safeties each led in the attack on Rountree and the Royal trio scored seven runs.

The second game will be played at Merriton Saturday and there is no reason why the Royals can't wind up the series and bring home the championship without a third fixture being necessary, although they realize the Merriton team will be a different aggregation on their own grounds.

Kelly first up for Merriton, fanned. Beaver walked but was out at second on McCann's bunt to Jones. Hatton threw McCann out when he tried to steal.

In the Royals' half Hope was safe on Kelly's fumble, but was cut down stealing. Hollingsworth singled over second. Jones struck out. Hollingsworth went to third on a passed ball and scored when Hatton dropped a single into left. Hatton stole second but was left there when Gordon struck out.

Merriton lost a chance in the second. Forrester doubled to right centre and Riddle scratched an infield hit and stole second. Heaton struck out and then Merriton made a mess out of a squeeze play, Doherty bunting an easy fly as Forrester tore in and the latter was doubled out when Hatton caught the fly.

The Royals added three. Collins drew a pass. Stuart fanned. Grosse singled to left. When Rountree threw wide trying to nail Grosse off second Collins scored. Cripps grounded out to Doherty. Hope was hit and stole second. A passed ball scored Grosse and put Hope on third. Hollingsworth's safe bunt scored Hope. Jones rolled to Rountree.

Bush struck out in Merriton's third. Rountree singled past first. Kelly drew a pass. Hope made a smart play on Beaver's roller and threw Rountree out at third. Leason walked, gilling the bases, but Forrester flied out to Collins.

For the Royals Hatton rolled to Kelly. Gordon singled to left and Collins beat out a roller to short. Stuart doubled to left scoring Gordon. Grosse singled to left, Leason making a good attempt and Collins was out at the plate when he went back thinking the ball was caught. Cripps rolled to Beaver.

Merriton got a run in the fourth. Riddle hoisted one to Hollingsworth. Heaton doubled down the right field foul line and went to third on a passed ball. Doherty crashed a single along the ground into right to score Heaton and stole second. Bush struck out and Rountree lifted a fly to Collins.

The Royals came back with two. Hope rolled to Kelly but Hollingsworth slashed a single over second and stole the middle station. Jones struck out but Hatton singled to right scoring Hollingsworth and took second on the throw in. When he started to steal third Forrester made a bad throw and the runner came home. Gordon bounced a single over second but Collins rolled to Kelly.

Holmes went to the rubber for the Peterboro youngsters in the fifth. He got Kelly on a pop fly and after Beaver had singled to right and stolen second the Royals' pitcher fanned Leason and Forrester.

The Royals went scoreless for the first time. Holmes got a life when Doherty missed Beaver's throw but was forced at second on Grosse's smash to Beaver. Grosse stole second and reached third when Riddle muffed Forrester's throw but Cripps struck out and Hope grounded to Kelly.

Merriton got their second run in the sixth. Riddle rolled to Gordon and Heaton fanned. Doherty beat out a roller to Jones and took second on the third baseman's high throw. When Hatton made a bad throw to third Doherty registered. Bush walked. Rountree shot a double to right and Kelly was passed filling the bases, but Beaver's drive was nicely taken by Grosse for the third out.

Royals Hollingsworth beat out a neat bunt for his fourth hit but Jones' long fly was captured by Bush and Kelly made two fast plays to retire Hatton and Gordon.

In the seventh Leason and Forrester fanned. Riddle scratched a hit through short but Collins made a great running catch of Heaton's fly to short right centre.

The Peterboro youngsters bagged two. Collins beat out a hit to short and took second on Beaver's bad throw. Holmes walked. Grosse singled to right and Collins was thrown out at the plate. Forrester however, made a low throw to third trying to double Holmes and the Royals' pitcher scored. Grosse stole third and scored on Hope's single to centre. Hollingsworth bunted a fly to Riddle.

In the eighth Doherty and Bush fanned and Rountree rolled to Hollingsworth.

The Royals got four more soft ones. Jones walked. Hatton ripped a single through the box and the two advanced on Gordon's roller to Doherty. A passed ball scored Jones. Collins' sacrifice fly to right which Heaton dropped sent Hatton in. Holmes struck out. Forrester overthrew first on Grosse's roller in front of the plat. and Collins registered, Grosse reaching second. Beaver replaced Rountree. Grosse stole third and scored when Kelly muffed Cripps' pop fly. Hope flied to Rountree at short.

The ninth was soon over. Kelly grounded to Gordon. Hope tossed out Beaver. Leason missed three but got a life when the third one got away from Hatton. He was forced at second on Forrester's rolled to Hope.

GLENNA COLLETT GETS LOW SCORE IN U.S. TOURNEY

Canadian Open and Close Champion Doesn't Do So Well.

MRS. ALLAN 94.

United States Posts Three Birdies—Plays Under Par.

HAVERFORD, Penn., Sept. 28.—(Associated Press).—Glenna Collett, defending her title as national women's golf champion, yesterday showed the way to the early qualifiers with a low score of 81 over the difficult Merion course.

Rallying for a fine 38 on the homeward journey, after requiring 43 to the turn, the titleholder brought in a card two under women's par. She posted birdies on the eleventh, fourteenth and eighteenth, and kept pace with regulation figures on all the other holes.

Mrs. Wright D. Goss, Jr., of Shorthills, N.J., came in behind the champion with an 82, while Mrs. Courtland Smith, another New Jersey player, was in third place among the morning starters with an 84.

Miss Ada MacKenzie, of Toronto, Canadian open and closed champion, finished with a card of 91. She had 43 going out and 48 on the homeward journey. Another Canadian entrant, Mrs. K. C. Allen, of Winnipeg, finished with 94. She had a poor 50 for the first nine, but finished strongly with 44 for the last nine holes.

The eleventh hole, trouble point for most of the players, checked the match for Miss Mackenzie toward a niche among the qualifying leaders. She took nine strokes to ferry her ball across the brook which guards the green, but rallied during the remainder of the route.

Miss Katherine Christie of Toronto finished qualifying round with a score of 103. She had 53 for the first nine holes and 50 on the homeward journey.

Other low scores:

Mrs. E. E. Harwood, Chicago, 86: Bernice Wall, Oshkosh, Wis., and Helen Payson, Portland, Maine, 89.

Mrs. Fred Letts, Jr., Philadelphia, 44—48—92.

Mrs. Caleb Fox, aged 68, Philadelphia, 50—44—92.

Mrs. Thomas Hucknall, New York 48—45—93.

Miss Ada McKenzie, holder of both Canadian titles, Toronto, Ont., 43—48—91.

Miss Marion Turpie, New Orleans, 45—49—94.

Miss Helen Meehan, Philadelphia, 48—42—90.

Mrs. O. S. Sille, Chicago, 46—44—90.

Princess Lofkonicz, Providence, 48—44—92.

Mrs. Lee Mida, Chicago, 45—41—86.

Mrs. Norman Toerg, Glen Cove, N.Y., 43—42—85.

$100 Needed To Finance Royals' Merriton Trip

Peterborough Citizens Asked To Aid Youngsters

On behalf of the Royal Baseball Club, who yesterday won the first game of the Ontario Midget finals, The Examiner appeals to the sport-loving citizens of Peterboro for assistance in financing the Royal trip to Merriton on Saturday.

The Club has carried on in the face of heavy expense and small gates all season and now, with a provincial championship at stake, finds the problem of meeting the cost of the long final trip an almost impossible one. $100 is needed.

A small sum divided over many but large enough when it has to be raised by a young generation which has already had to finance several costly trips.

The Examiner therefore appeals for donations on behalf of the Royals, and will undertake to receive and acknowledge all subscriptions to this most worthy cause.

Inside Sporting Dope

By A Wise Cracker

Mister Sporting Editor:—

You aint usually bothered with no boloney from me except Sat. but I gotta good excuse for slipping you an extra supply. I just want to say a word or 2 on behalf of the Royal baseball club, that gang of clever youngsters which has fought their way into the Ontario finals in the midget serious and has beaten Merriton the 1st game of the last round. The bunch has to go back to Merriton Sat. and they need some jack to finance the trip seeing that the railway companies aint as yet supplying no free transportation to ball clubs and while the Royals is gamt enough to walk over to the fruit belt the chances is they wouldn't be in the pink of condition when they got there.

The Peterboro kids has a real chance of copping the title and I am writing you just to see if they aint enough good sports in this man's town to cough up the 100 bucks needed to send the youngsters to Merriton Sat.

The Royals has ben playing to small crowds all season and it has been i big problem to meet the expenses up to date seeing the team has already had some costly trips. They is a bunch of good boys in the outfit, plenty of promising material that deserves encouragement as sure senior stuff before long and if we are to get anywhere in baseball we just naturally gotta stick out a helping hand to the kids.

I just pass this along to the customers hoping that they will shoot a donation along to the Examiner as soon as possible for this bunch of game fellers who surely need a friend.

Sportfully yours,
A Wise Cracker

Rice's Triple in Fourth Decides Issue for the Victors.

GOOD OUTFIELDS.

NEW YORK, Sept. 28 (Canadian Press).—Philadelphia defeated Boston yesterday, 5 to 4, in a game played amid chilly breezes. Rice's triple in the fourth scored two runs and decided the issue. Baecht pitched effectively for the visitors, except in the fourth, when Boston obtained five hits for three runs. Both outfields made good running catches.

Only one game was scheduled in the National League yesterday.

AVERAGE CROP AT ROSENEATH

Farmers Have Done Better Than They Expected in Spring.

FRUITS GOOD.

ROSENEATH, Sept. 28.—Farming throughout this district has been somewhat unsettled. The late spring kept farmers behind in doing their seeding but later the weather was favorable and grain, hay, clover and root crop grew rapidly and the country never looked better. Strawberries, raspberries, currants and all small fruit were extra good. The turnip crop was good until small green lice destroyed many acres and left only a small quantity. The harvest season has been backward and somewhat discouraging. The heavy and numerous rains have delayed both cutting and drawing in.

Only a few farmers have done their threshing and it is so difficult to estimate the yield. Oats are light on many farms although some good fields are reported. The acreage of hay and clover has been an average crop. The corn crop is making good progress and on an average will be much better than expected.

Early potato digging has just commenced and is a good crop in general, although rot is reported among some of the farmers. Garden vegetables are a splendid crop except that tomato growers are finding it hard to get their tomatoes ripened quick enough on the vines. Early apples have been plentiful but a very inferior variety. Late apples are very scarce, no crop at all with many farmers. Honey this year is below normal, chiefly the results of the cold spring when the bees had no plants or flowers to gather the nectar to work with.

Pasture has been good all summer and milch cows have done well. On the whole, however, crops are not a failure and the average farmer has done better than anticipated.

PETERBORO' MEN WIN AT LINDSAY

Local Horses Successful in Races Held On Saturday.

SPECIAL PRIZES.

LINDSAY, Sept. 28.—The curtain was rung down on Lindsay Central Exhibition on Saturday evening under decidedly discouraging conditions. Rain fell early this morning and continued spasmodically during the day, with the result that the attendance at the Fair was not what the directorate had looked for or not nearly as large as the attendance of the closing day last year. Considering the general weather conditions, however, the crowd was a large one.

A scare was thrown into the directorate as well as the crowd when a fire was discovered in the main building. Someone, it is presumed dropped a cigarette butt into a crevice in the grandstand and it fell between the stand and the lip of the roof of the main building, immediately over the display of the firm of Claxton and Co., on the first floor. An alarm was sent in. Fortunately the Provincial Deputy Fire Marshal was in the building in charge of the Fire Prevention display, and he fought the fire with an extinguisher and with garden hose. The Claxton display was damaged by water. As the fire truck entered the exhibition grounds, it crashed into the main gate and was damaged.

The speeding events were carried out on a track three or four inches deep in mud, and both horses and drivers were plastered in their course around the track. The results of the two heats were as follows:

Classified, Pace or Trot—

Flying Jim, E. Parish, Uxbridge	5	5	x
Billy Hal, J. C. Livily, New Liskeard	6	3	5
Mac Oso, W. A. Fanning, Lindsay	3	2	3
Teddy M. J. Ballantyne, Uxbridge	4	4	4
May Mac, Moffatt, Newmarket	2	1	2
Grenville Lady, J. A. Key Peterboro	1	6	1

Time—2.39¼, 2.37¼, 2.39¼.

2.18 Pace—

Jim Todd, A. T. Johnston, Peterboro	1	2	2
B. Hal, Sims, Martin's Siding	3	1	1
Billy Sunday, J. C. Livily, New Liskeard	5	3	3
Bub, E. Jones, Peterboro	2	3	4
Haley, S. Blewett, Peterboro	4	4	5

Time—2.23¼, 2.34¼, 2.34¼.

Peterboro exhibitors were prize winners in the special events. J. O. Ball of Peterboro, won the George O'Neill silver cup, donated by George O'Neil of the King Edward Hotel, Toronto. This is a perpetual trophy with an individual cup for the winner.

Redmond Bros. won the Wright Cup, donated by George Wright of the Walker House, for the best horse, any breed or class. This is also a perpetual trophy, the winner receives a silver cup. The horse shown was the Hokstone Queen. Redmond Bros. also won the President Hickson silver cup for the best team of carriage horses in harness.

A SALE every 5 MINUTES

"We are training certain of our salesmen to travel by telephone," said a well-known Ontario merchant.

"Territories can be worked more thoroughly. Contacts with customers are much more frequent. Considerable increase is made in sales, and yet the cost of selling is much reduced. A considerable part of our profit this year will come from the reduced cost of selling by Long Distance."

The keener competition becomes, the more Long Distance will save you. Without leaving the office your salesmen can call on customers anywhere in Canada or the United States.

"How do you know he won't buy? Have you called him by Long Distance?

SEMI-FINALS IN LADIES' SOFTBALL

First Game Here on Saturday With Supremes of Toronto.

The first of the home and home games in the semi-finals of the Ontario Ladies' Softball League, to declare a winner to go into the finals of the Provincial Championship, will be played in Peterborough on Saturday afternoon, October 2nd, if the weather is favourable, at Riverside Park, at 4.15 o'clock, if unfavourable, in the armouries at the same hour.

The visiting team is at present champions of the City of Toronto. They also won the Dominion Championship that is played at the Canadian National Exhibition each year, and are now after the Ontario Championship, the banner event of Ladies' Softball.

The team is coming to Peterborough with more than one hundred and fifty supporters on Saturday next, and it should prove without doubt the best Ladies' Softball game ever played in the city.

CANADIAN GOODS GIVEN CONFIDENCE

Peruvians Buy More Goods From Canada Than Two Years Ago.

Somewhere in Peru there are 100 persons wearing Produced-in-Canada canvas shoes with rubber soles for which they paid $108.00.

Somewhere in China last year $10,617.00 worth of Produced-in-Canada candy was eaten and somewhere in Heyti thirty-two gallons of Produced-in-Canada beer was drunk.

Somewhere last year on the St. Pierre and Miquelon Island—those intriguing overseas possessions of France off the coast of Newfoundland — 433 bushels of Canadian onions were consumed.

Count these items amusing or count them of consequence, as you will, they are all incidental in the passing year to the building up of Canada's enormously expanding foreign commerce.

It is surprising the amount of interest that lies hidden within the covers of one of the blue books of the Department of Trade and Commerce. If you will take a leisure hour you will find therein ample for entertainment and education. A year's barter with the world, which reaches the vast aggregate of $2,255,000,000, cannot be other than fraught with romance, tradition, scheming and planning, all the color of international enterprise.

It is not just a happen so that 199 Peruvians last year bought 199 pairs of Produced-in-Canada canvas shoes with rubber soles. It is only a $108.00 tradition to be true and the profit in such a single turnover must be a trivial. But the significance lies deeper. It lies in the fact that two years prior the sale of Produced-in-Canada white canvas shoes with rubber soles to Peruvians totalled only eleven pairs, worth $10.00.

As a single transaction the sale of 199 pairs white canvas shoes is unimportant perhaps. But the fact that 199 pairs of these shoes were sold in 1926 as compared with only $10.00 worth or eleven pairs in 1924 lies the real significance of the transaction. For it is by reason of this increasing disposition of the Peruvians, and all the world buyers, to take more and more steadily more of our goods that Canada's international commerce is so rapidly expanding. We can scarcely sense the amount of propaganda that entered into the selling of the first eleven pairs of Produced-in-Canada white canvas shoes to the South American Republic.

If the Peruvians, a people living far to the south of us, are placing increasing confidence in Produced-in Canada goods, how much more so should Canadians be interested in the products of their own country? If we only realized every dollar's worth of Produced-in-Canada goods that is purchased, whether it be here in Peterboro or in some South American Republic, means more work, which means more wages for the consumer and more prosperity for everybody, we would take time the week of October 11-16 to visit the Produced-in-Canada Exhibition and learn for ourselves of the many things that are produced in this country.

There are many things that perhaps you are not aware of and you may be buying products of another country, when your own has better to offer. Be patriotic enough to boost your own.

Solomon In All His Glory Must Take a Back Seat Paris Men's Tailors Revel In Brilliant Color Combinations

PARIS, Sept. 28 (United Press)—Strutting peacocks have nothing on the Paris male this year as far as brilliant colors for raiment are concerned.

The days when men wore either blue or black are gone, say the dictators of men's styles.

This year he is to have a mauve hat, tete de negro coat, and cream colored trousers above blue spats and gray kid shoes. Clothes of green, brown, purple and even rose tinted grey may be found on the tailors' shelves. Pajamas literally scream. Neck ties are shameless in their brilliancy and scarves, which will be much worn this winter, look like a regiment of Scotch Guards going into action. In one shop that caters to American home going tourists there are to be seen pink silk shirts, old rose neckties banana yellow pajamas with mauve pin stripes, dressing gowns that rival Joseph's coat of many colors, and sea green hose.

Trading Extremely Heavy McKinnon Strong Spot

TORONTO, Sept. 28 (Canadian Press).—Trading remained extremely heavy on the Toronto Stock Exchange this morning, with Brazilian, Brompton and McKinnon active leaders. No definite tendency was in evidence, and though gains were fairly numerous, they were well balanced by declines. McKinnon was the strong spot of the whole list, climbing four and three-quarter points at 30 3-4. C.P.R. was also firm, strengthening 1 1-8 to 165 5-8, and Kelvinator, fairly active, improved a half at 18½. Brazilian softened a point and a quarter at noon close of 118 7-8. Smelters sold down to 240 during the session, but recovered to close at 243, only a half down. Industrial Alcohol and International Nickle were active and steady. In unlisted, G. and W. was sold down 1 1-8 at 33½, while British American Oil firmed a half at 57⅝.

Uniform Drop In Stocks Sales Reach Heavy Total

TORONTO, Sept. 28.—(Canadian Press.)— Stocks generally declined on standard mining exchange this morning. Sales reached fairly heavy total, but in uniform drop no large loss was shown. Decline of 25 cents in Nipissing at 5.75 and and of 15 cents in Mining Corporation at 331 were heaviest recessions.

Gold Hill softened three at 45, Barry Hollinger 1 1-2 at 62, 1-2 and Dome five at 11.10, while Teck Hughes firmed one at 447, Lakeside Lorrain dropped six at 158 and Castle Tretheway five at 129 in Silvers. Noranda eased ten at 18.15.

European Supply Scarce Wheat Price Advances

CHICAGO, Sept. 28. —(Canadian Press). — Helped by an unexpected advance in Liverpool quotations, wheat went sharply upward here today. During the early dealings, nearby deliveries abroad were reported scarce with high premiums for god wheat in the United States acting as an additional strengthening factor. Starting at 3-4 cents to 2 cent gain, Chicago wheat values held near to the initial figures. Corn and oats were also firmer. Corn opening 1-8 cent to 1 cent up, but later reacting. Provisions tended down grade.

New York Prices Rise After Uncertain Opening

NEW YORK, September 28. — Canadian Press. — Heavy buying of a half dozen high grade industrial stocks turned the course of prices upward in to-day's market after an early period of irregularity. United States Steel common again crossed 150. General Motors was marked up to 161 7-8, a new record high for the present issue, before the end of the third hour. American Smelting rallied 5 points from yesterday's low on reports that the directors would either increase the regular dividend from $7 to $8 or declare an extra dividend at next week's meeting. Allied chemical sold down when the regular dividend was declared but rallied later. Dupont soared nearly 16 points to a new record high around 335. The brisk manner in which several stocks rallied indicated the presence of a large short interest. Special buying took place in such issues as commercial Solvents B, South Porto Rican sugar, Congress cigar, Air Reduction, and Cudahy packing, all of which sold 21-2 or more points above yesterday's final quotations.

Rails were firm but quiet.

MADOC NEWS

MADOC, Sept. 28.—A social evening was held in the United church under the auspices of the Epworth League, in honor of the High school and Public school teachers and the High school students, on Tuesday evening. Mrs. D. Wellman presided and after community singing had been enjoyed the guests were divided into groups for competition in the contests. A song contest and an automobile contest were provocative of much interest and merriment. Mrs. J. Marcellus, president of the League gave a reading, "The Womanless Wedding", which was much appreciated. Promenades followed and then the usual delicious refreshments brought a very enjoyable evening to a close.

Afternoon Tea.

A delightful afternoon tea was held at the home of Mrs. W. Wyper in aid of the Ladies' Guild of St. John's church on Thursday afternoon. The house was prettily decorated with autumn flowers, the tea table being particularly attractive with French marigolds and orange candles in silver candlesticks. The tea was well attended and the proceeds came to over nineteen dollars.

Personals.

Mrs. McKellar and two children are the guests of Mrs. George Robinson.

Mrs. George Wright has returned from a visit with her sister, Mrs. T. J. Ivey of Toronto.

Miss Kathleen Hungerford left yesterday for Toronto, and after a visit there will go on to Vancouver for the winter.

Miss Morna Wallbridge, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Campbell Wallbridge of town, was one of the fortunate ones who escaped injury in the recent tragedy in Florida. Much anxiety was felt for Miss Wallbridge's safety and word from her was received with great relief by her parents and friends.

Rev. C. J. Young, formerly of St. John's church in this parish and now of Vancouver, spent a few days in town this week.

Mrs. F. E. Seymour, is a visitor in Belleville this week.

Lies Beside Subway Track Unnoticed For Two Hours

NEW YORK, Sept. 28. — (Canadian Press). —While hundreds boarded trains just over his head, unable to hear his screams for help Joseph Thompson, 37, lay between the tracks of the I. R. T. subway for nearly two hours at a station in Brooklyn to-day.

He had missed his footing while trying to board a train and fallen to the tracks with a crushed foot. He managed to roll under the edge of the platform, just a foot from the many passing trains. A motorman finally heard his cries and he was taken to a hospital where his foot was amputated. He may recover.

THEATRE AT THE CAPITOL.

CORINNE GRIFFITH IN "INFATUATION."

Filmed from W. Somerset Maugham's play, "Caesar's Wife," the feature picture at the Capitol Theatre for the first half of this week, "Infatuation," with Corinne Griffith as the star, and a strong supporting cast that includes Percy Marmont, hero of "If Winter Comes" and other outstanding productions, is one of the interesting type that has a triangular romance as its motif. It is an entertaining production from start to finish. The beauty of the star, the fine acting of her support, and the fascinating atmosphere provided by staging the picture in Egypt, make it excellent film material. Miss Griffith is not called upon in this picture to wear exceptionally gorgeous gowns, but her appearance always adds immensely to any scene she appears in.

As Violet Bancroft, an English society beauty, Corinne Griffith plays opposite Percy Marmont in the role of Sir Arthur Little, who marries her and takes her to Egypt, where he is stationed. Here she meets and becomes infatuated with her husband's aide, Ronny, and also runs foul of Osman Pasha, a sinister influence in the court of the Khedive. The romance of the two progresses through many adventurous episodes, and finally Violet confesses her love of Ronny to her husband, but the finale brings her back to the man she has married, when she discovers a plot against his life and her own love for him, at the same time. It is an unusual picture in the fact that Percy Marmont plays in it the role of the conquering lover, rather than his usual renunciative part.

The comedy is one of those hilarious affairs that keeps the audience laughing throughout its unfolding, and the short reels are as interesting as usual.—Jeanette.

AT THE REGENT

"FIRST YEAR" BEST COMEDY DRAMA TO-DAY.

If you have any prejudice against laughing stay away from the Regent Theatre. The ace of comedy-dramas opened there yesterday when Frank Craven's stage play, "The First Year" was shown for the first time. The picture comes to the screen as a Fox Films version of the John Golden stage success.

After viewing this hundred-percent entertaining production it is easily understood how the original play was proclaimed the best American comedy ever written. It would certainly be no exaggeratino to apply the term to the finished film. The picture's main success lies in clothing the every day incidents of married life with a sure comedy touch. There is not a couple in the world who will fail to recognize themselves in Tom and Grace Tucker.

Kathryn Perry as Grace is entirely captivating. Her struggles with housekeeping, her eagerness to please her young husband, her resentment at his inadvertent neglect are all shown in the course of the picture's unfolding. Matt Moore as the husband is ideally cast. He is the average young married man combatting the petty annoyances of a wife who loves to shop.

The picture will continue at the Regent Theatre until Thursday. If you miss it you are going to regret it. It is unqualifiedly the most enjoyable comedy to reach this town in months.

SPECIAL PRIZES.

Ladies Selling Most Tickets Before Wednesday Get Slippers.

There will be two special prizes for the two young ladies turning the largest number of tickets into the office of Mr. Allen, Superintendent of the Prudential Insurance Company, before ten o'clock Wednesday morning. Each of the two fortunate young ladies will receive a beautiful pair of boudoir slippers, donated by C. E. Smith. The slippers are now on exhibition at his store.

It is a wise thing for the young ladies to turn in their tickets and thus secure some of the special prizes of $100.00, $50.00 and $25.00, to be paid at the end of the contest. Only three girls can win the grand prizes, but the special prizes which are given offer inducements to turn in the tickets early and reap the benefits that go with the prizes.

IN POLICE COURT.

Further remands were granted this morning, at the request of the Crown in the following cases. All of the accused are residents of Belmont Township, and were arrested in connection wit' an epidemic of bicycle stealing that apparently has been stopped by the diligent work of the local police force.

Leonard Davis, who pleaded guilty to a charge of stealing, May Emmory and Arthur Alley, who pleaded guilty of receiving stolen property; James Davis and Charles Emmory, through their counsel, B. E. Park, pleaded not guilty to charges of receiving stolen property.

All cases were remanded until October 5th.

HEAVY DAMAGE REPORT CONFIRMED

O. A. C. Official Says Ontario Crops Suffered Greatly.

TORONTO, Sept. 28 (Canadian Press)—Confirmation of reports of damage to Ontario crops through unusually wet weather of the past week was given by Dr. Zavitz, of the Agronomy department, Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, this morning. Dr. Zavitz said that the south west part of the province would be the heaviest sufferer. From northern Middlesex up to Owen Sound there has been a lot of grain cut and not much of it is in yet. While it will make feed, the straw will be of poor quality. Essex county bean crops will suffer, many of the beans being stained by wet.

BISHOP O'BRIEN OPENS COLLEGE

Says Pontificial Mass When Brescia Hall Is Opened.

AT LONDON.

LONDON, Ont., Sept. 28. — (Canadian Press.)—With the celebration of solemn Pontifical Mass on the campus, Brescia Hall, the new Ursuline College affiliated with the University of Western Ontario, was officially opened this morning. The formal opening of the building was one of the ceremonies of Catholic centennial week which opened on Sunday. The Right Rev. M. J. O'Brien, Bishop of Peterborough, officiated. Approximately 1,000 persons were present.

WEDDING BELLS.

SIDDALL—STEVENS

A pretty autumn wedding took place in All Saints' Church on Saturday, September 25th, at four o'clock, when Elsie, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. Stevens was united in marriage to Hugh, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Siddall, both of this city, the Rev. J. D. Patterson officiating.

The bride entered the church on the arm of her father to the strains of Lohengrin's wedding march, and looked lovely in a gown of white georgette radium lace with veil in cap effect and wreath of orange blossoms. She carried a sheaf of Ophelia roses and maiden hair fern. Her attendants were Miss Nora Siddall, sister of the groom, as maid of honour attired in a dress of ocean blue flat crepe with black velvet picture hat and shoes and stockings to match and bouquet of white carnations and asters. The two bridesmaids, Miss Cissie Stevens, sister of the bride, and Miss Beatrice Carr, the former in ocean blue and the latter in salmon pink flat crepe, with black picture hats, carried bouquets of white carnations and asters.

The bridegroom was assisted by Mr. W. Stevens, brother of the bride and the ushers were Mr. B. Stevens and Mr. B. Lacy.

Mrs. W. A. Logan presided at the organ and played softly throughout the ceremony.

About sixty guests attended the reception held at the home of the bride's parents, where the rooms were tastefully decorated with a profusion of autumn leaves, asters and gladioli.

The young people were recipients of many beautiful presents, showing the high esteem in which both are held.

The bride's travelling costume was a dress of pearl grey flat crepe and georgette, a grey coat with squirrel trimming and shoes, stockings and hat to match. The bride and groom left for Toronto and Niagara midst showers of confetti and good wishes, and later will return to Peterboro, where they will reside.

JOHNSON—WHITE.

The marriage was solemnized at the United Church, Balleboro, of Mildred Alberta, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas White, and James Johnson, son of Mr. Samuel Johnson and the late Mrs. Johnson, both of Ballieboro. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Foyle under an arch of white asters, centred by a huge white bell.

The bride, who entered the church on the arm of her father, to the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march, played by Miss Viola White, wore a lovely costume of bois de rose georgette, with black picture hat and black shoes and stockings. She wore the gift of the bridegroom, an Isabelle fox fur, and carried a bouquet of roses and lily of the valley.

The bridesmaid, Miss Verna Fell, of Peterborough, was in sand georgette, with black picture hat and fox fur neckpiece, and carried a bouquet of roses.

Mr. Eldridge White acted as best man.

The gift of the bridegroom to the bridesmaid was a green gold pin, set with emeralds, to the pianiste a white gold bracelet, set with aquamarines, and to the best man a pair of gold cuff links.

Mr. and Mrs. Johnson left later for a honeymoon in Toronto and points west. They will reside in Ballieboro.

ANCIENT SKULL FOUND IN JAVA

Relic of "Missing Link" Found By Scientist is Complete.

VERY IMPORTANT.

LONDON, Sept. 28 (Canadian Press). — British anthropologists were thrilled to-day by a despatch from Batavia, Java, which said that Prof. Heberlein, of the Netherlands Government medical service, has discovered at Trinil, in Central Java, a complete skull of a prehistoric ape-like creature termed by some the "Missing Link," and by science, "Pithecanthropus Erectus." The despatch said the skull was found at the same place where Prof. Eugene Dubois of Amsterdam University discovered in 1892 the upper part of a skull, two teeth and a thigh bone, from which was reconstructed the previously unknown ape-like human being designated as "Pithecanthropus Erectus."

Miss Mildred Tildesley, who has catalogued more than 6,000 skulls at the Royal College of Surgeons, believes that if the reported discovery is true, it is the most important of many years, as complete skulls of pre-historic human beings are exceedingly rare.

OBITUARY.

MRS. MARGARET E. FAIR.

The passing away of the late Mrs. Margaret Elizabeth Rutherford (relic of the late James Fair), who predeceased her a few years ago, and who died at her residence, South Monaghan, on Sunday, the 19th inst., at the age of 79 years, removes from the community a member of one of the old families in that locality. Her parents came from Scotland and settled on the land still held by the family. She is survived by five daughters: Mrs. Thomas Bradshaw, Mrs. Robert Thorne, Mrs. William Bradshaw, Mrs. Wells Dawson, Mrs. Thomas Thorne and Miss Minnie at home. Mrs. Fair was very highly esteemed and respected by a large circle of friends and relatives, and was of a marked generous kind and hospitable disposition. She was a lifelong member of the Presbyterian Church at Centreville. The funeral, which was very largely attended, took place from her late residence on Tuesday, Sept. 21, to the Little Lake Cemetery. The floral offerings were unusually large, being an evidence of the high regard in which the deceased was held in her neighborhood.

The services at the house and grave were taken by the Rev. Mr. Riddell, pastor of the Millbrook and Centreville Presbyterian Churches. Six of her grandsons acted as pall-bearers.

Bailieboro Youth Crushed to Death As Car Tips Over

Roy Dawson Caught Beneath Running Board When Car Upsets—Had Accepted Ride Home From School With Neighboor, Melville Wood.

DRIVER OF CAR NOT HURT
BEING PROTECTED BY WHEEL

Roy Dawson, a student of the Bailieboro Public School, was killed last night when the car in which he was riding overturned.

The boy was returning home from school and had accepted a ride with Melville Wood, a young farmer of that district. In going down the hill a half mile east of the village the car struck some fresh gravel and completely overturned, throwing the boy out and pinning him under the car. He was removed to the home of Percy Barnard, where he died three-quarters of a hour later.

It was the second time down the hill as the boy had forgotten his school bag and they had returned to get it. The driver of the car was not injured as the steering wheel protected him in the turn over.

The dead boy was the son of Charles Dawson, who lives two and a-half miles east of Bailieboro, on Lot 5, Concession 1, South Monaghan, and was twelve years and eleven months old.

The preliminary hearing was held last night by Coroner Dr. Aldridge of Port Hope, and the inquest is set for to-morrow night at 7.30, in the Foresters' Hall, Bailieboro.

'Black Pirate's' Treasure Concealed In Peterborough

Treasure hunts are of interest alike to young and old, and no one fails to be fascinated by the idea of finding money or treasure.

The Examiner has arranged to conduct a hunt for the treasure of the "Black Pirate," and the person who finds the key will be presented with $50.00 in gold.

Full particulars will appear on the theatre page daily.

What's a Wife Worth? Jury Values Her at $75

PONTIAC, Mich., Sept. 29.—The affections of Mrs. Cora Wilson Jensen, alienated from Walter W. Wilson of Pontiac, by Martin Jensen, of Ferndale, were valued yesterday afternoon by a jury in Circuit Court at $75.

Wilson sued for $20,000. The sum represents the amount Wilson wrote Jensen he would take to surrender Mrs. Wilson, providing she would give him their two children and their home. Mrs. Wilson divorced Wilson in May, 1924, and in July of that year, married Jensen, a former boarder in her home. Wilson then brought the alienation suit.

STORM SWEEPS THREE VILLAGES NEAR VERA CRUZ

Heavy Damage Also Done on Waterfront of City.

SHIPS SUNK.

Water Driven By Wind Floods Warehouses and Ruins Contents.

VERA CRUZ, Mexico, Sept. 29 (Canadian Press).—A hurricane of great violence swept in upon Vera Cruz yesterday from the Gulf of Mexico, leaving in its trail much damage in the city and adjacent towns and villages. From the Gulf region the storm made its way inland into the interior, where it is reported considerable damage was done.

Houses were unroofed, several tugs in the harbor were sunk, and heavy seas invaded the city and drove out persons living near the waterfront. The wind at one time reached a velocity of 125 miles an hour.

The storm raged for several hours and the streets were filled with debris and trunks of trees. Much cargo was destroyed when warehouses were inundated.

The villages of Paso Del Macho and Soledad were badly damaged, and Boca Del Rio, near here, in the direct path of the storm, suffered heavily.

Communication Cut Off

NEW YORK, Sept. 29 (Canadian Press).—Telegraphic communication with Mexico City was practically paralyzed today by the tropical hurricane reported from Vera Cruz.

No Lives Lost

GALVESTON, Texas, Sept. 29 (Canadian Press). — The Mexican Teleghaph Company's cable office here was in communication with Vera Cruz today but had received no additional details on the situation there resulting from the two-hour hurricane which struck the Mexican port yesterday.

No loss of life had been reported to the Telegraph company. Cable service has not been interrupted, although land lines between Vera Cruz and the interior were reported down. Property loss at Vera Cruz was estimated at 5,000,000 pesos. Damage to small shipping in the harbor was considerable.

MAY TAKE WEEK TO REACH THE ENTRAPPED MEN

Officials Refuse To State Probable Time of Rescue Work.

FATE UNCERTAIN.

Length of Time Depends on Earth Conditions in Boring.

IRONWOOD, Mich., Sept. 29 (Canadian Press).—Many additional hours of ceaseless toil in the underground passageways of the G. Pabst mine will be necessary before the fate of the 43 miners imprisoned there since Friday is learned.

Officials of the Oliver Iron Mining Company directing the rescue work, refused yesterday to estimate the probable time when the men will be reached, and one engineer said it might take a week or ten days.

Whether the men are rescued alive depends, they said, on earth conditions encountered in boring towards the eighth level of the mine, 727 feet below the surface, where the men are imprisoned.

Wives and children of the entombed miners found a note of hope in the declaration of Dr. E. L. Madajesky, physician and surgeon of the Oliver Company, who said he believed the men could "live at least two weeks with fresh air and water and without food."

"The fact that the eighth level is warm is much in their favor."

The hard earth, rock and slate combine to provide stubborn resistance to the boring operations of the crews which change every four hours. Work of opening the shaft into which the eighth level emerges proceeds slowly.

One crew worked un the shaft from the twenty-first level—a half mile below the surface—and another sought to penetrate the miners' prison from the adjoining Aurora mine. A diamond drill bored a small two and one-half inch hole through which it is hoped to pass concentrated food tablets.

The drill must bore 400 feet to reach the men, and engineers said it would take 24 hours to penetrate 100 feet.

LLOYD GEORGE WANTS SUPPORT OF RADICALS

Accused of Flirtation With Lesser Members of the Labor Party.

COOK IMPRESSED.

Labor Leaders Are Expressing Some Desire at New Move.

LONDON, Sept. 29. — Lloyd George's recent relations with some of the lesser lights of the Labor party and his open bid for Labor support in the House of Commons by his vigorous attitude towards the government's policy in the matter of the coal stoppage, has given rise not only to speculation in political circles, but also among accredited Labor leaders, who are expressing some anxiety at the new move.

Lloyd George is reported to have had a long consultation recently with A. J. Cook, with whom he lunched, and to have inquired from the "emperor" how best a settlement could be obtained.

Cook is believed to have been impressed by what the former premier told him, and spoke to his friends afterwards of "Lloyd George's marvellous person ity."

Since then quite a number of secretaries of different Labor unions have waited on Lloyd George, and considerable mystery attaches to their comings and goings. It is noted that Lloyd George's attack on the government on Monday was more heartily cheered by the opponents of the government than was that of Ramsay Macdonald.

INDIANS PREFER RED

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—The Indian's fondness for gaudy colors long has been known, but it remained for Dr. T. R. Garth, of Denver, to determine their color preferences. They like red, blue, violet, yellow and white in the order named. White men, he says, prefer blue, then green and last red.

20,000 Italian Families With 10 Or More Children

ROME, Sept. 29.— There are more than 20,000 Italian families having 10 or more children each, according to a recent announcement. Curiously most of the larger families are found in the smaller towns. Rome for instance boasts only 517 families topping the 10-children mark, and Naples only 677; but Padua has 788, Uline 785, Bari 781, and the little town of Treviso, near the Austrian frontier, no fewer than 1,032. It is noticeable that that towns near the French border are less prolific in large families than are others. Turin, one of the largest cities in Italy, claims only 257.

TWO ADDITIONAL JUDGES ARE NOT YET APPOINTED

Hon. Ernest Lapointe To Accompany King To Imperial Conference.

FIVE HOUR SESSION.

Hon. E. M. MacDonald Probable Choice as Senator For Nova Scotia

OTTAWA, Ont., Sept. 29 (Canadian Press).—A five-hour session of the Cabinet Council yesterday failed to produce any definite news concerning the several questions before the Government. Premier King told a group of newspaper men that, so far as he know, the two additional judges who are to make up the Customs Inquiry Commission were not appointed. When asked if an Order-in-Council has been passed regarding the inquiry he replied, "No."

It is now probable that Mr. King and his party will leave for the Imperial Conference from Quebec on the eighth or ninth of October. Hon. Ernest Lapointe, Minister of Justice, will accompany Mr. King, but it is not known yet who else will go. Hon. James Robb, Minister of Finance, will be acting Premier during the several weeks' absence of Mr. King.

On Saturday of this week practically the entire Cabinet will be in Quebec City to welcome Lord Willingdon to Canada. His Excellency will be sworn in at the ancient capital by Chief Justice Anglin of the Supreme Court. On Monday Parliament Hill, Ottawa, will be brilliant with flags and troops to receive the new Governor-General.

To Fill Senate Vacancies.

The three Senate vacancies have made the meetings of the Cabinet Council a matter of daily interest. It is said here that all three appointments are to be made in the near future and certainly before the December session of Parliament.

Two of the vacant places were made by the deaths of Senators David and Thibadeau of Quebec. Many names are current in Ottawa in speculation for successors. P. Paradis, Hon. P. Du Tremblay, Sir Lomer Gouin and Donat Raymond have all been suggested.

When the King Government resigned in late June a Senate vacancy had stood from Nova Scotia for many months, and now it has again become the centre of considerable interest. Some of those whose names have been associated with the appointment are Hon. E. M. Macdonald, Hance Logan, George Kyte and Colin McIsaac, all of whom are former members of Parliament.

LEAGUE PASSES RESOLUTION IMPROVE TONE OF THE MOVIES AT CONFERENCE HELD IN PARIS

Will Use Motion Pictures For Instruction of the World.

ESTABLISH LIBRARY.

U. S. Hastens Work of Sub-Committee of Armament Commission.

PARIS, Sept. 29 (Canadian Press) —The League of Nations adopted the motion picture Monday as an addition to its growing family of discussable subjects. Under the auspices of the league, more than 200 delegates from all parts of Europe gathered at the Sorbonne to talk about what can be done in moviedom to make the world a better place.

Most of the delegates are French and Germans.

The a enda includes such subjects as production and distribution, but the former will have to do with the production of pictures with intellectual appeals and moral influences. Under the category of distribution will be discussed the dissemination through the rural districts of educational films. The delegates will also consider means whereby tariff barriers on educational films may be eliminated.

Another subject which the conference will discuss this week is a proposal to establish, under the league's wings, a great film library, in which celluloid masterpieces might be deposited along with films of historical value.

Disarmament

GENEVA, Sept. 29.—The United States delegation to the preparatory disarmament commission, actively backed by the British, secured the passage Monday of a series of instructions to sub-committees, which are expected to hasten the preparatory work and increase the chances of success of the proposed international disarmament conference.

The experts attached to the commission henceforth are expected to drop all political consideration of problems submitted to them and confine their activities to technical studies.

Blinded by Prejudice

Viscount Cecil, speaking for Great Britain, declared that critics who charged the Americans with a desire to delay disarmament, "were indeed blinded by national prejudice." Everything, he said, showed that the Americans were sincerely collaborating toward the success of disarmament.

A feature of the session was Lord Cecil's laudatory reference to President Coolidge for "sincere candid attitude on disarmament."

NEW AMBASSADOR.

TITLING FILM OF WATERWAY

F. G. Stinson Assisting Motion Picture Bureau in Preparing Reels.

FOR ADVERTISING.

Frank G. Stinson, secretary of the Trent Waterway Development Association, is in Trenton to-day at the request of V. J. Bach, superintendent of the Ontario Government Motion Picture Bureau, where he will assist in titling the four thousand (4,000) feet of Trent Waterway film which the Association was successful in having taken during the latter part of August. The film on which they are working at present will be censored and placed in the standard exchanges, where it will be available for United States and Canada. The Motion Picture Bureau also purposes giving the Trent Waterway Development Association a sub-standard print of the entire film which will be used by the Association for publicity purposes at the New York Motor Boat Show in January, 1927, and at many other functions of this sort and cities.

STEAMSHIPS SUFFER NO INTERFERENCE

British Trade at Hankow Not Interrupted Despite Recent Agitation.

LONDON, Sept. 29 (Canadian Press).—Premier Baldwin yesterday told the House of Commons that British steamers are plying unhindered between Canton and Hong Kong, and that there has been no interference with British trade at Hankow, despite recent agitation.

The Prime Minister said that reinforcements are now being sent to China to render the naval forces in the Far East sufficient to protect British subjects and interests. Military intervention is not warranted, Premier Baldwin said, and no army reinforcements have been despatched.

GERMAN PAPERS DEPLORE BRAWL

See Continuance of Friction While French Occupy Territory.

MAY RUIN PLANS.

BERLIN, Sept. 29 (Canadian Press).—German papers of every political shade view the Germersheim incident as proof that the military occupation system constitutes the greatest hindrance to Franco-German understanding.

As long as foreign troops are on German soil, they say, brawls and friction are likely, and one effect might be to wreck the entire work of conciliation started by Foreign Ministers Briand and Stresemann in their conversations at Geneva and Thoiry.

The continuation of the occupation is felt to be particularly humiliating now that Germany is a partner with her former enemies in the League of Nations.

28 Interpreters Fail To Find Man's Nationality

MONTREAL, Sept. 29 (Canadian Press).—Described on the Police Court roll as an "individual," a man arrested in Magog, Que., about 35 miles from Montreal, and charged with vagrancy, is puzzling twenty-eight interpreters attached to the Dominion Immigration Department and the courts here. The interpreters have practiced on him several days, but nobody can find out his name or converse with him. The authorities are at a loss what to do with the man, as no plea has been received from him.

Ontario Highway Minister Says End is Coming

ALLOWS TEN YEARS.

EDMONTON, Sept. 29. Canadian Press. — Within ten years there will not be more than ten lines of electric railway in Canada which will be able to operate and show a profit," was the radic l prediction made by S. L. Squire, Deputy Minister of Highways for Ontario, in an address before the Canadian Good Roads Association's annual convention here.

RIVIERA PLANS RESIGNING POST

Spanish Dictator Will Quit When Assembly Meets.

NEW MINISTERS.

LONDON, Sept. 29 (United Press). — The Daily Mail' correspondent in San Sebastian says that it is reported that Premier Primo De Rivera of Spain has decided to resign as soon as the National Assembly meets. The correspondent understands that King Alfonso will then name the new Ministers, all of whom will be members of the Patriotic Union party.

DAMAGES ALLOWED.

Former Leader of B. C. Party Must Pay $40,000.

NANAIMO, September 2'. Canadian Press. — A special jury in the Assize Court last evening awarded Hon. William Sloan, Minister of Mines for British Columbia, plaintiff in a libel action against Major-General A. D. McRae, $40,000 damages. Hon. Mr. Sloan sought $50,000 damages from the former leader of the Provincial party on the ground that he had been libelled in an article that appeared in the "Searchlight," an election pamphlet publi d during the Provincial campaign in January, 1924.

SECOND CAMPBELLFORD CHURCH ENTERED LATE ON SUNDAY NIGHT

Burnt Matches Strewn About the Floors—No Damage Done.

WAS NOT REPORTED.

Rev. Jas. Grier Regarded the Intrusian as Not Serious.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 29. — St. Mary's Catholic Church was not the only place of worship visited by unwelcome prowlers late Sunday night. Somewhat similar attention was paid to St. Andrew's Presbyterian church, whose main auditorium, vestry and basement were entered. No damage was done to either church, and Rev. James Grier, pastor of St. Andrew's, regarded the invasion as so negligible that he did not even report it to the police.

Mr. Grier's suspicions that some person or persons had been prying about the church were rather casually aroused on Monday when he entered the vestry. He found tacks strewn over the table on which he used a typewriter, and an empty white box which had contained the tacks lay nearby. The box had been taken off a shelf above the table. Mr. Grier also noticed that a spare, wide typewriter ribbon was gone from the empty metal spool which was left behind. What anybody could possibly want an unwound type writer ribbon for was beyond the imagination of St. Andrew's pastor.

Mr. Grier asked the caretaker of the church if he had been using any tacks, and the caretaker immediately sensing that something was wrong, told of finding burned matches in the basement, and upstairs an unturned flowerpot, containing a flower, on the floor of the basement. The caretaker said he had not touched the box of tacks. He had found quite a number of burned stubs of matches on the main floor of the church, and inside the basement door, where evidently they had been lit by an intruder groping his way about a place that was strange to him.

The careless dropping of matches on the floors with the possibility that they might have set fire to and destroyed the church was Mr. Grier's main thought as he and the caretaker examined the traces of some person who had apparently been searching about during the night. And as a result of such dangerous intrusion St. Andrew's church will be locked henceforth. In the past it has been left open and the key was rusty from disuse. But Mr. Grier decided Monday that too easy access was no longer desirable after this experience, and what those who had heard of the discovery were at a loss to understand was what any person could expect to find in a church.

St. Andrew's is only a short block from St. Mary's, of which Rev. C. J. Phelan is the pastor. Its basement was broken into some time after midnight Sunday night, but no damage was done.

Belgian Prince Rides In Third-Class Coach

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, Sept. 29 (Canadian Press). — Crown Prince Leopold of Belgium rode into Stockholm in a third-class sleeper when he arrived here to make final arrangements for his marriage to Princess Astrid. He found all the first and second-class reservations taken.

Many reporters were waiting at the station, but none of them thought to look in the third-class section for the Belgian heir-apparent, and he reached the palace in a taxicab without being recognized.

CORONER'S JURY ACQUITS SMITH

Insufficient Evidence Was Presented To Show Who Fired Shot.

RESULT OF QUARREL.

WHITSTABLE, England, Sept. 29 (Canadian Press). — A coroner's jury rendered a verdict of not guilty yesterday in the inquiry into the death of John Thomas Derham, who was killed August 12 in a quarrel with Alphonse F. A. Smith at Smith's villa, Stella Maris, at this place.

Smith, who is a grandson of the late Hugh Ryan, of Canadian railroad building fame, and a former officer of the Dragoon Guards, was charged with murder, but the jury found yesterday that insufficient evidence had been presented to show who fired the shot, and whether it was by accident or design.

When firemen tried to rescue a cat which had been for two days on a house roof in Folkestone, England, pussy dived down the chimney and landed unhurt in the sitting room fireplace.

BRITISH CABINET SEEN IN MOVIES

Planned Now To Take Advantage of Speaking Films.

HICKS LEADS OFF.

LONDON, Sept. 29 (United Press).—British Government leaders, having been successful in showing themselves to the people through the movies, may now combine with the movie feature the transmission of their voices to the English public. Following its recent widely displayed films showing Cabinet members at work and at play, the Government had acquired a new invention which co-ordinates the human voice and the movies. Already Sir William Joynson-Hicks, Home Secretary, has appeared in the movies with a speech lasting two reels, given by means of the new device.

THRESHING GENERAL WITH FINE WEATHER

Being Resumed This Week in Many Parts of Prairies.

WINNIPEG, Man., Sept. 29. — Threshing will be general all over the West by Friday, if the present clear, cool weather now prevailing in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta continues, reports the Canadian Pacific Railway this morning.

Threshing has been resumed at a number of points in Manitoba and in Saskatchewan as well, but with the exception of the Moose Jaw division, where activities will be in full swing this afternoon, Thursday or Friday will see the entire resumption of labor interrupted by recent bad weather.

From Alberta, Medicine Hat division reports threshing resumed along Maple Creek, Empress, and Burstall sub-divisions, and also at points along Brooks, Gleichen, Suffield and Bassino sub-divisions.

Full operations will be resumed in the Calgary and Lethbridge divisions by Friday.

WALTER FOWLDS IN THE 'MOVIES' FIRST RUN OF PICTURE IS SHOWN

Hastings Party See Premiere of Film in Studio.

A MIAMI LETTER.

W. A. Baker Nearly Mobbed After Storm By Hungry Crowd.

(Examiner Correspondence)

HASTINGS, Sept. 29 — Messrs. Walter Fowlds and T. A. Coughlin accompanied by their wives saw the first run of the motion pictures of the Trent waterways several days ago at the Ontario Government's studios at Trenton. They report that the pictures are excellent and should prove productive advertisements of the Trent and Kawartha districts. The Hastings party were especially interested in the pictures that were taken of the locks and bridge and shores around town. The local people on the screen were recognized at once, and Mr. Fowlds had the unusual experience of seeing himself as the camera caught him and Mrs. Fowlds on the bridge where hundreds of fishermen and women too from Canada and the United States spent many pleasant, care-free hours this summer. The local party at Trenton realized some of the thrill that comes to movie actors in their first appearance on the screen.

The Peterboro scenes were also striking and the whole district is shown to advantage in spite of the cloudy weather when the cameras were working.

Today Mr. Fowlds and Mr. F. Stinson of Peterboro are expected to go to Trenton to assist in preparing the explanatory subtitles for the new Trent film.

Another Miami Letter

Relatives here and at Warkworth of W. A. Baker and his son Douglas of Little River, Florida a suburb of Miami have received letters from them describing the recent hurricane that devastated so large an area of the state.

Mr. Baker went south last September and has been through two big storms. In a letter to his father, W. J. Baker of Warkworth, he mentions some of his experiences as follows:

"The bakery where Douglas worked is completely torn to the ground and there's hardly a bakery left in town. I was delivering bread all day Sunday and they almost mobbed me for a loaf.

Our plant is not so hard hit and we expect to open tomorrow. Everything will have to be done by hand as the power is all cut off. In fact I am writing this in the dark. If the banks don't loosen up there'll be no more Miami; if they do there will be lots of work for everybody.

The beautiful home built last year was torn to the ground and we took refuge in a new cement building two blocks away."

Child Poisoned

While playing in the garden at her home in Bellevue, Alta., last week, Ursula Lamey, the four year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Lamey, ate some poisonous substance from the effects of which she died two days later. Mrs. Lamey is a sister of Mr. T. A. Coughlin of town.

Firesafe shingles cost you less

THE indestructible asbestos that gives Johns-Manville Asbestos Shingles fire-safety, gives them a permanence that means a lower cost per year.

So you have fire protection and permanence, too — freedom from too frequent repairs and too soon replacements.

That's why hundreds of home owners are turning to these lasting Canadian-made shingles for greater roofing protection. They find they actually cost less than cheap shingles.

Resignation Announced.

At the morning service in St. John's church, Rev. Walter Cox announced that for reasons of health he was returning to England and his resignation of the parish was in the hands of the Bishop. Mr. Cox completes his third year as priest in charge at the end of November.

The annual Harvest Festival services of St. John's church will be held on Sunday next, beginning with children's service at 10 a.m. fololwed at 11 o'clock with morning prayer and Holy Communion. Evensong at 7 p.m.

The A.Y.P.A. has resumed its regular meetings for the autumn season and after the re-decoration of the Parish Hall will hold another series of euchres.

Sunday was observed as Rally Day in the Regent street Sunday school. A special programme was arranged and the S.S. orchestra furnished music.

Rev. R. Bamforth of Peterboro, occupied the pulpit of the United (Presbyterian) church on Sunday.

NORHAM NEWS.

NORHAM, Sept. 29. — Alfred Merrell and Jacob W. Clarke, of the Trustee Board of Meyersburg United church have been appointed a committee to arrange for the roofing of the balance of the church sheds and also some repair inside the hall.

Dr. Fraser Smith, of China and India returned missionary is to address each of the congregations on Norham circuit on Sunday, October 3.

Claude Bertrand came near having a serious accident when the car he was driving ran into a hydro pole about a mile west of Meyersburg. The car was badly smashed and Mr. Bertrand sustained several bad bruises.

Rev. J. F. Everson, Mr. Aubrey Woof and Mrs. Woof, Rev. W. W. Jones and Mr. Boyce motored to Oshawa on Tuesday to attend the meeting of the Cobourg Presbytery which was held in King street United church.

Personals.

Raymond Cole has been unable to work for over a week because of an attack of blood poisoning in his arm.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Gummer spent the week end visitng friends in Toronto.

Several residents of Morganston attended church here Sunday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Peterson, of Warkworth, have moved on the farm formerly owned by the late Fred J. Laver.

Mr. and Mrs. George Hay and son Percy, of Belleville, were recent visitors at the parsonage.

Mrs. John Ibey has returned after several days visit with friends in Oshawa.

Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Brenton and Elwood were in Peterboro on Sunday calling upon their aunt, Mrs. Charles Osborne, who is a patient in St. Joseph's hospital.

There is still considerable grain out in the fields and it is in rather bad condition.

Corn cutting and silo filling have begun. The corn is a much better crop than it appeared to promise early in the season.

Rally Day.

Rally Day was observed in all the churches and Sunday schools on Norham circuit last Sunday. The churches were fittingly decorated with house plants, astors and dahlias. The program arranged by the Religious Educational council was followed throughout. The congregations were large and the offerings exceeded those of previous years. The choirs were composed of the young people of the Sunday school who furnished special music for the occasion. At Bethany the pageant, "United For Service" was given, the young people having been trained by Miss Ora Goodfellow. The pastor gave an appropriate address at each of the services.

A man employed by one of the big electric lighting companies in London has nothing to do but to sit aloft in a glass-domed cabin, high above the city's roof-tops, keeping a sharp lookout for fogs. His duty is to give warning of any thickening of the atmosphere, so that the company can prepare for the extra lighting that may be required.

COUNCIL MEETING.

Held Regular Session on Wednesday With Members All Present.

MILLBROOK, Sept. 29. — The Cavan Council met in regular session on Wednesday. All the members were present, and Reeve S. Fallis was in the chair.

A communication was read from F. C. Paterson, agricultural representative for Durham County, asking for a grant for the annual Rural School Fairs held in the township.

Hootan-Finney: That the usual grant of $25 be given the Township School Fairs. Carried.

Finney-McKnight: That Council adjourn, to meet on October 20, at 1.30 p.m.

Club Re-organized.

The Cosmos Club has been reorganized for the current season, the following being the officers:

Honorary President—A. J. Fallis, M.P.P.
President—H. Jordan.
Vice-President—D. Sheppard.
Secretary—C. B. Sutton.
Treasurer—B. B. Dawson.

The club holds its regular meetings on Monday evenings, and all members are urged to attend.

League Closed.

The Young Worshippers' League, in connection with the United Church, closes its year annually on the last Sunday in September, when those who have attended the morning church service 25 Sundays and over are given special recognition in the form of a suitable book.

The League was organized during the pastorate of Rev. William Higgs and has been continuously in operation ever since. It has for its object the forming of the habit of regular church attendance among the boys and girls of the congregation, the age limit being set at 15 years, when it is considered the habit will have become a settled feature of the life. No child is too young to join the League, providing it may be brought to church at all.

Locally the League has a membership of between forty and fifty, and as some will now be dropping out, having passed their 15th birthday, the responsibility of keeping up the enrollment rests almost wholly upon the parents. Miss Wilma Fallis is the secretary of the League.

The list of those who received recognition on Sunday includes the following: Marshal Fallis, 46 Sundays; Mary Burnham, 46 Sundays; Arthur Howard, 43 Sundays; May Ferrin, 40 Sundays; Helen Mitchell, 39 Sundays; Orval Bonner, 38 Sundays; Elwood Fallis, 37 Sundays; Marian Earle, 35 Sundays; Madeline McDowell, 36 Sundays; Martha Earle, 34 Sundays; Marjorie McDowell, 34 Sundays; Bernice Smith, 34 Sundays; Dorothy McDowell, 30 Sundays; Allan Earle, 29 Sundays; Bryar and Reg. Edmunds, 28 Sundays; Mary Ball, 27 Sundays; Gordon Muspratt, 27 Sundays; Jack Stinson, 25 Sundays.

Twenty boys and girls had the highest record of attendance this year as compared with 18 last year, and 14 in 1924. A story of particular interest to the members of the Young Worshippers' League is given by the pastor each Sunday at the morning worship, and this is followed by a children's hymn; an entire morning service will be devoted to their interests within the next two months, according to announcement of the pastor on Sunday.

There were a large number of communicants present for the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, which followed the sermon on Sunday morning. Rev. Joseph Wilks assisted the pastor, Rev. F. H. Howard, the elders officiating being: Messrs. Wilfrid Fallis, J. W. Hamilton, P. Stinson, W. E. Ball, A. J. Brown, Dr. A. Jemison, and J. Whitfield.

Personals.

Mr. S. Sloan has purchased the red brick residence formerly belonging to Mr. McCullough, on Main Street, north of Mrs. S. Eakins' home, and has moved in, Mr. McCullough taking temporary possession of Mr. Sloan's house until his own removal to Toronto to reside, which takes place within the next few weeks.

Mr. Sloan's marriage to Mrs. Charlotte Gunn, of Toronto, took place in the latter city on Thursday, September 16, Rev. J. R. Bell officiating.

Mrs. H. Lord, who was called to Winnipeg some weeks ago on account of the serious illness of her second son, Albert, returned home last week, the invalid being sufficiently recovered to accompany her on the return journey, though convalescence will occupy several weeks yet.

Rev. R. J. and Mrs. Stillwell, who have spent the summer with her mother, Mrs. W. H. Byam, and other friends, returned to their home in Douglas, South Georgia, last week.

Born—In Millbrook, on Friday, September 17, to Mr. and Mrs. S. Bonner, a daughter.

Misses Violet Bothwell, Viola Nurse, and Mildred Brown are attending Peterboro Normal School this term.

Mrs. E. S. Burnham, who has been visiting her sisters at Beaverton and Cannington for the past month, returned home this week.

T. J. Lang has purchased Dr. W. Mitchell's residence on Centre Street. Dr. and Mrs. Mitchell are at present visiting his mother, Mrs. J. J. Mitchell, of New Lovell, Ont., and will later probably reside permanently in the States.

The annual meeting of the local branch of the Upper Canada Bible Society will be held in the Town Hall, Millbrook, on Tuesday, October 5, at 8 p.m. Rev. Douglas Paterson of Peterboro will be the speaker for the occasion.

Mr. and Mrs. Whyte of Australia are guests of Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Elson.

DOURO PEKSONALS.

DOURO, Sept. 28.—Miss Carrie Maloney of Lakefield is visiting Mrs. Patrick Healey.

Mrs. D. Hill and children of Lakefield are visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. J. McCarthy.

Mr. Dennis Ryan of New York City is visiting his mother, Mrs. E. Ryan, and other relatives here.

Miss Lauretta Harrington has returned home after visiting for a week with friends in Peterboro and Otonabee.

Mr. Richard Carveth of Peterboro is visiting his son, Mr. Arthur Carveth.

Miss Eleanor Moher has been engaged as teacher in St. Joseph's Convent, Sudbury.

Miss Carrie Condon has returned to Lakefield High School to resume her studies.

Mrs. Herbert Watson and children of Kinmount is visiting Mrs. Patrick Healey.

Mrs. Stephen Corkery of Peterboro is visiting her sister, Mrs. John Moher, and other friends here.

Friends here of Rev. Joseph O'Leary, P.P., of Young, Sask., will be interested to hear that on Sept. 8, Rev. Fr. O'Leary journeyed to Wakaw, Sask., to the shrine of the Little Flower, St. Terese of Lesieux, and there celebrated Mass. This shrine, which is in a Polish settlement, is situated about fifty miles north and west of Saskatoon, and not far from Prince Albert. A splendid church is being erected at the shrine at Wakaw, and many pilgrimages take place from the surrounding country each year.

. . . REPORTER OF THE NEW . . . REMEMBRANCER OF THE OLD AND TRIED . . . HERALD OF WHAT IS TO COME.

HELP IS NEEDED.

The fact that the annual tag day of the Children's Aid Society is to be held a week from Saturday is of much importance this year as the funds of the society, the Examiner understands, are more than usually in need of replenishment.

In fact, it has been necessary to draw upon the society's small capital account to meet running expenses.

Under these circumstances a substantial response to the tag day appeal is very much needed, and the public is asked to remember this when an opportunity is given to assist the society in its most worthy efforts on behalf of neglected and dependent children.

This work needs no explanation; the people of Peterboro know what is being done, and all that is necessary surely to ensure a worth-while tag day is to point out that this year in particular financial assistance is needed.

WELL DONE, SOFTBALLERS!

The Men's Softball League has announced through President J. E. Sullivan a donation of $25.00 toward meeting the expenses of the Royals baseball team in connection with the Merriton trip on Saturday.

The Examiner is delighted to acknowledge this subscription, not only because it is a very material help in building up the necessary total, but even more so because of the spirit of co-operation and team-play that is involved in the gift.

The Softball League in this coming to the rescue of another sporting organization is setting an example that might be more generally followed in Peterboro.

The problem of financing teams and leagues could be considerably simplified if the more prosperous organizations were ready to extend a helping hand to the weaker sisters, as the Softball League has done in this case.

A closer entente among local sporting organizations along these lines could not fail to show beneficial results for the various teams, but for the whole cause of sport in Peterboro.

Well done, softballers!

THE CANADIAN LEGION.

The successful launching of the Peterboro post of the Canadian Legion and the representative list of officers chosen at the organization are matters upon which the Examiner believes the ex-service men of the city and district are to be congratulated.

The Legion should be successful in attracting to itself the vast majority of veterans here as the lines upon which it has been organized throughout Canada should appeal to returned men as practicable and businesslike.

There are many reasons why the comradeship of war days should be kept alive and why the united influence of the men who fought for Canada should be exerted in the solution of problems affecting them or the families of their comrades who lie beneath the wooden crosses over there.

To bring ex-service men into a Dominion-wide organization with these objects to be sought may be a more difficult task at this late day than immediately following the war, but the Examiner, realizing what an effective medium in the veterans' interests it can be made, wishes the Canadian Legion in general and the Peterboro post in particular every success.

The movement deserves to triumph and will if the spirit of the ex-service men is as it was in the days of active service.

FIRE PREVENTION.

Next week has been designated in a proclamation issued by the Governor-General as Fire Prevention Week.

In various ways an effort will be made to educate the public to the necessity of being more careful about fire hazards—a necessity that is given point by the fact that the average annual loss of insurable property in Canada exceeds $45,000,000, and that more than 350 people meet death through fires in this country every year.

As fire experts declare that 80 per cent. of all fires are due to neglect or ignorance, the reason for a Fire Prevention Week is readily apparent.

Some people, of course, scoff at such movements as they scoff at nearly every effort that seeks to promote community welfare.

CONSIDER THE COUNTRY.

With the Federal election a thing of the past and the electorate getting back to normal, I believe there is one feature of the campaign which will be generally regretted. Before Parliament was dissolved it was known that a considerable amount of dirty linen had been piled up for washing on both sides. It was as a result of the dirty linen that the House was dissolved, and it was only natural to expect an election campaign of a more or less dirty order. As a matter of fact, public warning was given and suggestion made that leaders do what they could to elevate the tone of campaign debate. The thing to be generally regretted is that the leaders did nothing of the sort. On the contrary they turned their backs on the suggestion and gave a lead to the mud slingers, with the inevitable result. With leaders devoting most of their public speaking time to personalities and condemnation of the other fellow and the other fellow's friends, was it to be expected that their followers on the public platform would keep out of the cesspool? No chance. And the general result was that Canada staged the dirtiest and lowest level Federal election campaign in the memory of the oldest inhabitant. That it has done the country harm we already know. There were strangers of importance in Canada during the campaign from overseas and across the line. They listened to the political invective until they wearied of it, and they allowed themselves to be interviewed on the subject. The impression they got was that Canadians conduct their political fights upon the lowest of low planes and that for this reason it was reasonable to assume that the Canadian people were a rather low-lived lot. Of course, the assumption is not correct. The people of Canada had no desire for such a campaign. It nauseated them as much as it did their visitors. But what else could be expected with the party leaders lending their aid to the dirty business.

* * * *

Now that the fight is over and we have time to do some sane thinking, let us forget about the party and consider the country for awhile. Because after all the country is more important than the party and should invariably have first place in our thoughts. If we could only be assured that a majority of the electors of Canada would at all times place the country ahead of party, or even personal advantage, there would be little need to worry about the tone of our election campaigns. Extreme partyism is what lowers the tone of our political discussions as it also debases the standard of our civil service. And when the people think of country above party it means that they will cease to be political partizans and will be prepared to vote as readily for one party as for another, their support going always to the party that meets most closely their idea of what is needed for the good of the country as a whole. When that time comes we shall have no need to blush at the opinion outsiders form of us and our political ways.—Alberta Farmer.

THE UPWARD ROAD.

George H. Jones, who started out, a poor boy, as office clerk and stenographer, is today chairman of the Standard Oil Board with a salary of $125,000 a year. How did he reach such eminence? He doesn't know, and nobody does. It would be impossible to determine specifically what qualifications have been the means of advancing any man who has marched to high place. But it is usually possible to identify two or three characteristics which are held in common by all successful men.

When Mr. Jones was asked to say what had helped him to rise from obscurity to prominence, he modestly said there had been a good deal of luck about it. There is no denying that something of that nature does play a part in men's lives; but not often. Good luck never comes to the young man who is unprepared for it. It is being ready with a sound equipment that makes the knock of opportunity seem like a stroke of fine fortune. And the story of Mr. Jones' life is simply a story of a young man who worked so hard and effectively on every job he took in hand that he gave it added value. He used his brains and did not watch the clock.

One gets a hint of winning methods from Mr. Jones' own estimate of what counts in a young man. "Given a job of no particular importance," he says, "one person does methodically what is required, while another sees new kinds of work to do and makes the job important. The second will get ahead." That is the decisive teaching of experience. Yet there is one other qualification which is basic, and without which failure is certain. "To get ahead," observes Mr. Jones, "a man must be dependable. He must have integrity. You must be able to have confidence in him." Of course. Nevertheless, there are thousands of young men who believe that sharpness and cunning are essential to success.

This is not a sermonette for young men alone. Hundreds of young women have won their way to high positions by following the Jones method—although Mr. Jones has no monopoly of it. The late H. H. Rogers, also one of the Standard Oil heads, had a young woman in his office who had made herself so efficient that she had become indispensable. This her employer realized one day, and so he asked her what she was being paid. She said $100 per month. "Not after this" was his quick reply. "Your salary from now on is $10,000 per annum." And Mr. Rogers always said she was worth every penny of it. Why? Because she had mastered all the details of his office work and had made herself a right hand to him. Others can do as much. It is not genius that carries men and women to the highest rank. It is just the application of good sense, tact, a quick brain, hard work and unwavering integrity to the little jobs that form the stepping stones to the big jobs. —Ottawa Journal.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

The sport-loving people of Peterboro are not going to let a championship chance slip away. The Royals' appeal for assistance should be readily answered.

Motorists who don't stop at through street intersections should be stopped—by the police.

St. Louis having won a baseball pennant, there is still a chance that Jimmy Simpson may yet be elected to Parliament.

If you want to start something just whistle "It Ain't Gonna Rain No More" when a Peterboro or Lindsay Fair director happens to be in the neighborhood.

Hon. Vincent Massey is to represent Canada at Washington, finding it an easier task than getting a chance to represent Durham at Ottawa.

Mr. Meighen promises every assistance to the new Government in expediting the passing of the estimates. That course is in accord with public opinion.

CATTLE, GRAIN AND PRODUCE

Peterboro—Toronto—Montreal Winnipeg

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Sept. 29 (Canadian Press).—There was a marked improvement in the demand from foreign buyers for Manitoba wheat on the Montreal grain market yesterday and a moderate amount of business was worked including a few loads of barley, but the trade in oats continued slow.

Owing to the above there was also some demand for wheat in the local market, and sales of a few fair sized loads of No. 2 Northern were made at 14 cents per bushel over the Winnipeg October option, and No. 3 Northern at 13 cents per bushel over, while No. 3 barley sold at 11 cents per bushel over, c.i.f. Montreal. A moderate amount of business was done in car lots of oats and prices were reduced 1 cents per bushel.

An easier feeling prevailed in the Spring wheat flour market, but prices showed no change. The export business was fair and the movement for local country account continues good. A moderate amount of business was done in Winter wheat flour and values were steady.

Prices for all grades of millfeed were well maintained under a good demand. A fair trade was transacted in rolled oats and the undertone was firm.

The volume of business transacted in fresh and storage eggs was again large and prices ruled steady. The receipts were 1,563 cases.

There was no further change in the condition of the market for potatoes. Prices were steady under a moderate demand. Sales of car lots of New Brunswick Cobblers were made at $1.30 per bag, and Quebec white stock at $1.10 per bag of 90 pounds, ex-track.

The market for beans was quiet, but as the offerings were not large prices were unchanged with car lots of choice white hand-picked quoted at $2.25 per bushel, and smaller quantities at $2.35 to $2.45 per bushel.

On account of the continued indifferent demand from all sources for butter, an easier feeling developed in the local market and prices were declined 1-2c per pound. The receipts were 3,294 packages.

The tone of the cheese market was also weaker owing to the absence of any important demand, and prices were reduced 1-4c per pound. The receipts were 14,037 boxes.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Sept. 29 (Canadian Press).— Higher prices here for wheat resulted yesterday from an unexpected advance in quotations at Liverpool and from big export sales, mostly Canadian. Wheat in Chicago had an unsettled close, 1-4 to 3-4c up, with corn unchanged to 5-8c down; oats showing 1-8 to 1-2c gain, and provisions varying from 7-8c decline to 5 cents advance.

European purchasing of North American wheat yesterday was estimated as totalling more than 1,000,000 bushels. In addition, nearby deliveries of wheat abroad were reported scarce and this dearth was emphasized by word that a cargo of No. 2 Amber wheat arriving at Naples, Italy, had sold at $1.82 1-4 a bushel, whereas the cost of October shipment was only $1.69. Misgivings over recent crop damage in Canada, coupled with continued liberal estimates of European import requirements acted also as a strengthening factor.

In connection with Canadian crop damage reports, it was pointed out that arrivals of wheat yesterday at Winnipeg, 1,895 cars, were less than the aggregate a week ago or a year back and that marketing by Canadian farmers Monday had amounted to only 1,500,000 bushels. Meanwhile cash wheat prices here were firmer and there was a notable absence of any pressure of cash wheat here or abroad. An outstanding feature of the speculative market was persistent commission house absorption of offerings on the various temporary setbacks due to realizing of profits.

Agricultural college reports that frost damage in Nebraska and Iowa was light tended to weaken the corn market. There was but little speculative demand for corn. Oats held better owing to smallness of receipts. Provisions eased down, in line with the hog market.

CHICAGO CATTLE

CHICAGO, Sept. 29 (Canadian Press).—Cattle, 9,000; most classes and grades best steers getting better action; best yearlings $12.10; late arrivals held above; 1,450 pounds steers $11.25; bulk short feed $8.75 to $10; fat she stock slow, steady; cutters strong; bulls steady; vealers active, mostly 50c higher; best to packers $15.50; stockers and feeders mostly steady.

Hogs 20,000; desirable hogs closing strong at early uneven, steady to 25c lower market; packing sows late top $13.75; bulk 180 to 240 pound average $13.25 to $13.60; desirable 250 to 300 pound butchers $13 to $13.45; selected strong weight butchers $13 to $13.45; selected strong weight slaughter pigs up to $12.50; shippers took 4,000; estimated holdover 8,000.

Sheep 30,000; better grades fat lambs steady; lower grades 25c or more lower; choice westerns held late above $13.85; bulk $13 to $13.50; to packers $13.50; bulk $12.75 to $13.25; few strong weights $10; sheep steady; bulk fat ewes $6 to $6.50; feeder lambs costly 50c lower; bulk $12 to $13; lambs at $13.75 no criterion.

HELP KIWANIS CLUB.

Dear Sir:

The friends of Kiwanis in Peterboro and vicinity are becoming very much interested in the "Produced-in-Canada Exhibition," which takes place from October 11th to October 16th, and the young ladies who are engaged in the bond selling competition are meeting with cordial receptions wherever they go. We trust that our friends in Peterboro and vicinity will encourage the young ladies who are sacrificing so much of their time and are working so hard to make the "Produced-in-Canada Exhibition" a success. In the history of the world, women have always played an important part, and whenever there was a sacrifice to be made, a woman was always willing to sacrifice everything that anything may be gained to aid humanity.

The under-privileged child work which is carried on in connection with the other work of the Kiwanis Club in Peterboro appeals to the very best in human nature, so we would appreciate it that when the young ladies who are selling the bonds for the "Produced-in-Canada Exhibition" approach you that you will encourage them as much as possible. We not only want you to encourage them, but assist them in selling the bonds. Remember that every bond sold means so much more for the work of the organization. The Kiwanis Club has a reputation in Peterboro and vicinity of doing all that is within its power to assist those in need, and all the funds received from the sale of the bonds and the result of the "Produced-in-Canada Exhibition" will be devoted in the interest of aiding humanity. We sincerely trust that you will encourage and help the young ladies who are working so hard.

Now is the time to help them, as it is like the clock of life.

The clock of life is wound but once,
And no man has the power
To tell just when the hands will stop—
At late or early hour.
Now is the only time you own;
Live, love, toil with a will;
Place no faith in tomorrow, for
The clock may then be still.

JOHN A. ALLEN, Chairman,
Bond Selling Committee.

A THOUGHT FOR TODAY

WHY.

(Being a further reference to Carelessness)

If I should take my trusty gun and shoot you in the limb I'd languish many moons within the hoose-gow dark and grim. If I should take a baseball bat and smack you on the spine, I'd spend a holiday in jug (no option of a fine).

If I should speed my motor car and sprain your dorsal fin, they'd hail me to the jail and promptly lock me in. If I should chuck a cannon ball or bomb and wreck your home, the Law's long arm would reach far out and biff me on the dome.

But if I light a cigarette and toss the match away and your snug house goes up in smoke, I do not have to pay; even though your kids and spouse all perish in the flames, I fear no penalties; the law won't even call me names.—W. J. B.

HOW DO YOU SAY IT?

(By C. N. Lurie.)

Common Errors in English and How To Avoid Them.

(Copyright, McClure Syndicate.)

IS IT "STUCK UP" TO USE GOOD GRAMMAR?

Sometimes one meets a person who knows what good English is, and also how to use it in speaking and writing, and yet prefers to depart from the rules of grammar. Why? "Because," said one of these persons, "it sounds 'stuck up' to use good English all the time."

Undoubtedly there are many who think thus. Probably the sufficient answer to make to them is that there is no error in English which may not offend some hearer or reader, and therefore it is far better to avoid all errors, when they are recognized as such.

In "The King's English" we find the following:

"Many educated people feel that in saying 'It is I,' 'Whom do you mean?' instead of 'It's me,' 'Who do you mean?' they will be talking like a book, and they justifiably prefer geniality to grammar."

But it is submitted respectfully that it is better to say "It is I," and know that one is speaking correctly, than to say, "It is me" and know that one is talking down to the uneducated or careless.

PRESIDENT COMING.

Will Arrive in Peterborough Thursday, Sept 30.

The President is coming.

The President, Custom Sedan of the line of Studebaker Custom models, the popularity of which has swept the country, will arrive in Peterboro on Thursday (tomorrow) It will come at the head of a caravan of beautiful automobiles—the Studebaker Canadian Customs Car Caravan.

The caravan is making a tour of Canada in order that everyone may become acquainted with the Customs Sedans. All of the principal cities are to be visited and The President and all others will be introduced to the citizenry.

The caravan will remain in Peterboro for seven hours on Thursday (tomorrow). It will arrive at Reid and Sons garage about five o'clock. The public is invited to inspect this caravan of Custom models that is causing sales records to be broken in America almost every day.

The cars are an addition to the line of Studebaker model, and include a Standard Six Custom Sedan a Big Six Seven Passenger Custom Sedan, a Custom Victoria and The President, an ultradistinctive Big Six Custom Sedan embodying the most luxurious refinements of custom coachwork.—(Advt.).

Lyrics Of Life

(By Douglas Malloch.)

THE GIDEONS

You'll find a Bible in your room:
A friend of yours has put it there;
And, if the day has had its gloom,
Has even brought some dark despair,
You'll find a book beside your bed
With pages white and edges red
And words of gold whose words presage
The words of gold on every page.

A friend of yours you do not know,
A lonely traveler like yourself
Who has the same hard road to go,
Has put upon a handy shelf
The anchor to the day's success,
Or comfort in unhappiness;
For, if you read a page or two,
These things are opened unto you.

Some friend of yours who knew you not,
But knew mankind, has left it here,
To wipe away each tear and blot
When day is done and night is near.
Sit down and read a page, and find
The quiet heart, the peaceful mind,
And strength to conquer sin and care—
A Friend of yours has put it there.

DR FRANK CRANE'S DAILY EDITORIAL.

THE CAREER OF MUSSOLINI

By Dr. Frank Crane.

In October, 1926, Italy celebrates the fourth anniversary of the rise of the Fascist party.

The Fascists are represented by Mussolini.

It is commonly supposed that the methods and spirit of Fascism are despotic; but the concentration of authority in the hands of Mussolini took place with the approval of the entire Italian people who wanted a man who would save them from the communists and socialists.

Mussolini did this, and since then has given them a strong and solid government.

He has had some difficulty in getting rid of objectionable friends and subordinates who often betrayed the party into rash and ill advised steps, but they have been gradually weeded out. Fascism has survived these errors, sloughed off its false friends, and is now firmly in the saddle.

If the matter were put to a general vote Mussolini would be almost unanimously elected.

Although he lives in a charming villa and has pretty nearly all he wants, it is not hard for him to remember that his youth was passed in squalid poverty.

Only twenty-four years ago he wrote from Switzerland that he was "working eleven hours a day at three pence an hour. I made 121 trips with a barrel load of stones to the second floor of a house that was being built. In the evening the muscles of my arms were swollen."

Some time afterward he was reduced to sleeping under the bridge at Lausanne. One morning he met an Italian friend and told him how he was fixed. The friend laughed at him and Mussolini cursed him. Then his friend put his hand in his pocket and gave Mussolini six pence. The man who was afterward to be dictator of Italy then darted into a shop and bought a loaf of bread, which he said, "I devoured with the ferocity of Cerberus."

In the midst of his great prestige and power now he remembers these trying days. It tends to keep him human.

HOW TO MAKE A PRACTICAL OIL FUNNEL.

Select a round quart bottle of clear glass. Saturate a piece of cord in kerosene or turpentine, tie it tightly around the bottle about one inch from bottom and ignite the cord. As the flame dies out tap the bottom of the bottle sharply. The bottom will break off where the cord was tied. Result is a practical funnel for pouring oil into the breather pipe.

4 out of 5
start too late

Among the people you see today, four out of five past forty (and many younger) are victims of Pyorrhea—simply because they started too late to protect teeth and gums.

Pyorrhea starts with tender, bleeding gums. Unchecked, it undermines youth and health and often results in loss of teeth, neuritis, ulcers, rheumatism or other serious diseases.

But have no fear. If you start in time, you can prevent or check the inroads of Pyorrhea. See your dentist at least twice a year. And start using Forhan's for the Gums.

This dentifrice prevents Pyorrhea or checks it. It is the formula of R. J. Forhan, D.D.S., a recognized specialist in Pyorrhea.

Forhan's firms the gums, keeps them healthy. It protects teeth from decay-breeding acids and keeps them white.

Don't gamble with health! Start the Forhan morning-and-night habit, now. Teach your children to use it, too, as health-insurance. Play safe. Get a tube today. At all druggists', 35c and 60c.

LEAGUE MEETING.

Epworth Society of St. John's United Church Met Monday Evening.

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 29.—The young people of the Epworth League Society of St. John's United church held their regular meeting on Monday evening in the Sunday school room. The president, Mr. G. F. Phillips presided over the opening exercises of the meeting after which Mr. Jack Boyd, who is convenor of the literary and social department took charge of the programme, which was as follows:

Piano trio, Miss Cherrie Turner, Miss Irene Stephens Mr. A. Hazell.

Vocal solo—Mr. A. L. Malcolm.

Violin solo—Mr. R. Hazell, accompanied by Mr. A. Hazell.

Vocal solo—Miss Irene Dunk, accompanied by Mr. A. Hazell.

Mr. Cecil Stephens gave a very interesting report of the summer school held at Bobcaygeon last August. This report was excellently delivered and all present enjoyed it very much. A vote of thanks from all present was made to Mr. Stephens.

Rev. Mr. Lawson spoke briefly to the young people on the work of the home church and Christian Service and complimented the young people of the League on their work and excellent programmes.

A nice lunch was served and all spent a pleasant social evening.

Mr. Sidney F. Bidgood returned to his home here on Monday after attending the funeral of his sister-in-law, Mrs. Fred C. Bidgood at Haileybury.

MORE EVIDENCE DISCLOSED BY COTTAGE OWNER

New Green Bathing Suit on Clothes Line at Carmel.

SIMILAR APPEARANCE.

Several Other Witnesses Follow Who Fail To Identify Evangelist.

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 29 (Canadian Press).—H. C. Benedict, owner of the cottage at Carmel, Calif., where the State contends Aimee Semple McPherson, evangelist, remained with Kenneth G. Ormiston, former Angelus Temple radio operator, for 10 days after she disappeared May 18, testified here yesterday that the woman who occupied the house was very similar in appearance to Mrs. McPherson. He refused, however, to attempt identification of the evangelist in court, declaring he couldn't be sure because of the goggles and large brimmed hat worn by the woman at Carmel.

The cottage owner declared that while planting flowers about the house he saw a vivid green bathing suit hanging on the clothes line.

Mrs. McPherson was reported to have been wearing a green bathing suit when she disappeared from the beach at Ocean Park May 18.

Benedict followed other witnesses, who likewise failed to identify the evangelist as the woman companion of the man who gave his name as George McIntyre. William Mack, a laundryman who delivered laundry to the Benedict cottage, said he could not remember having seen any woman about the cottage when McIntyre lived there.

William H. McMichaels, a stone mason, said he had seen the woman five or six times, but could not identify her as Mrs. McPherson. The evangelist removed her hat in the court-room, exposing her hair, but the witness said he could not say he had seen her before.

Benedict said his cottage had been rented to a man who said he was "George McIntyre," on May 4, through a realty company.

Benedict told of McIntyre renting the cottage for three months at $150 per month, on which a $100 deposit was made. He said McIntyre wanted the house late May 18 or early May 19.

He said he and his wife moved out of the cottage late on May 18. Returning the next morning about 10 o'clock, he said he noticed the garage was locked, and saw other evidence that the house had been occupied. On the clothes line, he said, hung the green bathing suit.

He returned to the cottage about 11 o'clock the next day to plant some flowers. After a few minutes McIntyre came out of the house and remarked he wanted Benedict to meet his wife. When the woman came out she and McIntyre walked over and stood beside Benedict. An introduction followed, after which there was two or three minutes' conversation.

He said the woman had on a white felt hat, goggles over her eyes and black satin slippers. Her hat was drawn low. He said he could not see her hair nor her eyes.

He said the man and woman walked away from him when they left, and he observed her skirt was "medium, extending well below her knees." Asked whether he would be able to recognize the woman again if he saw her, he said he did not think he could, but estimated her height at five feet seven inches and weighing 140 pounds. Keyes asked him how Mrs. McPherson compared with the woman physically.

"Very similar," Benedict replied. He said he had seen the evangelist at Angelus Temple since that time.

Benedict did not know when the couple left his cottage. On May 29 he said he received a letter from Salines, Calif., stating "McIntyre" had left and was going to New York on account of illness of his wife's mother. The letter said that "needless to say, we have enjoyed the visit at your cottage very much."

LARGE ATTENDANCE AT PREVENTION FILM

Inspector Sutherland Gives Interesting Address on Industrial Accident Prevention.

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 29. — The Industrial Accident Prevention Association, working in conjunction with the Campbellford Cloth Company, Limited, presented a very interesting and instructive programme in the High School on Thursday last. Employees of the Cloth Co., Hydro-Electric, Weston Shoe Co., pulp and paper mills and friends, numbering three hundred, filled the large auditorium.

Mr. J. H. Bell, the Cloth Co. Supt., extended a welcome to all.

Mr. Bell referred to present-day conditions and the craving for speed, with the consequent increased liability to accidents.

He introduced Inspector William Sutherland, who gave a short talk, including details and costs of accidents to the employees of the country. He asked the audience to keep a clean accident sheet during the next two months, when he is due to pay his official visit to the factories and workshops. "They could do it if they would," he said.

The comedy film "Hard Luck" was shown followed by an educational film, "Work at the plant."

Then came the special safety feature picture, "The Outlaw," represented by King Carelessness and his Imps, "Didn't Think," "Didn't Look" and "Didn't Care," "What's the Use?" "I Should Worry," "Horse-Play," and others who stole into a large works and carried on their antics, causing many accidents. The moral of the picture was very apparent, as also was the lesson taught by the film "Resuscitation" featuring a linesman who neglected to use his safety belt, rubber gloves and other safety devices until he had received a severe shock while on line work.

The picture programme was interspersed with the following interesting selections:

Piano solo. "Fireflies" Mr. W. Rollo.

Tenor solo, "Autumntide," Mr. W. Collison.

Violin solo, "Air. Varie." Master Kenneth Collison.

Reading, "Thoug ts o! a Child Aged Seven." Mrs. J. H. Bell.

Mr. A. Collison accompanied the musical items throughout the evening very acceptably.

Mr. George Collins, the Cloth Co's first aid officer, thanked Mr. Sutherland for his work in conection with the showing of the pictures and the National anthem concluded the evening's entertainment.

EMPRESS OF SCOTLAND (AT SEA), Sept. 29.—(By Radio). — Sunny weather and smooth seas are accompanying the passage of the Empress of Scotland, flagship of the Canadian Pacific fleet, to Quebec carrying His Excellency Viscount Willingdon, new Governor-General of Canada, and Lady Willingdon. The ship is expected to arrive at the ancient capital this coming week-end.

Their Excellencies were much interested in moving pictures shown aboard the ship illustrating phases of life in the Dominion and including subjects so varied as Hart House, Toronto, students' residence at the university; trail riders of the Canadian Rockies, and the Doukhobors in British Columbia.

Last night both Viscount and Lady Willingdon took part in a dance held in the ball room of the Empress of Scotland.

The seventy-fifth anniversary of the opening of the first free library in England will be observed next year. The library was in Manchester and Dickens, Thackeray and Bulwer-Lytton were speakers at the opening.

CRIMINAL COURT SITTING TO-DAY

Two Cases of Serious Nature Being Heard By Judge Huycke.

SPECIAL SESSION.

Two cases, both involving charges of a serious nature, will be heard by Judge E. C. S. Huycke in a special sitting of the Criminal Court under the Speedy Trials Act.

Bertrand McCue, who was committed for trial over two months ago by Magistrate O. A. Langley, will face His Honor, to-day.

To-morrow Henry Oliver, also committed for trial by the Magistrate, will come up.

VOTES RELIEF COAL MINERS

To Continue Coal Strike Emergency Regulations For Another Month.

SESSION ADJOURNS

LONDON, Sept. 29 (Canadian Press).—The House of Commons voted yesterday to continue the coal strike emergency powers regulations for another month. The vote was 196 to 99.

The House also voted to adjourn at the end of last night's session until November 9, whereupon Vernon Hartshorn, Laborite and former member of the National Executive of the Miners' Federation, took the floor and began anew the discussion of the coal situation. No new avenues which might lead to a settlement of the long standing strike were opened, however, and the House adjourned.

VIOLENT STORMS SWEEP EUROPE

Causes Floods and Great Damage in Parts of Italy.

HEAVY WINDS.

VIENNA, Sept. 29 (Canadian Press). — Prolonged and severe earth tremors were felt in Vienna yesterday afternoon. The first shocks came about 4.40. They extended throughout all Lower Austria and Bergenland.

Seismographs in the Vienna Central Meteorological Institute were thrown out of action. Not much damage has been reported, although walls of buildings were cracked. The centre of the disturbance has not been determined.

Tracks Washed Out.

ROME, Sept. 29 (Canadian Press) —A violent rainstorm, accompanied by heavy wind and lightning, occurred yesterday, causing floods and great damage in various parts of Italy.

The Tiber River has swollen rapidly, although without causing a great flood, while the Arno River has overflowed its banks and joined a torrent from the Staggia, destroying mills, uprooting trees and seriously damaging crops and the homes of peasants.

The storm reached its climax near Trieste at the village of Roiano, where railway tracks were washed out. Flood waters were so high there that many inhabitants of the village were imprisoned in their houses, from which they were rescued with difficulty by 300 soldiers of an engineering regiment who were rushed to the place in boats. It was necessary to make holes in the walls of some houses to rescue people who were up to their shoulders in water.

AFGHANISTAN HATS.

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—Turbans on the avenue this summer have borrowed their motif from the Afghanistan headgear. They are of black velvet and silk tricot, fitting closely over the forehead and rising five or six inches at the back. They also resemble faintly the Hessian head dress plus a feature or two of the Alpine hat.

JAPS ARE THRIFTY.

HONOLULU, Sept. 28.—Japanese led all other people in the number of savings accounts in territorial banks at the end of the last fiscal year, the registrar of public accounts reports. The number of savings accounts was 102,093, representing a total sum of $22,989,564.24. Japanese had 27,971 accounts, with the Chinese next with 14,564.

Death from Starvation!

That's the Fate that Awaits Every Moth-Worm that Tries to Live on "Sani-Bilt"

IN their search for a method of permanently mothproofing furniture, a group of scientists and industrial chemists discovered that moth-worms need a certain food element called "Keratin," which is present in wool, feathers, fur and many other materials. Without "Keratin," a moth-worm could not live. It is as vital to them as milk is to a baby.

Remove the "Keratin" or make it uneatable and moth-worms could not live on mohair, wool, feathers, fur and other materials that moths use for food.

These men found it useless to use poison. Liquid arsenic, for example, soon dried into a powder and evaporated into the air. Other poisons lost their strength in time and left the "Keratin" still there and the materials an easy prey for moths.

But patience was at last rewarded. After years of study and research, a chemical compound was found that changed the "Keratin" and made it useless as a food for moth-worms. Not being able to eat the "Keratin," the moth-worms could not exist on materials treated with this compound.

This chemical compound and the process of applying it to the materials not only changes this "Keratin" into an uneatable element, but it can never change back again to "Keratin." Thus, fabrics and fillings given this process of moth-proofing are forever mothproof. As long as the materials last, they are permanently mothproof. Death from starvation awaits any moth-worms, that by any chance, happen to get on any material mothproofed by this process.

Furthermore, this mothproofing process does not injure materials in the slightest. It is colorless, odorless and does not change the appearance or feel of the fabric.

If you are invited to buy other moth-proof suites, just ask this one question:

"Will you replace this suite if Moths damage it?"

Snyder's guarantee says that and protects you absolutely.

Remember, poison wears off or evaporates. Death by starvation—the Snyder process—is the only permanent method. Also, remember that the fillings must be mothproofed, as well as the coverings. Merely spraying bug poison is a make-shift.

Look for the Snyder "Sani-Bilt" trademark under the cushions, also the Guarantee Tag attached to each chesterfield and chair. Then, you'll make certain of permanently mothproof upholstered furniture.

A Replacement Guarantee

Do not be misled, if someone says, "Madam, this suite is guaranteed to be treated against moths" or "This suite is guaranteed mothproof." Just ask him if he will give you a guarantee—in writing—to replace the suite, should it be damaged by moths.

The Snyder Sani-Bilt Guarantee is a replacement guarantee and it is an absolute guarantee. Snyder's, Limited, guarantee to replace any and every Sani-Bilt Suite of upholstered furniture, if moths do the slightest damage. And this written guarantee accompanies every piece.

52ND ANNIVERSARY HELD IN MARMORA

Impressive Services at Building Anniversary of St. Paul's Church.

MARMORA, Sept. 2 . — Services marking the 52nd anniversary of the building of St. Paul's church were held at that edifice on Sunday. The interior was prettily decorated with flowers. The choir was augmented for both services, rendering the anthem, "O Clap your hands all ye people" by Caleb Simper at Morning Prayer and Kipling's "Recessional" at Evensong.

The Rector Rev. P. Caiger-Watson, officiated in the morning before a goodly assemblage of worshippers.

His sermon was based upon Eph. II, verses 19 to 22. Having referred to the glory of Solomon's temple and the ornaments therein, the preacher drew a parallel between the latter and those in Christian churches today. He stressed the beauty of the flowers, God's own production, printed with His finger. Proceeding the Rector showed how Solomon also took of the best of workmanship—this in itself being an act of praise to Almighty God. The main glory of the Christian Church is the presence of Christ within. "What have we been leading up to?" he, the preacher asked. "To the fact that a new and better temple was to take the place of the Jewish one. God is a spirit and they that worship Him must worship Him in spirit and in truth. This does not mean that God must not be worshipped with our bodies, for they are the temples of the Holy Spirit. We worship Him with our whole being—body, soul and spirit. God brought to us a new and living temple which is Jesus Christ, and you and I are built into it." Rev. Mr. Watson in conclusion outlined the especial causes for thankfulness which the members of St. Paul' had in this connection, referred to the fact that in the long rectorate of his predecessor, 1077 souls were baptized into the church.

The preacher at Evensong was the Rev. G. O. Davies, B. A., Rector of Rawdon, whose choice of subject was "Foundations," based upon I Cor. 3: 11. The reverend gentleman pointed out the necessity for solid and sure foundations in the creations of man, such as ship building and house-building.

Underlying these structures are the added foundations of the characters of the men who have built them. The foundation of the Christian character inevitably begins with Jesus Christ. Other foundations have been tried. We have seen in history the usage of the foundation of fear. Hell has been painted in lurid colour to drive people into religion. We cannot play fast and loose with the responsibilities of our earthly life. Others use the foundation of self interest. They become religious because they say it pays them to. Sooner or later they discover that they are not honest with themselves. Loyalty to Christ is the true foundation. There are two things that loyalty needs — opportunities for knowledge and exercise. You cannot prevent demonstrations of loyalty because they are natural. The disciples besought our Lord to restrain the children from praising Him but He rebuked them by saying that if the children held their peace the very stones would cry out. "Looking back over the past associations of this church" the pastor continued, "we may believe that the foundation of many a Christian life was laid within these walls. The parish church is the spiritual home here below. It is not merely a meeting place but the House of God our Father's home. It should be the centre of our spiritual life for all our great steps in life are taken in it. How warm a place it should have in our hearts. The success of its activities depends upon the co-operation that exists between pastor and people. Both have their part to play."

The whole offertories for the day were devoted to the Rectory Fund, the objective of three hundred dollars being set by the congregation.

In the evening the rector preached at the harvest thanksgiving service at the neighbouring church of St. Mark's, Rawdon.

The anniversary services will be continued next Sunday when the preacher in the morning will be Archdeacon G. R. Beamish of St. Thomas's, Belleville, whose visit will be in the nature of a farewell. On Sunday, October 9th, the annual Harvest festival will be held with the Rev. George Code, M.A., rector of Smith's Falls, as the special preacher.

RALLY SERVICE

WELCOME, Sept. 29. — Sept. 26 was Young Peoples' anniversary at the Welcome church.

The morning service was the rally service of the Sunday school. The special feature was the pageant "United for Service."this was a very impressive and picturesque exercise, and well rendered by those taking part.

In the evening Rev. J. Lane of Canton preached the anniversary sermon. His subject was "Service." Mr. Lane illustrated his subject by using a banner with "Service" as an acrostic, and each letter standing for several characteristics of the subject. The choir provided special music.

DON JUAN

Novel by INEZ SABASTIEN

SYNOPSIS

His father's warning—"Take women's love scornfully—and forget"—has made Juan the world's greatest lover. His cynicism is checked by Madonna-like Adriana Varanese; loving her, he reforms, but incurs the enmity of infamous Lucretia Borgia, who loves him, and Donati, her kinsman, who covets Adriana. Circumstances destroy Juan's faith in Adriana. Cynical again, he becomes the lover of Lucretia. To save her father, Adriana marries Donati, but Juan kills Donati and is thrown into a dungeon by Lucretia, who hopes to break his spirit. Juan, despite himself, dreams of Adriana—

CHAPTER XI.—Continued.

Her glance had been a caress, heavier laden with love than the kisses of many women.

And yet—yet there she had been with Donati, in her bed chamber, that night when he went to her. How frightened she had been, how determined to protect her lover! A faithless thing, like all other women. If only he could forget her!

His thoughts held him so closely that when the door of his cell was opened he did not at first realize what had happened. Then he looked up slowly, without interest. The keeper of the prison stood there, and as he stepped aside, a veiled woman took his place.

She moved down to the first of the two steps leading from the door to the cell; the hem of her dark cloak fell to the step below, its edge trailing in the water.

She ordered the door closed behind her, threw back her veil, and stood for a moment looking at Juan. Her eyes filled with tears; then, as he stared back at her, apparently with no thought of coming to her, they grew cold and angry.

"Come here!" she exclaimed, holding out her hand.

Juan's every deliberate movement was an insult, as he slowly crossed the cell, stood for a moment looking at her hand, then lifted it to his lips and barely touched it, as if it were repulsive to him.

He dropped her hand and glanced up at her, as if to ask what else she commanded him to do.

Her voice trembled when she spoke. "Your rashness has cost you dear, Don Juan!" she exclaimed.

A mocking smile drifted across his face.

She hesitated a moment before she spoke again. Then, as if she had only that moment thought of it, she said:

"Your freedom shall be a gift from me, if you are capable of an equal generosity."

Juan smiled again, shrugged his shoulders, answered her in mock humility.

"Generosity has never been a trait of mine, my lady," he replied.

Lucretia stared at him in amazement, not believing that she had heard aright. For a moment incredulity held her anger in leash; she looked at him blankly.

Could it be possible that he was refusing her even before he knew what she asked?

"You—would refuse?" she asked, almost bewildered. "I am offering you your life. Think what that means! To go out again into the world, to have whatever you wish—whatever you wish," she repeated slowly, knowing that he would understand.

Juan smiled, wearily. Whatever he wished! If she could have given back his faith in Adriana, could have restored to him the ecstasy of the moments he had spent with her in the little garden beside the church, that would have meant something. But now—no, there was nothing she could give him that would be worth having.

Curious, when so often he had faced death and defied it, that now, when he sought it, it eluded him!

She stood looking at him as if she had never seen him before. She was asking herself what had happened to him; how could he have changed so completely? The old mockery was there, yet was merely a trace of what it had been. He seemed like a man who lived, yet was not alive, a man whom nothing could touch, no happiness or wretchedness or pain or fear, not love itself.

Not love itself? Perhaps there was still one arrow left in her quiver, one thing left with which to goad him.

Her clenched hands beat against each other, helplessly. She turned away from him, as if to leave, then turned back again, dragged back against her will, against her pride. All her training urged her to abandon him to his fate, but all her love bade her stay and sue for his favor.

Juan watched her indifferently. Ordinarily he would have been amused at her abject pleading for kindness from him, but now he could only wish wearily that she would go away and leave him.

She spoke at last, almost viciously.

"When you are led to the block at midnight you will regret this insult to a Borgia!" she told him, bitterly.

"But I shall preserve my self-respect," he reminded her. Had she but known how like a dead man he felt, he told himself, surely she would not have bothered to come to him in this way.

"Yes, your self respect," she said, slowly. "And no doubt the daughter of the Duke della Varanese, who is at this moment being tortured by my good Neri in another cell of this prison, keeps her self respect as well."

Juan's mouth twisted contemptuously.

"Think you that I believe that lie?" he retorted, almost amused. "Am I a child, to let you tease me so witlessly?"

"I tell you it is true! I tell you that even now she is suffering such torture as she never dreamt could be!"

"And even granting that is so, what is it to me?" he asked over his shoulder. "Do you not know that—that—"

But he could not finish the sentence. His love for Adriana, despite his frantic attempts to tear it from his heart, still persisted. Adriana—her lovely, pale face, her great dark eyes, her exquisite mouth—Adriana suffering!

"Do you not know that many women have suffered because of me?" he demanded, turning to face her. "You yourself—you have endured enough on that account to know that it is true. You have had many companions."

He wondered why even the possibility that what she said about Adriana was true, did not stir him to instant action. Of course, Adriana was faithless, had not really cared for him, was like all other women—yet he loved her, still loved her. But now his only thoughts was of death, his only desire was to die. He felt incapable of making any effort.

She turned away, realizing that if she stayed longer all semblance of dignity would be torn from her by her emotions. Impatiently she called the keeper; he came running, and briefly she gave him an order—the order for Juan's execution.

But even when that had been done, she turned to look once more at Juan, hopeful that he would show some sign of relenting. Seemingly he had forgotten her presence in the cell. She moved away then, her head held high; the door clanged behind her.

Juan went back to the narrow, high window, stood looking up at the sky.

As he stood there a scrawny arm reached across the thin rectangle of light, holding a bit of parchment. Juan could hardly believe that it was actually there at first; then, as the hand seemed to beckon him, he began trying to reach it.

Advise Women

to discard old hygienic methods and retain freshness every day

LARGELY on medical advice, women are abandoning the old-time "sanitary-pad" for a new way that supplants uncertainty with positive protection.

Sheer frocks and ill-timed social engagements no longer remain as worries. Lost days are fewer, and health better.

It is called "KOTEX." Ends the insecurity of the old time sanitary pad. Five times as absorbent! And deodorizes—ends ALL fear of offending.

As easily disposed of as a piece of tissue. No laundry. No embarrassment.

You get it at any drug or department store simply by saying "KOTEX." You ask for it without hesitancy.

Costs only a few cents. 8 in 10 better class women employ it. Proves the folly of old ways.

No laundry—discard like tissue

WHO MADE IT RAIN?

HARBIN, Manchuria, Sept. 29. Certain parts of Manchuria were threatened by drought recently and the population turned to priests of three different faiths for relief. On an appointed day Chinese farmers prayed to Budda, Russian priests of the Greek orthodox church prayed in their churches, and in the temples of the Chinese gods others offered their supplications. It rained the next day, and priests of all three faiths are claiming credit for it.

Mrs. Matchett and Miss Muriel Matchett attended Lindsay Fair on Friday afternoon.

Ralph Staples was a visitor to Lindsay on Friday.

H. Murney threshed in Cavan Centre last week, closing down on Wednesday at noon to allow the farmers to get in the rest of the harvest which was out. There were a few not quite finished.

The wet weather is proving a serious handicap to farmers in their work and it is likely that any grain now out will be deteriorated both in straw and grain.

Messrs. Will Swain and Emery Smith won prizes in stock judging in the junior farmers' stock judging contests at Peterborough and Toronto Exhibitions.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Kennedy motored to Lindsay on Friday and attended the Exhibition.

Miss Maude Moore had the misfortune to break her left arm in two places above the wrist. The arm is progressing nicely and causing little pain.

Mr. Harry Laing and family motored to Lindsay on Friday afternoon and attended Lindsay Fair.

Miss Olive Smith visited friends in Lindsay on Thursday and Friday and attended the Fair.

Mrs. Sharpe has been the guest of Mrs. Wm. Tinney.

Mr. and Mrs. S. Fisher, Peterborough, with their sister, Miss Kelly, motored to Toronto on Saturday and visited friends in Aurora and Brampton, returning on Monday.

At the North Cavan Rural Fair, held at Ida, Monday, September 20th, "Matchett's School" or S. S. No. 7 won the silver cup given for efficiency in rural school work. This cup, given to the school winning the greatest number of points per pupil, has been won by this school for three years in succession. It now becomes their permanent property.

The Rev. J. O. and Mrs. Totten attended the Harvest Home festival at the parsonage at Fraserville on Tuesday evening. Mr. Totten sang.

Mr. and Mrs. Wes. Williamson and Mr. Cully motored to Lindsay on Saturday and spent the week end visiting friends in the district, also visiting the Kent Gardens, Port Perry.

Rally Day.

Rally Day was observed in a fitting manner at Cavan United church on Sunday afternoon.

All the Sunday schools of the circuit had been invited to join in the service. There was a good attendance. The regular Rally Day programme was followed. The Rev. J. O. and Mrs. Totten sang, to the enjoyment of all. Dr. Middleton, Peterborough, gave an able address on "Influence."

UNIVERSITY ECONOMISTS HOLD DIFFERENT VIEWS ON FORD PLAN BOTH APPROVED AND CONDEMNED

If People Are Offered Incentive They Will Work Harder.

MISUSE EXTRA DAY.

Believes Effect Will Increase Output Through High Pressure Production.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Sept. 30. — United Press. — Harvard University economist have turned to Henry Ford's announcement of the institution of a five day week in his automobile plants as one of the interesting recent developments in the field of economics.

While the general tendency among the economists is to withhold judgment while they stand by and watch the working of the plan in practice, Prof. William Ripley, one of the most famous economists, pointed out that "Mr. Ford is a practical man," and opined that: "If people are offered an incentive it stands to reason they will work all the harder."

Impractical.

Prof. Thomas Nixon Carver believed Ford's plan impractical while Prof. E. Monroe said the Ford industries were not typical.

"Perhaps it will work out all right" Carver asserted. "Its ultimate results cannot of course be determined at this time. Mr. Ford believes that the five-day week will have the effect of increasing the output of his plants through high pressure production during the five working days. It seems to me that the effect will be just the opposite.

"If a manufacturer wishes to cut down his output, I think the institution of a five day week would be a good way of accomplishing it. It stands to reason I think that a worker five days as in six. Of course even at present the working week of five and a half days is quite general.

Sign of Decadence.

"The multiplication of holidays is always a sign of decadence in any country. History shows this to be true. There is a current tendency, a rather marked one, towards reducing the time of employment, but I cannot see how this tendency is going to have a desirable effect on industry.

"What Mr. Ford's employees will do with the extra time allotted them under the five day week plan is another question. It is difficult to strike an average and say to what purpose this new freedom will be put. Some workers probably will use the new holiday to good advantage. But others won't."

Prof. William Z. Ripley did not care to discuss Ford's plan at length but admitted that it interested him. "You ask me whether or not I think it is practical?" he said; "Well, Mr. Ford is a practical man. If people are offered an incentive it stands to reason that they will work all the harder."

BAND CONDUCTOR.

WM. PEARSON, A.L.C.M.

Director of the 40th Regimental Band and organist and choirmaster of St. Andrew's Church, Campbellford. Mr. Pearson was organist at the Royal National Hospital for Consumptives, the largest of its kind in England, and for eleven years presided at the organ of St. Catharines Church, Ventor, Isle of Wight.

His experience in Canada includes the directorship of the 1st Western Ontario Regiment Band of London, (Ont.), and of the 98th of Welland. He went overseas with the 186th Regimental Band of Chatham, Kent County, after winning second prize in the competition for bands at Camp Borden in 1916. The Campbellford Band has made substantial progress under his teaching and and directing this year and its programme will be a feature of the Campbellford Fair on Friday, October 1st.

French Trooper Slays German Civilian In Quarrel at Treves.

SECOND IN WEEK.

GERMERSHEIM, Germany, Sept. 30. — Canadian Press.—Popular feeling against the French troops of occupation aroused by the killing of a German civilian here last Monday, was increased to-day by the news that another German had been killed by a French trooper at Treves, near the Luxembourg border.

An official German report of the incident says that four French cyclist troopers rode into a group of German pedestrians. An argument ensued, during which one of the French men, allegedly without provocation, killed a German named Holstein.

The Frenchman was arrested.

Valuable Fox Is Captured Following Pursuit By Train

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont., Sept. 30.—Engineer Jack Goatbee is the champion fox catcher on the Algoma Central Railway. Goatbee takes them on the run. Yesterday, leaning from the cow-catcher of his engine, he swept into his grasp a valuable silver-grey fox which had become panic-stricken with the engine on its heels and refused to leave its course between the rails.

Two weeks ago, under similar conditions, Goatbee effected, he claims, the capture of an ordinary red fox.

The silver-grey taken yesterday was left in the care of a Sault neighbor, but promptly broke loose and is still at large. A $3,000 black fox belonging to Mrs. W. Wilson of Hayden, and which escaped from a show tent here one night recently, is also sought for at the present time.

CHAMBERLAIN AND MUSSOLINI MEET ON YACHT

Statesmen Hold Private Conversation Without Announcing Subject.

MEET CORDIALLY.

Two Parties Exchange Felicitations—British Flag Flown.

LEGHORN, Italy, September 30.—Canadian Press. — Premier Mussolini received Sir Austen Chamberlain, the British Foreign Secretary, aboard the yacht Giuliana, in the harbor here to-day, for their much discussed conference, the subject of which was kept secret up to the hour of meeting.

Mussolini, travelling in the strictest incognito, left Rome last night on a special train. He spent the night at Vada, a small station 20 miles from here, and arrived in Leghorn this morning.

The Premier and his suite were driven in autos from the railway station to the port where they boarded a motor boat and were taken to the Giuliana, a former Turkish yacht captured during the war.

Premier Mussolini received Sir Austen at the gangway. They clasped hands warmly, exchanging felicitations.

After introducing the members of their suites, they retired for a private conversation.

Premier Mussolini sent a beautiful basket of orchids to Lady Chamberlain, accompanied by a note written in English, in which he presented his most devoted homage.

Sir Austen, his wife and son took lunch aboard the Guiliana as guests of the Italian Premier. The British flag was hoisted and Mussolini received the guests at the gangway, kissing Lady Chamberlain's hand as she came aboard. The British National Anthem was played both on the arrival and departure of Sir Austen.

As the two statesmen bid each other good-bye, they expressed the hope that they would soon meet again.

MINERS' DEFEAT IS SEEN BY COOK

Return To Work By Many Men Mentioned By Leader.

URGES COURAGE.

LONDON, Sept. 30. United Press. —Defeat of the English coal miners in the five months old strike for higher wages and shorter working days, was considered in a speech made by A. J. Cook, secretary of the Miners' Federation.

"We must be courageous in retreat," said Cook, following the announcement that 11,750 miners had returned to work on Wednesday, bringing the total number of men returned up to 149,250. "I wish I could say that there is no retreat, but hunger is forcing the men to return, in some districts—beaten."

Despite his admission Cook urged the miners to remain adamant until they had secured a settlement. "The government tricked us into making humiliating proposals and then rejected them, believing that starvation had beaten us,' said Cook. "If we are defeated it will be by our own men who return to work. The government has offered us terms on which to surrender. We answer No, 'we refuse to surrender to slavery.' I shall refuse to sign any agreemnet prescribing longer hours."

TYPHOON TOLL PLACED AT 2,000

About 130 Chinese Vessels Lost in Storm of Macao.

HONG KONG, September 30. — Canadian Press—It is feared that 130 fishing junks, with about 2000 persons aboard, including women and children, were lost in the waters around the Portuguese colony of Macao in Monday's typhoon.

The fury of the storm is evidenced by the masses of wreckage floating in the coast waters south of Hong Kong.

The British steamer Hydrangea observed many fisherfolk clinging to the wreckage and calling for help.

Despite a bad sea the Hydrangea's life boats rescued 35 persons.

HALIFAX BOARD WANTS SAILINGS TO WEST INDIES

Ottawa Urged to Renew Fortnightly Steamship Service to Islands.

EXTEND CONTRACT

Board of Trade State Some Will Be Entirely Cut Off.

HALIFAX, N.S., Sept. 30.—That immediate steps should be taken by the department of trade and commerce to re-establish the fortnightly steamship service between Halifax, St. John and the British West Indies and British Guiana, was the gist of a resolution passed by the council of the local board of trade yesterday.

It was pointed out that unless the Dominion government takes some early action regarding this service, there will be only one sailing a month to the West Indies, which means some of the islands will be entirely cut off from Canada.

Last Sailing.

The Royal Mail Steam Packet line, which has been operating two ships since the subsidy contract, under which they did business for a number of years, expired early in the season, has notified the board of trade that the sailing of the Chaleur, of their fleet, from Halifax, October 8, will be the last sailing.

The board of trade will request the federal authorities to extend the agreement with the Royal Mail Steam Packet line, so that their ships may be kept on the route until such time as it will be possible to put into effect the terms of the recent Canada-West Indies treaty.

Special Guards Watching Thomas McCoskey, Sentenced to be Hanged.

HAS TWO CELLS

KINGSTON, Ont., Sept. 30. —Thomas McCoskey, sentenced to be hanged for the murder of Guard Jenkins is being closely guarded at the penitentiary as it is feared he will commit suicide. There is a special guard on him. Two cells are used for him, one to remain in during the day and the other for sleeping at night.

German Returns Silverware He Stole Invading France

PARIS, Sept. 30.—The Mayor of Ham in the North of France has received a parcel of silver knives, forks and spoons from Altona, Germany, accompanied by a letter stating that the sender obtained them by looting in 1914 when invading France with the German army.

The writer added that he was now stricken with regret and shame and hoped the Mayor would deliver the objects to the owner together with his sincere expression of contrition for the theft.

So far it has been impossible to trace the owner of the silver.

HONOR TO LADY FAIR FEATURE

Girl Selling Most Tickets to be "Queen of Peterborough."

IMPORTANT EVENT

One of the big features about the Produced-in-Canada Exhibition to be presented by the Peterborough Kiwanis Club in the Armouries during the week 11 to 16, is the coronation of the "Queen of Peterborough". This honor will go to the young lady selling the most tickets in the ticket selling campaign now going on.

An indication of the importance of this event is the fact that a news picture film service is sending an operator to Peterborough especially to film this coronation ceremony for the news reel.

The "Queen of Peterborough" will be entertained lavishly throughout the day as the guest of the Kiwanis Club, and many merchants are co-operating to give her a good time. Through the courtesy of C. G. Graham, a suite of rooms will be set apart in the Empress Hotel for the use of the "Queen" and she will be entertained to luncheon in the main dining room of the hotel. During the morning she will shop in several stores and will have her hair dressed in one of the best hair-establishments. Two automobiles will await her pleasure alternately and after luncheon she will be taken to civic institutions and to visit the children in the shelters to whom she will take favors.

The exact time for the coronation has not been fixed but it is probable that the ceremony will take place in day time and out of doors to facilitate the taking of movies. This promises to be one of the big features of the exhibition and is encouraging the young ladies in the contest to greater effort than has ever been found in a similar competition before.

CASE OF STATE AGAINST PASTOR MUCH WEAKENED

Former Radio Operator Will Reveal Identity of Miss "X."

FOREMAN ON STAND.

Read Evidence of Mrs. McPherson's Story Before Grand Jury.

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 30 (United Press)—Aimee Semple McPherson was in a joyous mood yesterday as she faced the third day of her preliminary hearing on charges of conspiracy to defeat justice.

"They have called on the carpenter, the grocer, the laundryman and the messenger boy to identify me as the woman who occupied that horrid cottage at Carmel — but their plans have failed," she said yesterday. "I expect they will subpoena the iceman and the milkman next."

The evangelist was referring to Tuesday's session of court, when none of six state witnesses was able to identify her definitely as the woman who occupied a bungalow at Carmel-by-the-Sea, last May, with Kenneth G. Ormiston, former radio man at Angelus temple.

Threatening Letter

But the melodramatic atmosphere that has characterized the case since an investigation of Mrs. McPherson's startling story was begun, increased last night and overshadowed yesterday's testimony, when Dennis Collins, said to be an important prosecution witness, informed Keyes that he had received a threatening letter.

Keyes ordered all witnesses removed from a hotel in the heart of the city to secret quarters as a result of the letter. The missive, which was not made public, was said to be the second received by Collins.

Cross-examination secured the first points in Mrs. McPherson's favor, when her attorneys wrung from William McMichael, a brick mason, who worked next door to the love cottage an admission that he could not identify Mrs. McPherson as the woman he saw at the cottage. McMichael was expected to be a strong witness for the state.

Jesse Lynch Williams, a messenger boy, also failed to recognize the evangelist as the occupant of the cottage.

Ormiston's New Move

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 30—Kenneth G. Ormiston, missing radio man and one of the seven persons charged with conspiracy to obstruct justice in the Aimee Semple McPherson case, plans another move in an effort to clear the evangelist

Smokes While Cleaning Gas Tank—Loses Eye

KINGSTON, Ont., Sept. 30. —J. McCrimmon of Sharbot Lake was seriously injured yesterday when he undertook to clean a gasoline tank of an automobile while smoking. Fumes from the tank ignited and caused an explosion, and so badly burned the young man that it is believed he will lose the sight of one of his eyes. He was brought to the General Hospital at Kingston.

FILL VACANCIES IN COMMISSION MAKING PROBE

Justice J. T. Brown and Judge W. H. Wright Receive Appointments.

SITTINGS SOON

Ontario Border Points Will Be Visited During Inquiry.

OTTAWA, Ont., Sept. 30.—(Canadian Press.)—Resumption of sittings of the Royal Commission investigating administration of the Department of Customs is expected soon. The Commission has been enlarged by the appointment of Chief Justice J. T. Brown, of the Court of King's Bench, Saskatchewan, and of Judge William H. Wright, of the High Court Division, Ontario Supreme Court. Official announcement of the appointments was made last night. It is probable that the new commissioners will meet Sir Francois Lemieux, chairman of the Commission, in the near future to draw up an itinerary of sittings to be held. Hon. H. W. Rowell will be counsel for the Commission, with R. L. Calder, K.C., who acted as counsel for the Parliamentary committee which investigated the Customs Department during the last session.

Sir Francois Lemieux has already visited the provinces of New Brunswick and Nova Scotia so it is considered probable that the Commission will either proceed to the Pacific Coast and work east, holding sittings at points along the way, or else visit Prince Edward Island. It is the intention to hold sittings in every province of the Dominion, and there will also be sessions at a number of border points in Ontario.

As indicated by Premier King, the Commission, in addition to investigating the matters originally referred to it, will also inquire into the operation of the anti-smuggling treaty between Canada and the United States which was passed in the summer of 1924.

PREHISTORIC TYPE OF FISH IS CAUGHT

Alligator Gar Taken From Ohio River at Evansville.

CINCINNATI, Sept. 30.—Valentine Rheinlander, a fisherman in the Ohio River at Evansville, Indiana, caught a specimen of the only existing fresh-water prehistoric fish known to naturalists as the alligator gar, which has been deposited in the Natural History Museum of Cincinnati.

Charles Drury, naturalist, verified the fish's long ancestry.

"It is a connecting link and the last fresh-water survivor of a group of gar-like fish which otherwise became extinct in prehistoric times," he said.

"It's length is five feet two inches, and it weighed 125 pounds when caught. It is completely armored with diamond-shaped plates of bone on top and below. These plates are in places of ordinary scales and are so hard that they might deflect even a rifle bullet.

Find Cave-In Victims "Alive and Well" After Five Days.

DRANK BARK TEA

Food and Carbide Lights Enroute to Starved Men.

IRONWOOD, Mich., Sept. 30 (Canadian Press).—Forty-three imprisoned and starved miners were found "alive and well" yesterday half a mile from the earth's surface in the G. Pabst iron mine, where they had been imprisoned five days. A plea for light greeted rescue workers who crossed a shaky 30 foot "cat walk" and penetrated the prison of the men. The miners reported they had subsisted on birch-bark tea which they made in their lunch buckets over the fire of their miners' lamps.

Sirens and horns of the town sounded the hopeful note which thousands waited for since noon last Friday when a cage dropped in a shaft, loosening tons of rocks and earth, killing three men outright and trapping the 43 miners on the eighth level of the mine almost a half mile from the surface.

Shortly before noon miners and rescue workers from Chicago worked their way up to the eighth level from another level almost a mile from the earth's surface, and found ladders extending to the eighth level in fair condition. They threw rails and power lines across a thirty foot chasm and with the daring of tight-rope walkers, skipped across to the hole of imprisoned men, to be greeted by Tom Trewartha, a sturdy mine boss, who reported all hands well.

FRENCH VESSEL AIDS FISHERMEN

Finds Why Schools of Sardines Have Left Shores.

NEW LOBSTER BED.

BOULOGNE, France, Sept. 30.—(United Press)—The French Marine research vessel, La Tanche, has just found out why sardines leave home.

The problem had been bothering French fishermen and sardine packers for several years, for the canneries have been threatened with closing down because the tiny fish no longer move in great schools along the French coast. The research works found that the cold currents have come into the once rich sardine fields and have driven them farther out to sea, where the French fishing fleet, at greater risk, is now hauling them in by nets-full.

The Government vessel also charted hitherto unknown fishing grounds in the North Sea and off the Irish coast, once considered barren and dangerous because covered with coral, but now known to be the breeding ground of the choicest lobsters.

School Parade.

The Fair opened in the afternoon with a competitive parade by the children of three schools, with decorated floats and other bright features. The first prize of $20 went to S.S. No. 13, Rawdon (Harold) and second prize of $15 to S.S. No. 6, Sine School.

Prize Menu Cards.

A menu card contest was a unique contest, obviously designed to educate people in modern diets. The cards were required to set forth daily meals for children of public school age, matter and form counting, the former being the more important. The prizes donated by Doctors Walt and Guthridge were won as follows: 1 Gena Spry; 2 Mrs. M. Vandervoort; 3 Mrs. Chas. Vance.

Knowledge of such elements as vitamins, whole wheat bread, milk, leafy vegetables, calories and so on was tested by this competition.

The Baby Show.

The mothers of the babies that were awarded the prizes in this educational feature were:

1 Mrs. E. Sandercock, Stirling; 2 Mrs. Conley; 3 Mrs. Kennedy, Marmora; 4 Mrs. Tracy, Roslin.

The judges were Dr. Dales of Tweed, Dr. Welsh of Roslin, and the nurse, Miss Martin of Trenton.

Ringing the Ducks.

The hot dog gentlemen were as articulate and redolent and incidentally as busy as usual. They were more numerous, apparently, and the clamor for the nickels and dimes was keen. Arrangements have been made for a midway next year, Dr. Sine, the secretary, told The Examiner.

Among the games on the grounds was a new one, employing live white ducks. They were waddling around in a shallow pan of water, and their owner was selling small, light wooden hoops, such as women use for fancy work, and any person throwing a hoop over a duck's head won the duck. So alert and quick were the ducks that only a couple of them were captured during the whole afternoon.

ART GALLERY IS FAIR ATTRACTION

Many Unique Features Will be Included in Exhibition.

An Art Gallery will be one of the attractions at the Produced-in-Canada Exhibition planned by the Kiwanis Club and this will display many unique features. Attractive catalogues are being printed and in order to encourage art the admission is being set at a very low figure. There will also be an exhibition of war trophies in connection with the art exhibit.

Lift out Corns—root and all

Cutting corns, or using a so-called corn solvent is useless. You have probably tried and know yourself how the corn comes back again painful as ever in a week or less. The only satisfactory way to deal with an obstinate corn is to take a Radox Foot Bath once or twice: YOU CAN LIFT THE WHOLE CORN OUT WITH YOUR FINGERS.

How Radox Bath Salts Remove Corns

When you put your feet into a foot-bath containing Radox, the salts soften the hard outer layers of the corn and the dead skin (of the corn) combines with the Radox Bath Salts to form a protein salt of the actual corn itself. This dissolves in the water and so loosens the corn that it can be lifted out bodily.

The Radox Bath Salt does not attack the living skin; it softens and refreshes this; it cannot dissolve it. It is only the dead skin—the corn—which it dissolves.

There is nothing left to ache; the corn is bodily removed and the feet are left clean and healthy.

A Radox enthusiast writes:—

"My wife tried plasters, salves, salts and soda to try and move her corn, which has nearly driven her mad the last three months; but they moved neither the corn nor the pain. We saw an advertisement showing a corn being pulled out. We sent for the Radox Bath Salts at 6 o'clock, and at twenty minutes to seven my wife was pulling the corn out, after years of agony. It is worth $20 a package."

CUTICURA HEALS ECZEMA IN RASH

On Scalp, Later on Limbs. Caused Much Suffering.

"I had eczema which made its appearance on my scalp in a rash. It itched terribly and when I scratched it, blisters broke out. Later the eczema broke out on my limbs, which were badly swollen and very red. It kept me awake at night and caused much pain and suffering. When I washed or went near the hot stove it was very painful.

"I read an advertisement for Cuticura Soap and Ointment and sent for a free sample. I purchased more and in two or three months I was completely healed." (Signed) Mrs. Emma C. Gibson, R. 1, Box 71, Island Pond, Vt., Oct. 26, 1925.

CASE OF STATE

in the Carmel cottage phase of the case, said a letter from him received yesterday by Roland Rich Wooley, attorney for Mrs. McPherson.

The letter was forwarded through Edward H. S. Martin, Chicago attorney, and was signed by typewriter. Ormiston said he would reveal the identity of the mysterious "Miss X" who occupied the Carmel cottage with him for ten days beginning May 19. He added that a new affidavit to be sent the Los Angeles attorney will detail his movements and the movements of "Miss X" prior to May 19 and after May 29. The letter was postmarked Chicago, and although neeessarily sent several days ago, was dated September 28.

Near Collapse

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 30 (Associated Press)—Aimee Semple McPherson's testimony before the grand jury last July when she told them her story of having been kidnapped from the beach and held for ransom was read into evidence from the transcript here yesterday in municipal court.

The evangelist's testimony did not differ materially from the story she gave the press at the time she reappeared at Douglas, Ariz., June 23.

Reading of the transcript consumed most of the morning session of the evangelist's preliminary hearing on charges of criminal conspiracy.

William H. Carter, foreman of the 1926 county grand jury, which was discharged for alleged irregularities in connection with the McPherson investigation, was on the stand for a few minutes and his testimony laid the foundation for introduction of the transcript.

A recess was ordered in the hearing when Mrs. Minnie Kennedy the evangelist's mother, co-defendant appeared on the verge of collapse.

Bethany Sunday School Observes Annual Opening Gathering.

BETHANY, Sept. 30.—The Sunday School of the United Church held their annual rally service on Sunday evening in connection with the regular service.

The church, which was tastefully decorated with asters and ferns, was well filled when at seven o'clock the scholars marched in a body from the school room to the auditorium of the church and took the front seats which had been reserved for them. "Rallying for Service" was the subject around which the programme centred. After the orchestra had played the opening music, the school joined in the invocation. Then the responsive reading was led by the superintendent, A. H. Monk. A short recitation, "My Life," was given by Evelyn Bigelow; then an exercise for four boys entitled "Sharing" was given by Karl Monk, Harold Jackson, Stewart Thompson and Mervyn Porteous. Beatrice Darroch recited from memory the 13th Chapter of 1st Corinthians. The chorus by the choir of children entitled "In Early Youth," was well rendered and very appropriate for the subject "Rallying for Service on which Rev. Mr. Poulter, pastor of the Church spoke.

He took the word Service, using each letter as the beginning of a word around which he based his address:

Self,
Early,
Readily,
Valiantly,
Intelligently,
Conscientiously, and Enthusiastically,

were the words used.

Mr. Poulter's address was of unusual interest and was carefully listened to by the children of the school.

The collection taken at the service will be used for the extension fund of Young People's work throughout Canada.

MINERS WILL BE RESCUED

Rescue workers tapped a signal on an iron pipe shortly before they reached the men, receiving a signal in reply.

George Hawes, asistant director of safety of the Pullman Company of Chicago, who formerly worked here and who volunteered for rescue work, was the first across the "cat walk," and was greeted by Trewartha, who grasped his hand.

"How are you?" Hawes asked.

"We are all O.K. Forty-three men all right. We lived on tea made from birch bark."

Hawes shouted the news to his companions, who hurried to an outer shaft and reported the men "alive and well."

Shortly thereafter food and carbide lights were en route to the men, while preparations on the surface were made to remove them to hospitals for treatment and to relieve them of their damp and soggy clothing.

Soup, coffee, cigarettes, chewing tobacco and fuel for their lamps comprised the first load of relief supplies.

Hundreds of anxious relatives and rescue workers on the surface were overjoyed when rescue workers reported the men were "alive and well."

Some cried and wept for joy, while others rushed to their homes and prayed in thanksgiving. Rescue workers dropped their tools in other shafts and smiled grimly and sank to cots to rest, thankful that their efforts had not been in vain, and in knowing they had carried out the miners' code—"Never abandon hope."

Wife and Husband Both Ill With Gas

NEED PATIENTS.

EISENACH, Germany, Sept. 30.—The most important problem before the recent conference of the Hartmanbund (Association of German Physicians) was that of the proper distribution of doctors. It was learned that many of the younger doctors were idle, while older men had more practice than they could handle. A plan of distribution is being worked out.

Easy to Gain With Yeast and Iron

New Combination of Yeast with Vegetable Iron Quick Way to Build Up Weight

This new combination of yeast vitamines with vegetable iron, renews the action of sluggish blood cells, drives out dangerous body poisons, increases energy and endurance and supplies the system with vitamines that build up weight.

For years yeast has been known as a rich vitamine food; but not until we perfected "ironized yeast" — which comes in concentrated tablet form, was it possible to take yeast and iron in the right proportions to build up weight.

Vegetable "Iron" when combined with yeast is quite easy to digest, therefore better for the system. And "yeast" when ironized, becomes just twice as beneficial as ordinary fresh or cake yeast.

Ironized Yeast Tablets are composed of concentrated food elements, therefore, they are pleasant to take and free from drug-like effects. If you are under weight, do not enjoy good health, lacking in energy and force, "ironized yeast" tablets will pick you righ: up, and if they fail, you get your money back.

Sold by druggists at $1.00 for a large 60-tablet package or sent direct from laboratory on receipt of price. Ironized Yeast Co., Fort Erie, Ontario, Canada.

AGED COUPLE KILLED IN CAR

Apparently Deliberately Passed Other Cars Stopped For Train.

DROVE ON TRACK.

COOKSVILLE, Ont., Sept. 30.—(Canadian Press).—When the closed car in which they were riding was struck by the Canadian Pacific Railway's Chicago flyer last night, Charles Gifford, 70, and his wife, Fannie, 60, of Buffalo, N.Y., were instantly killed. The automobile, according to witnesses, appeared to pass deliberately two other cars which had stopped because of the approaching train at the level crossing. When struck by the train the car was thrown into the ditch, where it took fire. Gifford was picked up on the road, but his wife had to be extricated from the wrecked car.

Identification of the bodies was not made until early this morning.

Mrs. Gifford had many bones in her body crushed and broken, while a large piece of glass from the windshield had severed an artery in her neck. Gifford was evidently thrown from the car by the impact, and was badly cut about the head.

The bodies were taken to Port Credit, Ont.

Sleep that Rests and Refreshes

"Tired Nature's sweet restorer"

ONLY during the relaxation of sleep, can Nature rebuild the brain and body tissues which have been used up in the activities of the day. Often, unfortunately, when we go to bed, our nerves stay up; and sleep does us little good.

"Ovaltine" taken at night soothes and restores the nerves and promotes restful sleep.

"Ovaltine" is the greatest health-giving beverage in the world—abundantly rich in the vitalizing and energizing elements from Nature's tonic foods—ripe barley malt, rich creamy milk, fresh eggs, and flavoured with cocoa. One cup of this delicious beverage contains more nourishment than 12 cups of beef tea or 3 eggs.

Take a cup of "Ovaltine" every night before retiring, and see how refreshed and invigorated you will feel next morning.

PROPORTIONAL REPRESENTATION.

Advocates of proportional representation are finding much material in support of their contentions in a study of the returns in the recent Federal elections.

They point out that though thousands of Liberals in Toronto and Eastern Ontario voted on the 14th, they are without a member in Parliament.

Similarly, although the Conservatives in Winnipeg polled a greater total throughout the city than either Liberals or Labour, they did not elect a member.

In British Columbia the big Liberal vote throughout the Province netted but one representative, and on the other hand, although the total Conservative voting strength in the three Prairie Provinces was considerable, only one Conservative candidate was elected in the whole three Provinces.

These results undoubtedly afford some food for thought.

THE ONTARIO SITUATION.

The Examiner is accused by "Old Reader" in a letter published in this issue of being inconsistent in trying to secure from Premier Ferguson a statement in regard to the Provincial election, while we are "always hollering against elections."

The Examiner has no particular objection to elections when they are necessary, nor are we endeavouring to force one in Ontario just now.

An announcement of the Government's intention that would clear away the present uncertainty is all that is being sought.

Mr. Ferguson has had plenty of time to decide upon a policy, and the people of Ontario have a right to know what that policy is and to know, too, whether or not they are to expect a Provincial election before the snow flies.

The Premier is a law unto himself.

Even private members of the Government are apparently in the dark as to his intentions.

No one save Mr. Ferguson seems to know whether the Government policy is to be dry, moist or wet.

No one save Mr. Ferguson seems to know whether there will be a general election or merely a series of by-elections to fill the present vacancies.

And it is time everybody knew.

NO BY-ELECTIONS WANTED.

It is not believed there will be any opposition offered to the return of the members of Mr. King's Cabinet.

The Canadian people everywhere are in favour of giving the new administration a chance to get to work immediately, and there will be a strong feeling of resentment if any short-sighted attempt to embarrass the Government is made.

In fact, the concensus of opinion among Canadians is that this system of requiring Cabinet Ministers to go back to their constituencies for endorsement is obsolete.

When members are elected to Parliament the fact that they may be called upon to accept Cabinet appointments should be recognized.

In the case of elected members selected for promotion, it is ridiculous that they should be compelled to contest a by-election, and the system, if possible, should be scrapped as unnecessary.

Progress along that line is being made in Great Britain, and the Ontario Government is also moving to do away with superfluous elections in this Province.

There may have been a need for a safeguard of this nature in earlier days, but it no longer exists.

SELECTING CABINETS.

Referring to the new Canadian Cabinet, an American newspaper points out that Cabinet-making in this country is made more difficult by the insistence of various elements in Canada upon ministerial representation.

There is much in that criticism.

When a Canadian Prime Minister starts to build up his executive board he finds himself up against a stone wall.

It is not always possible to select the strongest men for the various portfolios for the simple reason that all Provinces expect to have representation—and they get it as a rule.

It might happen that out of the elected members from one particular Province five or six men could be chosen who would be more fitted for Cabinet appointments than any others in the House, but owing to the necessity of dividing portfolios according to geographical and other considerations, these qualified members are quite likely to be passed over in favour of others not as capable.

The ideal method, of course, would be to select the strongest men regardless of what section of Canada they came from—but that course is impossible from a political, no matter how sensible it might be from a business, standpoint.

PENALIZING AN INDUSTRY.

(Manchester Union.)

The Union recently gave its readers a presentation in its news columns that should be read and pondered by all. Some of the enlightened financiers have decided that one of the greatest, if not the greatest, of the reasons for the country's failure to get on full ime industrially has been the lack of a proper reward for agricultural labor. These financiers do not propose subsidies, loans—facilities for loans already exist—nor anything in the line of that form of legislation which helps one industry or one section by doing corresponding harm to some other industry or section.

The farmer is overtaxed, say these men. The harder he works, the worse he is taxed. The more labor he puts into his holdings in making improvements, ore his taxes mount. The owner of a vacant t lets it stand and because it is unimproved se it produces no income, although its selling constantly enhances, its taxes remain low. T ner takes a piece of land which if unused wo a very low selling price and by hard work ma productive and up go his taxes. He is taxed muscle, brains, industriousness. Now and then native farmer, hurt by the constant injustice charge that native farmers do not get along as do foreign-born farmers, asks the public to that the native inclines to keep his place pain have his premises picked up. He may even out some neighboring farmer fresh from Europ onditions who keeps chickens in the house as we outbuildings. The painted house is taxed on nt and gets no rebate because no part of it is d to actual production as a shelter for farm cre . This is a luminous example of one way in w the farmer is penalized because he improves his Paint on the house gives him no revenue, but o his taxes, whereas hens inside that house ad to his taxes, but much to his revenue.

Everyhing farmer has is in sight and the more cows and he has, the higher his taxes go. Some sort of ad ent is to be sought by the new organization cal American Association of Scientific Taxation. one can or should be given favors in taxation, is generally acknowledged by thinking people the farmer is now the most heavily taxed mem the community, and that his present inability to the same reward for the amount of intellect al and industry applied in his calling that is wor he same equipment in other callings, is an outs g factor in the slowness of our industries and erce to win back the degree of prosperity they had in the past.

A CA AN ENVOY.

Premier King m the satisfactory announcement that his Governm intends to appoint a Canadian Minister to Was on. He announces, at the same time, that Hon. nt Massey, of Toronto, is to have the post. N mal appointment will be made, however, until t emier has had an opportunity to confer with th tish Government respecting the Canadian envo ties. Mr. Massey will probably be present at t eeting in London, at the time of the Imperial Co nce.

There is little likeli of any political discussion over the office itsel both major parties are committed to it. It is n possible, however, that Conservatives will take e ion to the naming of Mr. Massey. This would expected, however, no matter who the appointee h ned to be. As a matter of fact, the appointment Mr. Massey looks like an excellent one. Mr. Mas was born in Toronto in 1887 and is a member e Massey family of Massey-Harris fame. He w esident of the Massey-Harris Company from 1 to 1925. He was educated at St. Andrew's Coll Toronto University and at Oxford. During the he rendered outstanding service to the state held the rank of lieutenant-colonel. In Septem 1925, he was taken into the King Cabinet as a ister without Portfolio, but was defeated in the co uency of Durham. Mr. Massey is a trustee of the tional Gallery of Canada, a member of the Board Governors of the University of Toronto, Presiden the National Council of Education and active great variety of other enterprises.

Back in Sir Robert Borden me the idea of naming a Canadian envoy to Wa gton commenced to take definite shape, but for on eason or another no appointment has ever been ma It was pointed out in 1919 that business relatio between Canada and the United States had attain uch proportions that the naming of a strictly Cana official to represent this country in the Americ capital had become virtually a necessity. In pre s years negotiations between Canada and the tes were conducted through the British Embass In 1923, however, the King Government establi a precedent by having Hon. Ernest Lapointe, Minister of Marine and Fisheries, sign the com atively unimportant but now famous halibut fis es treaty on behalf of the Dominion of Canada. British Ambassador was not called in on this er. His signature did not appear on the treaty had always been the case before. Instead Mr. ointe acted as His Majesty's representative in beh of Canada. To this procedure Conservative spo men took strong exception in the House of Co ons and a "full dress" constitutional debate was result. It was on this occasion that Mr. Lapoin made one of the finest speeches of his career, fining the action of the Government and pointing Canada's right to negotiate directly for herself in tters that were of no concern to the Empire as a wh

Filling of the Washington post is a ep along the same lines. The office thus created an important one for Canada and a real honor omes to Mr. Massey in being the first to fill it. King, the Star believes, has acted wisely in chosing a young man for the position. If the post we to be nothing more than a comfortable berth for worn-out politicians it would be better—and much eaper—to let it go by the board. In the hands of young and vigorous man, however, it can be made produce real results. For one thing Canada needs o be put on the map of the United States and kept ere. A good envoy can do this. This country and it advantages are all too little known across the ne. Again, the trade relations of Canada and the Uited States are growing tremendously each year. Thre are many matters of mutual interest to be discussed from time to time. No matter how able the Briti Ambassador, no matter how excellent his intention, he cannot know and speak for Canada as one of ou own men would do. It is important, highly important that Canada have a spokesman in Washington—Border Cities Star.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

With the Made-in-Canada Exhibition announcing new features almost daily, the big Kiwanis event seems destined to score a tremendous success.

Fire Prevention Week should be made to mean something in every home in Peterboro.

There are nine ridings in Ontario where the sitting members can't be bothered by inquiries in regard to election dates. These particular ridings have no sitting members.

Re-counts are being held in a number of ridings, indicating that the Examiner was right when it remarked that a training school for deputy-returning officers may be needed.

A favourite pastime just now is selecting a new leader for the Conservative party. The Examiner prefers to leave that problem for somebody else.

CATTLE, GRAIN AND PRODUCE

Peterboro—Toronto—Montreal

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Sept. 30 (Canadian Press). — Activity buying together with waning of pressure to sell gave a decided life yesterday to the wheat market here. Signs pointed to probable nearly all-round scaling down of crop estimates in Europe. Closing quotations on wheat were strong, 1 5-8 to 2 3-8c net higher. Corn finished 7-8 to 2 1-4c up; oats showing 1-8 to 3-8c advance, and provisions varying from 10c decline to a rise of 37c.

Although corn prices were lower early, there was a subsequent rapid advance. The effect of moist weather over part of the corn belt was emphasized by a forecast of unsettled conditions and by crop damage news, especially from Missouri.

Provisions reflected the action of grain.

CHICAGO CATTLE

CHICAGO, Sept. 30 (Canadian Press).—Cattle 12,000; better grade steers and yearlings fairly active; strong to 25c higher; other slow; around steady; 1,330 pound averages $11.60; bulls weak to 15c lower; vealers sharply higher; few under $15.50.

Hogs 12,000; generally steady with Tuesday's best prices or 10 to 15c higher than average; top $13.80 paid for selected 225 pound averages; bulk desirable 170 to 260 pound weights $13.25 to $13.65; bulk 260 to 300 pound butchers $13 to $13.50; bulk desirable packing sows $11 to $12; heavies downward to $10.50; most slaughter pigs $11.25 to $12.

Sheep 25,000; fat lambs closing mostly steady with Tuesday; early strength lost; top westerns $13.85; bulk $13 to $13.50; top natives $13.60; bulk $13 to $13.50; sheep steady; bulk fat ewes $5 to $6.75.

STERLING EXCHANGE

MONTREAL, Sept. 30 (Canadian Press). — Sterling exchange rates were quoted here yesterday as follows:

Sterling demand $4.84.
Sterling cables $4.84 1-2.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Sept. 30 (Canadian Press).—The only export business transacted on the Montreal grain market yesterday was a few sales of odd loads of barley. The trade in cash grain on the domestic market showed no improvement but the undertone was firm.

A moderate amount of business was done in Spring wheat flour with exporters and local buyers and prices ruled steady. The tone of the winter wheat market was firm but the trade was inactive.

The volume of business done in millfeed was good and prices were well maintained. The movement of standard grades of rolled oats was fair and prices were unchanged.

The activity that has characterized the egg trade this week was again prominent yesterday and a fairly active business was done at unchanged values. The receipts were 562 cases.

A moderate amount of business was done in potatoes and the tone of the market was steady. Sales of car lots of New Brunswick Cobblers were made at $1.30 per bag, and Quebec White stock at $1.10 per bag of 90 pounds, ex-track.

The demand for beans was again of a limited character and prices were unchanged. Car lots of choice white hand-picked were quoted at $2.25 per bushel, and broken lots at $2.35 to $2.45 per bushel.

The butter market was without any special feature to note, business being quiet and prices unchanged. The receipts were 2,828 packages.

A feature of the cheese trade was the increased demand that developed from spot buyers and a moderate amount of business was done. Sales included several thousand boxes of Western September No. 1 white and colored at 17 3-4c per pound, and Eastern September grades at 17 1-4c per pound. The receipts were 4,122 boxes.

OLD READER.

PETERBORO TRANSPORTATION.

Sir: I am an English-born subject, have many friends throughout Canada, and respect Canada, but it makes me ashamed of my nationality the way my English friends and relatives use the Hydro service in this city. Its employees are connected with the International Union, which has helped our own countrymen in their recent strike, the railway department advancing more than $100,000.

It is time English people should show their appreciation by patronizing Union driven street cars and buses, which are owned and operated by the Ontario government, under the name of Hydro-Electric Corporation.

A CITIZEN.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Sir,—Will you allow me to say that the present conflict amongst Protestants regarding the Bible is founded on the fact that the old believers believe that God revealed Himself to man and that otherwise man could not know God and what the Creator requires of man if man is to receive from God the gift of eternal life. This revelation of Himself to man is set down in the Bible. Those who say that the Bible has many errors in it cannot possibly believe that it is the inspired word of God and they arrogate to themselves the right to say what true religions is. In other words religion is to depend for its authority, according to them, upon man and the meanings he chooses to read into or out of the Bible. Such a religion is not a revelation but a man-made religion and to a real believer is useless and responsible for the chaos in the world today. Strange to say, some of the new believers (Modernists) seem to think that all the institutions which the old believers helped to pay for and maintain should pass quietly out of the hands of the old believers into the possession and control of the modernists. From this idea arises the disturbances we read of.

RALLY AT WOOLER.

Large Attendance at Special Service in Sunday School.

WOOLER, Sept. 30.—The Sunday School Rally held on Sunday, Sept. 26th, was a record to be remembered for years to come. The quarterly review was conducted by the teachers in their own classes in the various class-rooms. Immediately at the close of the teaching and the distribution of Sunday School papers to nearly two hundred scholars, the Rally service continued up in the auditorium, following the order of service sent out by the United Church of Canada. After the invocation and singing the hymns, a recitation was given by one of the youngest members of the school, Lela Arthur; an exercise by four junior boys, Harry Richards, Arthur Putnam, John Ruttan, Harold Spencer; and Muriel McCall, aged eleven, recited the thirteenth chapter of First Corinthians. An address by the pastor, Rev. H. B. Neal, emphasized the "Supremacy of Childhood." The closing hymn, "Just As I Am, Thine Own To Be."

The church was beautifully decorated for the harvest home service, which was held in the evening. The pulpit was banked with gladioli, dahlias and asters, a profusion of quality and color. At the floor was a display of sheaves of grain and vegetables. The walls, windows and gas fixtures were brilliant with corn, crabapples and mountain ash berries. The harvest home season brings the thought:

"To the Lord their first fruits bringing,
All His thankful people come;
To the Father praises singing
For the joy of harvest home."

STATION TO BEAR POPULAR NAME

C. P. R. Calls Yonge Street Depot North Toronto Now.

TORONTO, Sept. 30.—As the travelling public almost invariably referred to Younge street station as North Toronto station, the name has been changed in order to prevent confusion acording to an announcement made at Canadian Pacific headquarters. The change of name came into effect with the change of time schedules, which allow the million dollar, all steel trains operating between Toronto and Montreal to make faster time between the two cities.

North Toronto station as it is now called, will now be the terminal for the de luxe and special train service and will, according to W. Fulton, district passenger agent, continue as such after the opening of the new Union station.

HOW DO YOU SAY IT?

(By C. N. Lurie.)

Common Errors in English and How To Avoid Them.

"EUPHONIOUS" AND "EUPHEMISTIC"

(By The McClure Syndicate, Inc.)

Although these two words, "euphonious" and "euphemistic," are not included in the vocabulary of "the man in the street" the student of English is interested in noting that they are sometimes used incorrectly for each other.

A case in point was that of a writer who commented on the recent paying of the income tax. He said: "A bookmaker who said his winnings for the year were $20,000 also offered to pay a tax. This man's money was accepted, too, his income being euphoniously listed as 'commissions'."

It should have been "euphemistically," which is derived from "euphemism," meaning "the use of an agreeable or non-offensive word or expression for one that is harsh, indelicate or otherwise unpleasant."

"Euphonious" means "pleasing or soothing in sound; pleasant to the ear."

The strongest of all tobaccos is perique, which is almost black.

Lyrics Of Life

(By Douglas Malloch.)

OLD FOOLS

When you put off the look of youth
Put off the look of folly, too.
Children may wander from the truth,
But we forgive the things they do,
For they are children. But a man
Full-statured man, whose gray hair tells
That he has lived life's larger span,
Looks fool indeed in cap and bells.

Youth has not seen and has not known,
But age has known and seen indeed,
Knows how men sin, and men atone,
Knows folly's paths and where they lead.
Youth is the pupil in life's school,
And time the teacher. What of men
Who pay the price of playing fool
In Youth, and then play fool again?

Life has so much of decent joy,
Were there no fools there were no sin;
I think we can forgive a boy,
With this new world to wander in—
The only fools, to tell the truth,
Old fools who folly still pursue.
When you put off the look of youth,
Put off the look of folly, too.

RIPPLES

By Dr. Frank Crane.

Opinions are like ripples.

How long they last depends upon the surface on which they appear.

The mind of the individual who holds the opinion is the surface whose character determines its lasting quality.

Think over your friends. Some change their opinions continuously, others with great infrequency.

You have seen many kinds of ripples—ripples on water, ripples on sand, ripples on ice, and ripple marks in solid limestone.

All are duplicated in the minds of men.

On water, ripples alter with each succeeding breath; in stone they change only with the erosion of years.

One type of mind is fluid; another concrete.

The first is plastic but unretentive; the second is retentive but unchanging and indurate.

One changes its opinions too frequently; the other not frequently enough.

In a general way these two characteristics of mind represent two stages of life.

In youth the tendency is to change our opinions too often.

In old age the tendency is to change them too seldom.

Youth is a time for ripples on water. It is a time for alternating, changing open-mindedness, for a sort of sparrow-like hopping from one idea to another.

Opinions are formed, destroyed and re-formed with little effort.

Old age is a time when the ripples of opinion seem marked in stone.

They are fixed. They alter only after long erosion by contrary evidence.

Both attitudes are off balance. One leans too far forward, the other too far back. Between the two extremes is the happy mean.

Of the two attitudes the one that can be most controlled is that of solidity. Little can be done to change the attitude of the mind of youth, and it has time to steady down anyway.

But open-mindedness is a habit that can be cultivated.

"A new truth is a truth and an old error is an error," is a good motto for advancing years.

SYNOPSIS

His father's warning—"Take women's love scornfully—and forget"—has made Juan the world's greatest lover. His cynicism is checked by Madonna-like Adriana Varanese; loving her, he resists, but incurs the enmity of infam-, Lucretia Borgia, who loves him, Donati, her kinsman, who covets Adriana. Circumstances destroy Juan's faith in Adriana. He becomes cynical again. To save her father, Adriana married Donati; but Juan kills him, Adriana flees; her father is killed; Juan is captured, refusing Lucretia's offer of freedom if he will give her devotion. A mysterious message comes:

CHAPTER XI.—Continued.

It was most difficult to do so, because of the height of the window; in vain Juan stretched, struggled. Finally, just as the bit of parchment fluttered from that thin hand he caught it.

Someone had scrawled a message on it, in a weak, almost illegible hand.

"I have loosened the third stone on the second level leading to my cell, in which there is a trap door opening to the river—and safety for the one who has the strength to lift it," Juan read.

Juan had hated the thought of living, had wanted to die, yet now, when confronted with the chance to escape, he grasped at it eagerly, almost without thinking. It was as if his body acted without being directed by his mind at all, as if some stranger had suddenly taken possession of him, and begun to direct his activities. There, in that gloomy, damp hole, which might have been part of another world than the one in which he had lived, in that moment he gave up his own being and became for a while another being.

Something within him seemed to stand off in surprise. It seemed to say to him, "But you want to die. You have longed for death—why are you doing this thing?"

But he was like a wild animal that knows no reason, that goes blindly on but with the instinct for self-preservation driving it on in frantic haste. He hardly knew what he was doing, but only that it must be done.

Wading through the water he knelt and began to count the stones. The third stone on the second level. They were all large, heavy stones; it was surprising that the thin arm he had seen at the window could have loosened one of them.

There—the third one. Cautiously he tapped on it, and promptly an answering tap came from the other side.

Eagerly he tried to move the stone, but it did not budge. Again he tried, and again. His own failure made him the more eager; almost in a frenzy, he toiled at it. The rough stone tore his hands; he slipped in the slimy water, struck his face against the wall so hard that it bled. For a moment he was dazed; then, the moment his head cleared, he returned to his task.

Night came and moonlight, a tiny ray of which pierced the cell's darkness. Once Juan had thought that the stone moved a little, and more frantically than ever he strove to move it again. There were steps in the corridor. The steps of those coming to lead him to his death, perhaps. He knelt there in the water until they had passed, then with a final effort that took all his strength, he hurled himself at the stone.

Almost imperceptibly at first, then a little more rapidly, it moved.

Juan threw his weight against it once more. It moved gratingly, slowly, then at last fell into the dungeon next his. The water on that other floor splashed as the stone slid into it.

Juan held his breath, fearful that the goalers in the corridor might have heard. Then, reassured, he squirmed through the opening in the wall....

Scrawny hands like claws clutched his shoulders and tugged, helping him through. Juan, exhausted by his struggle with the huge stone, was glad of their help. Life had suddenly become sweet to him for a moment as he strove with it, yet even now, as he slumped down in this neighboring cell, he wondered why he had made the effort to avoid death.

He straightened up at last, rubbed his eyes, and looked about him. In the wavering gleam of pale moonlight he saw the man who had helped him, a living skeleton with a madman's face.

The Marchese Rinaldi, the man who had killed his wife because of her deception of him and her love of Juan!

Juan stared at him in horror. Rinaldi recognizing him, raised his clenched hands high over his head, crying out in delight.

"You!" he exclaimed, and in his voice there was no human note. "You! The gods have at last delivered you into my hands!"

Juan said nothing. After all, what did it matter how death came?

Rinaldi began to move toward him, slowly, gloatingly. He was laughing, a queer, snarling sound. His hands clenched and unclenched convulsively. The fingers were like the talons of some huge bird of prey.

Juan stood waiting, his shoulders drooping wearily, his body relaxed. It could not be many moments now, he told himself. Curious, that death should come to him through this man, that Lucretia should be cheated of her vengeance in this manner.

There flashed before him the scene of his last meeting with Rinaldi, the night when the man had come striding into Juan's apartment, and found his wife there terror stricken. It would, have been a easy matter to hide her and deceive the Marchese: no new experience for Juan, either, but he had taken a certain pleasure in refusing to interfere, in urging Rinaldi to refuse to forgive his wife.

His own despair over Adriana—how bitter it had made him, how glad he had been to bring suffering to others because of it. When the woman, spurned by her husband, had thrust a dagger into her side, he had felt that it was merely a fitting end of the whole matter.

And now Rinaldi was going to kill him!

The madman's thin, sharp fingers closed about his throat. Juan threw his head back. Never had a woman's caress been more welcome!

He waited, smiling, for death. But suddenly the talon-like fingers relaxed their grip. Opening his eyes, Juan saw that Rinaldi was staring at him in amazement.

"Do not stop, I pray you!" he urged. The man grasped him by the throat, then stepped back, his hands hanging at his sides.

"You want me to kill you!" he cried to Juan, bewildered. "You want to die?"

Incredulously he faced Juan, who stared back at him hopelessly. When death had been so near, to have it snatched away like this!

Rinaldi's laughter rang through the cell.

"I see!" he cried. "Death would bring you peace and forgetfulness. Death means escape from the ghosts that haunt you—the ghosts of those whose souls you have destroyed!"

"You fear to kill me!" Juan retorted, hoping to anger the man into finishing what he had begun. But Rinaldi refused to be so trapped. He backed away, laughed still. Juan would have leaped upon him, provoked him into a fight in which he could have let the madman overpower him, but just then from the corridor came the clanking of chains.

Juan could imagine the scene, the goaler and his assistants, standing there in the light of the torches, bearing chains with which to bind him before they dragged him forth.

ALL DISEASES TREATED

A CASE OF MISTAKEN IDENTITY

By A. J. REYNOLDS

Canadian Bank of Commerce, Peterboro.

Our farmer customer, "Doc" Slowpay at last made the inevitable assignment and we sat back feeling secure as to our $800 loan through a chattel mortgage on 65 hogs 6 horses and a few cattle. There was a heavy list of creditors but we were apparently safe until we got notice from a machine company that they were disputing our chattel mortgage on the grounds that the 65 hogs we had security on were the natural increase of six sows covered in a chattel mortgage taken by them a year previously. We found on investigation that the machine company's registered mortgage was defective inasmuch as through a typographical error it covered "six cows" and upon Doc's evidence would depend whether it was "six cows" or "six sows." So I told him frankly it was up to him as he was the only one who could swear postively and he was quite friendly to us always. If it were six sows as the company maintained our 65 pigs were seriously clouded. "Leave it to me," said Doc, "I'll fix it all right," and we felt sure that Doc was ready to give evidence that the mortgage covered six cows.

The case duly came to trial and "Doc" on the stand asserted to our dismay that the intention of "six cows" was intended to cover "six sows." I felt we had been double-crossed somewhere. "There," said the Company's lawyer triumphantly. "It is obvious that the 65 pigs on the bank's mortgage are the companys property through natural increase." We felt we were lost but "Doc" astonished everyone when he said, "No sir, they ain't, because when I gave the company's mortgage I had 15 sows and I had the company security on only six of them and the company's sows was all so barren we ate 'em." The court was plunged into laughter. The machine company's lawyer was furious. "Nonsense," he shouted, "How could all of our sows be so peculiarly barren and the banks ones so wonderfully prolific." "Well," said the Doc, amid renewed mirth of the court, "I ought to know because every time a sow was barren we ate her, I says there goes one of the company's pigs." "Tut, tut man! shouted the lawyer, "How could your family use six sows in six months, you must have had sow meat every meal." "Well," said Doc, "We people on the farm don't get the mixed diet like you city fellers and we have to eat a heap of pork and I like pork."

That settled it and amid the unrestrainable mirth of the court, the company's contention was dismissed in our favor.

Later on at noon I asked "Doc" to have dinner with me as I felt he deserved it. The company's lawyer happened to be sitting at the same table. The maid came around with the usual order, "Ros' beef, ros, lamb, ros' pork." I'll take some roast pork," said the 'doc." We all burst into uncontrollable laughter. "You win," said the lawyer, "I guess you did eat those sows."

WOOD FOR FUEL OF NEW MOTOR

French Company Offers Automobiles Developing Gas From Wood.

VERY CHEAP.

PARIS, September 30. Canadian Press. — On the eve of the Paris National Automobile Exposition, a sensation in Automotive circles appeared in advance Tuesday in the form of big advertisements in the Paris press by the Bleriot Company, offering for sale a gasolineless, wood burning automobile which, it is claimed, has proved a success.

Recently a fourteen seat auto-bus if this type made a complete circuit of France—3280 miles—at a fuel cost of $15.00.

The fuel is simply wood or charcoal heated to a high temperature by a special apparatus attached to the left side of the car and transformed into gas, which, mixed with air, passes on to the motor and is exploded in the cylinders the same as ordinary gas from liquid fuel.

TRY RUM RUNNERS FOR STEALING GUNS

Port Colborne Men Accused of Stripping U. S. Coast Guard Boat.

PORT COLBORNE, Sept. 30. An aftermath of the Point Aubino battle between a Port Colborne rum ship and a United States Coast Guard boat was staged in the Police Court here Wednesday, when a number of men from Port Colborne were arraigned before Magistrate Massie charged with being implicated in the theft of a machine gun and other equipment from the stranded Government boat.

On June 29 last the American Coast Guard cutter C.G.2205 chased a Port Colborne rum boat into Canadian waters at Point Aubino and a pitched battle ensued, which resulted in both boats being piled up on the beach.

Then the crew of the Coast Guard alleged, they were taken prisoners by the rum runners and several of their friends who had joined them on the beach, while the boat was stripped of all removable equipment. Provincial police investigating the case found the stolen paraphernalia later scattered along the beach, and charges of theft have been laid against those alleged to have been involved.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, but do not Compel.

FOR FRIDAY OCTOBER 1 1926.

(Copyright, McClure Syndicate.)

Mercury in benefic aspect dominates this day, according to astrology, Mars and Uranus are adverse.

This is a day for financial matters rather than for planning or beginning work.

Banks and bankers should benefit from this position of the stars which indicates for them extension of their power and for the scope of their activities.

Newspapers and magazines should benefit from this planetary government which indicates a tremendous interest in publications of all sorts.

If the stars are to be trusted the winter is to be so severe in many parts of the United States that theatres will suffer and booksellers will benefit.

With the beginning of autumn there may be much industrial unrest and a tendency on the part of labor to be dissatisfied.

Under this rule many contentions may take place. Business associates should be careful not to precipitate a quarrel.

Domestic difficulties will be even more numerous than ever, it is foretold, and divorces are to multiply, while remarriages will be so common as to command legal attention, the seers prophesy.

Astrologers warn men and women to protect their minds again—against wrong systems of thought and to beware of judging other persons severely.

Insanity and disability because of the use of narcotics will be so general as to arouse the long inactive publi to the need of safeguarding the mind against disease and depravity.

There should be signs of increase in international amity with the beginning of cold weather, but embarassing problems for diplomats are foretold.

Women and children may be peculiarly susceptible to disease in the coming winter and should safeguard the health.

Persons whose birthdate it is may have many cares in the coming yea which nevertheless, can be made successful.

Children born on this day may be talented but impractical.

They should be wisely guided.

WHAT'S IN A NAME?

(By Mildred Marshall.)

Facts about your name, its history; its meaning; whence it was derived; its significance; your lucky day, and lucky jewel.

DELIA

Delia is a name of curiously conflicting history. There are several origins from which she might have sprung. In England, she appears most frequently as a convenient contraction for the dignity of Cornelia. The truly Irish flavor of Bedelia and the popularity of Delia in that country, might give rise to the contention that the latter name is the diminutive of the old song-favorite.

But Delia, according to the best etymological authorities, is a separate and independent name which has its source in no less exalted realm than the mythology of ancient Greece.

It was Artemis, or Diana, the moon goddess, who, being born at Delos caused the place of her nativity to be immortalized in Greek mythological history.

In honor of the goddess the feminine name Delia was evolved from Delos, and sprang to instant fame in Arcadian poetry. Lovely shepherdesses who figure in those ancient pastorals, bore the name, and it reached England by the literary route. The sound of it was good to Irish ears and it was straightway adopted by that country.

Since Artemis was the moon goddess, it is fitting that Delia's talismanic gem should be the moonstone. It will bring its wearer good fortune, and will prove an exceptionally lucky jewel if it is a gift from a sweetheart. It is said that lovers can read the future by looking into its depths when the moon is full. Monday is Delia's lucky day and 4 her lucky number.

HER OWN WAY
A GIRL of TODAY

AN ANGRY WOMAN

I looked over to a table slightly screened by a big fern on the other side of the room, and saw a woman who seemed very much agitated. Mamie, noticing my glances, whispered, "It's Mrs. Tremaine, and she is pale with anger about something." Then I realized that the lady was not talking about our party as a whole, but about Mamie.

She knows all about Buddy's love for Mamie, I said to myself, and she has stayed here while he went back to New York so that she might, if possible, make trouble for her. I had never seen a woman whose face was so contorted with hate and anger, but I tried to look away.

"I wonder what is the matter with Mrs. Tremaine," asked Joan, innocently, "and who is that man with her."

"It's Gordon Deming," answered Jerry, after he too had turned and glanced at the other table. "I am certain of one thing," he continued, "if I were Mr. Tremaine I wouldn't want my wife playing around with that man. Why, he is a drunkard and a dope fiend. I wonder where Buddy is tonight?"

"He has gone back to New York," said Mamie, impulsively, and then she blushed—for the moment she had forgotten that she was not supposed to know Buddy.

Mrs. Tremaine bowed very cordially to Joan, she snubbed the rest of us, and even raised her eyebrows to her friend, as asking her if she really knew the character of the people she was entertaining.

I turned to Jerry. For some reason I was very nervous. It seemed to me that we all were sitting on a volcano that was liable to burst in open flames at any moment.

"I think that both Mrs. Tremaine and Mr. Deming are drunk, Jerry, and I can tell by their manner that they are trying to hatch up something that will make a scene. You, of course, know that I don't want to have one tonight. I had one the first night I came here that will satisfy my longing for scenes the rest of my life."

Instead of quieting my fears Jerry whispered, "You're radiantly beautiful tonight, Judy, and I am so proud of you as far as your looks are concerned—you are the most beautiful woman in the room. But what are you going to do with that poor man on your left? I didn't think you would be so cruel. Can you not see that you have got him going?

"I'm sorry for him, Judy, and ashamed of you. If you must really try to show your power over some one take some one of your own size—take me."

"I wish this dinner were over," I remarked irrelevantly. "I don't like this place."

YOUR JEWEL COLOR FLOWER

By Mildred Marshall

The aquamarine, which is today's talismanic and natal gem, was worn by the ancients as an amulet, to protect them from fear. The gem has the same usage today, and it is generally associated with the sea; hence it is much worn by travelers, for whom it insures a safe and profitable journey.

Pale blue is the luck color today. Those who wear it will experience serenity and content.

The sweet lily-of-the-valley symbol of unconscious sweetness, is today's lucky flower.

In the interests of beauty and symmetry, let me commend you to all forms of stretching—particularly all forms that pull at the muscles of the trunk. If you can keep flesh off your stomach and abdomen, you won't be bothered much with excess weight, for that is the region where the trouble starts.

Take the position illustrated, then kick out straight, first with one leg and then with the other as high as you can, keeping the knee absolutely unbent. Stretch as far as you can. Shapely legs are another asset to be derived from this particular form of physical contortion.

LOVE LETTERS THAT MADE HISTORY

(By Joseph Kaye.)

BIANCA MARIA SFORZA

(By The McClure Syndicate, Inc.)

Tempted by the offered dowery of 400,000 ducats, the great Emperor Maximilian, "King of the Romans," as he was then called, accepted in marriage the hand of Bianca Maria Sforza, daughter of high Italian nobility.

Bianca was twenty-one, handsome, with a wealth of golden hair, fond of fine clothes and good things, but was not distinguished by too much good sense, nor depth of character. The coming alliance with the Emperor overwhelmed her. She was dazzled. So was her family. The marriage was to take place by proxy and the bride to meet her husband at Innsbruck, but, even though the Emperor was absent, the festivities were on the most magnificent scale the fifteenth century had witnessed at a royal fete. The bride was loaded with a trousseau that cost many king's ransoms and after the great ceremony at which the proxy marriage was celebrated took place, the bride with her retinue set out to meet the Emperor.

Arriving at Innsbruck, the royal party found no signs of the groom. The non-appearance of the Emperor worried one of the family's councellors, and he sought Maximilian at his residence, with a note from Bianca:

"Serenissimo Re e Signore mio,

"I find myself under such obligations towards your Majesty that I am quite dazed at the love you manifest for me. I could not if I tried express the joy which floods my soul. Being unable to testify to it sufficiently in writing, I send Messer Erasmus Brasca to speak on my behalf; and I beseech your majesty to believe him, and I commend myself to you.

"Innspruck, XXVJ. Decembris, 93.

"Malestatis Vestra Serva 14

"Bianca Maria, manu propria."

Maximilian was stirred by this reminder of his love, for after two months had elapsed, he decided to fetch his bride. She met him half way on the road, and the royal couple entered on their conjugal life, he to be always reminded of the unfavorable comparison between his pleasure loving, unthinking companion, his first wife, Marie de Bourbogne. 400,000 ducats had failed to inspire love.

SHORT STORY

(By Jane Osborn.)

Mary Bruce had a position in the brokerage office of Graham and Kent because an old friend of young Hubert Kent had written to him asking him to do what he could to get Mary a job. Mary had been brought up in comparative luxury. Then her father all in one short year lost his fortune and died, leaving Mary practically penniless and unprepared to earn her own living. So Mary became the reception clerk and telephone operator at Graham and Kent's.

Mary was a pathetic figure—pretty and very neat, but never looking the part of downtown office worker. Hubert's old friend had told him of the expansive life Mary had lived, as her father's boon companion on his hundred-acre estate. So Hubert Kent told Mary that he would like to be able to be helpful to her. Perhaps he could give her advice about her affairs—business matters of which she naturally knew nothing.

"Thank you," said Mary sitting there at the switch board. "I really would like a little advice right now. You see after everything was settled there was little short of two thousand dollars left to me. That's my fortune—" Mary smiled sadly and blushed a little.

"Well, I have had it in the savings bank but you know it yields practically nothing there. I wondered if perhaps I oughtn't to invest it."

Hubert—relieved for Mary's sake to think that she had even so small a nest egg as two thousand dollars—told her he would think the matter over and when he was sure of something—something that was bound to go big—he'd let her know. He wouldn't think of advising her to buy stock on a margin, but something would come along that was a sure thing—so that she might make a few hundred dollars.

A few days later Hubert Kent advised Mary to buy stock in the new X.Y. wire company Hubert happened to have inside information. The stock was still low—but they were keeping it low on purpose. When they got ready they were going to send it way up. Hubert himself wasn't getting any. It was against his principles as a broker to dabble in stocks. His money was all in government bonds. But for anyone that really had to make some money that X.Y. stock was a great investment.

So Mary gave Hubert a check for her two thousand dollars and Hubert arranged the purchase of the stock.

A month later X.Y. stock began to fall. Hubert was told and passed it on to Mary that that was all part of the scheme. The men who controlled the stock were getting ready to do big things. In a few weeks or a month or so, Hubert said, there would be a big dividend and then X.Y. would start to climb.

But there was no dividend and X.Y. did not start to climb. In fact, it continued to do just the reverse and before a year was over Hubert had to face the realization that X.Y. was hopeless and that through his advice Mary had lost her small nest egg. Gladly would he have reimbursed Mary for her loss but he knew that she would not consent to this. Hubert could not sleep nights. Somehow he would have to make up to Mary for what she had lost. It occurred to him that if he could introduce her to some young and eminently desirable man—someone really worthy of Mary—someone with plenty of money — with whom Mary would fall in love and who would marry Mary—then he would have made up for the loss. So Hubert took Mary to luncheon, introduced her to some of the older women he knew, met her at his country club and produced two or three bachelors whom he regarded as in a measure suitable. And Mary really made a very good impression though she was extremely unresponsive to the attentions of the men she met.

"I don't know how it is with the men you've known," said Hubert helpfully, "but these men are so used to girls that go more than half-way that when a girl is as cool as you are—well, they just make up their minds she isn't at all interested."

"Well, I'm not interested," Mary told him, "at least not in them."

"Then—then you like someone else better?" asked Hubert with a funny sense of injustice and jealousy.

"I do," said Mary.

Not long after that Hubert felt that the only way of making up to Mary was by offering his own heart and hand. There was a vague chance that she really cared for him—and besides he had had to admit he was in love with her. And of course Mary accepted.

"I never could forgive myself for having wrongly advised you about that stock," Hubert told Mary shortly after their troth had been plighted.

"I suppose I ought to confess," said Mary. "I sold that stock three days after you bought it. I had a sort of hunch about it. So I sold and then took a wild plunge—bought on margin—S. P. & Q. I happened to overhear something over Mr. Graham's wire and—of course, 'd had a chance to learn a little about the stock market since I'd been here—and— —"

"You must have cleared up a thousand or so—that was last May when S. P. & Q. went soaring— —"

"I made almost four thousand," said Mary proudly. "You know I bought on margin. I ought to have told you Hubert."

But Hubert was glad that she had not.

INTELLIGENCE TEST

The following questions are a good indication of your general knowledge. How many can you answer? You will find the correct answers on the back page.

1.—Who is shown in the accompanying picture?
2.—How many colors are there in the flag of the Chinese republic?
3.—Who is the King of Norway?
4.—Who is Lieut.-Governor of Quebec
5.—What is a parrakeet
6.—Who is Canadian High Commissioner in London?
7.—What is the average distance from the earth to the moon?
8.—How many standard time divisions are there in Canada?
9.—When is the next leap year?
10.—How much postage is required to send cards other than Government post cards?

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK?

THAT advertising is the real medium of exchange.

THAT its par value depends upon itself. That advertising makes possible the operation of the law of supply and demand. What is supply without demand?

THAT good advertising—it must be good advertising—is the foundation of demand.

THAT business is dependent upon a medium of exchange and that medium must inspire confidence—else it depreciates and business looks for another medium of exchange.

THAT your advertising, therefore, is not intangible. You are concerned with a real economic factor. To benefit from its operation you must see to it that its face value is not debased.

THAT good advertising is "truth well told." It is a promise to pay—to default is bankruptcy.

BUSINESS MUST USE INTELLIGENTLY THE MODERN MEDIUM OF EXCHANGE—ADVERTISING.

ONE TRAIN LOAD OF ALBERTA COAL ALREADY DISTRIBUTED IN ONTARIO ALL THAT IS COMING TO PROVINCE

Balance of 20,000 Tons Arranged For Will Not Be Received.

BENNETT SILENT.

Calgary Member of Late Government Refuses To Comment.

TORONTO, Oct. 1.—One train-load of Alberta coal, which has already been received and distributed throughout Ontario, is all that the Province can expect under the arrangement made by the last Federal Government, according to Fuel Controller J. A. Ellis, who stated yesterday that the prospects for more Alberta coal coming to Ontario were not good at present.

Three trainloads of Alberta fuel from Drumheller, Lethbridge and Edmonton were to have been brought to Ontario at a freight rate of $7 a ton. Mr. Ellis received applications for 20,000 tons and proceeded to distribute 6,000 tons throughout the Province, but it now appears that the original arrangements will not be carried out. The one trainload, which has been distributed, is all that the Province will receive.

Hon. R. B. Bennett of Calgary was in Toronto yesterday and left last night for Ottawa. "I have nothing to say. You will have to see Mr. Ellis," said Mr. Bennett, when asked if it were possible for Ontario to receive a supply of Alberta coal, as it desired this fall and winter.

The supply of 200 tons, which was promised to Toronto, will not be delivered. Mr. Ellis yesterday informed Property Commissioner Daniel Chisholm that he had been recently advised that the expected fuel would not be delivered under the arrangement made by the Government. "I much regret this," he stated.

Stove size anthracite had increased 50 cents a ton, J. P. Milne of the Milne Coal Company, stated yesterday. He attributed the increase to the demand outside the United States for American fuel, caused by the British strike. He though that an early settlement of the British strike would affect prices of fuel in Toronto.

"On account of a late spring, Toronto did not start buying coal in July and August, as it generally does," said Mr. Milne. "September has been a heavy month and orders have been very plentiful. There is no coal shortage in Toronto."

Papyri Show Tax Collectors In Egypt Got a Commission

LONDON, October 1 (Associated Press). — The busy tax collector of the ancient city of Karania in Central Egypt during the second century A.D. got about 1 per cent. commission on his collections, it is revealed in two long Greek papyrus rolls which are soon to be presented to the University of Michigan.

The rolls, which were unearthed in Egypt recently, are sixty and forty feet in length, respectively, and are among the longest ever found.

In each entry the name of the person comes first. Then follows a list of properties assessed, with the amount of the tax record in the margin against each item. In some items there is a charge for exchange to cover the conversion of copper coins into the silver value of the drachma.

PAPER ADVISES KING TO CALL SECOND SESSION

National Review Says Imperial Conference Should Sit in Canada.

SUSPICION AROUSED.

Mischief Makers Keep Dominions From Taking Interest in Important Matters.

LONDON, October 1. Canadian Press Cable. — "Why does not Mackenzie King strike for migration within the Empire, and silence all capitious critics of his supposed lukewarmness to the Imperial cause by boldly inviting the Imperial conference, after its October session in London, to hold a second session in Ottawa to thrash out questions that embarrass the Dominion as well as the Mother Country?"

This question is asked by the National Review, which is edited by L. J. Maxas.

"Suspicion in Canada, South Africa, Australia and even in some circles in New Zealand," the National Review continues, "is stimulated by mischief makers who accuse the Imperial government of perpetually lying in wait to steal a march on innocent governments of the Dominions and entangle them in sinister international complications that are hatched in the Foreign office and in the Admiralty and war offices. The real difficulty is to persuade any appreciable number of Caandians, Australians and South Africans to take the faintest interest in questions which concern them as much as people of the Mother Land."

Doctors From Neighboring Towns Will Judge Peterborough Infants.

There is to be a baby show in connection with the Produced in Canada Exhibition in the Armouries, and doctors from outside the city will be the judges. Prizes are to be gold pieces. Details will be made public at a later date, President John J. Craig said today, when the score cards are received.

HARVEST HOME SERVICE HELD AT ST. LUKE'S

Rev. P. C. Howard is Special Preacher at Annual Thanksgiving.

INSPIRING SERMON.

Special Music and Appropriate Decorations Mark Occasion.

"Thou shalt observe the feast of tabernacles seven days, after that thou hast gathered in thy corn and thy wine." This verse, the 13th of the 16th Chapter of the Book of Deuteronomy, enjoining the Jews to offer thanks for the harvest, was the text chosen by the Rev. P. C. Howard of Millbrook for his sermon at the Harvest Festival Service at St. Luke's Church last night.

The Feast of Tabernacles, said the speaker, was the most enjoyable and joyous of all the Jewish religious celebrations. It commemorated the anniversary of their entry to the Holy Land as well as the harvest thanksgiving. The first element was that of fellowship, as it was a social reunion of all Israel. It teaches Christians to live in unity in the life which Christ taught them.

Unselfishness was the second element of the Jewish feast. They were commanded, "They shall not appear before the Lord empty," and their thanksgiving had its practical side with the return to the Lord of a portion of the good things with which he had blessed them. True thanksgiving shows in the life. One cannot be a true follower of Christ without remembering his passion and his life and giving practical expression of thanksgiving. The gifts don't enrich God but they are a mark of acknowledgment that all things are His.

Spiritual revival, the refreshing of the memory and the gaining of greater knowledge of God, was the third element of the Jewish feast. They gathered to acknowledge God's goodnes stowards them. There is cause for thanksgiving at all times and it should be never ceasing. Before prayer is offered for further blessings there should be thanksgivings for the benefits already received. A plea for Thanksgiving hearts was made by the preacher.

The mystery of seed time and harvest was taken by the speaker as an evidence of the surety of resurrection. The grain dies before the new life comes from it, greater and better than ever. Men are partners and co-workers in this as the farmer is in the preparing of seed and ground for the coming harvest.

A warning against taking too much for granted and failing to offer thanks was given by the speaker. The more plentiful God's blessings are, he said, the more apt men are to disregard them as blessings and forget to give thanks.

He spoke of the parable of the rich fool and of the story of the healing of the ten lepers, as illustrating man's aptitude to forget.

Two ways of showing thanks to God for his goodness were proposed by the speaker. The first was the return of a portion of the bountiful gifts and the second was the offering of a consecrated life. One whose life was consecrated to God, he said, wanted to get up off the ordinary level, asking the question, "Am I doing all I can? Is my life all it should be?" A consecrated life is one near the path of Jesus Christ. It acknowledges its weaknesses and humiliation as did the publican in his prayer. One whose life is re-consecrated to the service of God will not be satisfied until more fully occupied with His work, and will hear, on crossing the silent river, the Savior's words, "Well done."

The service was conducted by the Rector, the Rev. G. J. Bousfield. The Rev. J. L. Hughes of St. George's Church assisted. Special music was sung, including the anthem, "Break forth into joy," in which solo parts were taken by Mrs. Davies and Mr. Hope, and four Harvest hymns.

The church was decorated for the occasion with fruits of the harvest, vegetables, grain, and fruits being profusely used, while many beautiful flowers, leaves, and berries added to the effect.

TWO DAYS' RECOUNT GIVES GAIN OF SEVEN VOTES TO W. A. FRASER

Maybee's Majority in Northumberland Was 391 in Election

FINAL TO-NIGHT.

Ballots Examined By Both Candidates' Representatives Before Judge McGlade.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

COBOURG, October 1. — A gain of less than ten votes for W. A. Fraser, was the rather slim net result of two days' recounting of the Northumberland ballots up to Thursday night. The work will likely be completed this evening, and as Mr. Maybee's majority was fixed to be 391, the recount will evidently not materially change the electors' choice and decision in this riding.

The ballots have been examined by Judge McGlade in the presence of lawyers representing Mr. Fraser and Mr. Maybee.

F. M. Field, K.C., is chief counsel for Mr. Maybee, the Conservative nominee and member-elect, assisted by Col. Fred Boggs, K. C., and George Drewry, of Brighton, and Mr Fraser is represented by T. F. Hall, K.C., assisted by J. McAuley, of Belleville, and Delos Batton, local tax collector.

The ballots and other papers used in the election were brought here by R. J. Allan, returning officer, and his assistant, A. L. Linton, both of Campbellford, and the recount began on Wednesday morning. The gain for Mr. Fraser up to last night was reported to be seven votes.

THE WEATHER.

September of 1926, as now passed into history and we have entered upon the threshold of another month with its joys and sorrows and unrevealed possibilities. Contrary to the generally expressed opinion, September had only an average rainfall. The total for the month was 2.96. The total that fell in September of last year was 5.92 (very nearly twice as much), while the same month in 1924, gave 4.49. It may be said here that the rainfall in Peterboro this fall has been light in comparison with sections nearer Toronto and all west of that place. Much heavier rain has also fallen from Havelock and Campbellford easterly. The warmest day was the 19th, with 77 degrees. The lowest temperature was on the 27th with 29 degrees. We had ten days with rain; September of last year had 17 days. This has been a cool summer. On no occasion has the thermometer reached 90 degrees. —W. P.

TO FIND PLACE FOR IMMIGRANT FIRST OBJECTIVE

Hon. Robert Forke Says Department Will Concentrate on This.

NO CLASS FAVORED.

Immigrants Need Only Be Healthy and Willing To Work.

WINNIPEG, Man., Oct. 1 (Canadian Press).—Hon. Robert Forke, Federal Minister of Immigration, when interviewed here last night while on his return trip to Ottawa, said that the Department of Immigration would concentrate on finding a place for the immigrant before he is brought to Canadian shores, rather than letting him come to Canada with his small savings to shift for himself.

Mr. Forke, when asked to state his policy with regard to immigration, protested that he had hardly had time to get acquainted with officials of his new Department, much less to get his immigration policy ready for publication.

He asserted that he had unbounded faith in the future of Canada if the right sort of immigration is maintained.

When asked if he would particularly endeavor to get immigrants to place on the farms, Mr. Forke emphatically declared that he did not think any particular class would be favored as long as immigrants were healthy in body and mind and willing to work.

Too "Yellow" To Fight Coach Learns Mistake

DES MOINES, Ia., October 1 (Associated Press). — George Van Oel, sophomore, high school pupil of Des Moines, failed to land a permanent berth on the football team, so he "whipped" the assistant coach and disappeared. He is being sought on a warrant.

Van Oel, other pupils said, held Willis Piper, instructor of physical education and assistant football coach at Roosevelt High School, responsible for his not playing in the opening game last week. Consequently he went to the instructor's office Monday morning and blackened Piper's eyes and fractured his cheek bone.

The boy's mother said her son told her the assistant coach called him "yellow."

More Births In September Wedding and Deaths Drop

There was an increase in the number of births for September over the same month a year ago, and marriages and deaths both decreased. The vital statistics for the past month were: Births 49, marriages 22 and deaths 24. For September, 1925, the deaths were 25, marriages 23 and births 44.

MOTION TO BUY LADDER TRUCK IS VOTED DOWN

Council Committee Decides To Take No Action Meantime.

FOUR VOTES TO TWO.

Amendment of Alderman Ackerman Fails To Carry.

At a meeting of the Fire, Light ad Water Committee attended last night by the Chairman, Alderman E. M. Turner, Mayor W. T. Holloway, Aldermen W. J. Hancock, C. H. Ackerman, R. Denne, R. S. Cotton, G. A. Macdonald, S. R. Armstrong, City Clerk and George Gimblett, Chief of the Fire Department, it was decided, on the motion of Alderman Cotton, seconded by Mayor Holloway to take no further action regarding the proposal to purchase a motor ladder truck for the Fire Department. The amendment proposed by Alderman Ackerman, seconded by Alderman Macdonald that the truck and equipment be purchased three thousand dollars of the cost to be taken from the committee's appropriation, the remainder to be raised by the issue of debentures was defeated by four votes to two.

The request of a resident of Adaline street who asked for the installation of street light on the thoroughfare was referred to the Chairman, who was asked to report to the Committee.

AGREEMENT ON RUM RUNNING BETWEEN BRITAIN AND STATE OFFICIALLY COMES IN EFFE

Ford Seeks To Recover Car Given Bogus Baron

WILMINGTON, Oct. 1 (Associated Press).—When Henry Ford presents an automobile to a "baron" he wants that person to be a real "baron" and not an imposter.

It was learned last night that Mr. Ford, through a secretary, has written to the courts of this state asking what may be done in his favor concerning the restoration, or equivalent cash value, of the especially constructed touring car that he presented "Baron G. Frederick E. Von Krupp, Jr." George R. Gabor, who posed as the "baron" now is languishing at the New Castle county workhouse, awaiting trial on charges of passing worthless cheques while a guest at a hotel in this city last July.

The automobile in question was reported sold by the "baron" at Albuquerque, N.M.

GREAT WELCOME GIVEN COBHAM ON HIS RETURN

Huge Crowds Line Banks of Thames as Flier Alights.

28,000 MILE TRIP.

Expected That He Will Be Knighted For Sensational Flights.

LONDON, October 1. Canadian Press. — Alan J. Cobham, Great Britain's leading long distance aviator, arrived here to-day, completing his sensational 28,000 mile flight to Australia and return.

The plane came to rest on the water by the Houses of Parliament at 2.26 p.m. Huge Crowds lining the banks of the river for a great distance, gave the flier a tremendous ovation.

No aeroplane voyage since the late Captain Sir John Alcock and Lieut. Brown of the Royal Air Force, flew from Newfoundland across the Atlantic to Clifden, Ireland, in 1919, had aroused public interest equal to that of Cobham's.

SWITCH ENGINE RUN BY BATTERY

Electric Locomotive World Made By G. E. Co.

BATTERY 39 TONS.

NEW YORK, N. Y., Oct. 1. — (United Press). — Operated by a battery, the largest electric locomotive ever built will leave Erie, Pa., to-morrow on its trial run to Chicago.

The trip, with a passenger car attached, will be made under power from the locomotive's storage battery.

Railroad engineers and officials and representatives of the General Electric Co. builders of the new iron horse, will make the trip.

Practical tests will be made of the locomotive, it will be put to work in Chicago and Northern Western freight yards to demonstrate possibilities of eliminating dead terminal switching problems.

The storage battery weighs more than 30 tons and contains sufficient electricity to crank 1600 automobiles simultaneously and still move the locomotive for some distance.

The batteries are charged at night with special equipment installed in the freight yards.

RAILWAY TRAFFIC WELL MAINTAINED

Freight and Express Business Locally Is Very Good

The volume of railway traffic in Peterborough, which has been large all summer, is now being maintained, Alpine McNabb states. The Examiner this morning.

Peterborough, he said, does not share in the last annual railway business arising from the transportation of grain, this city being an importer of grain rather than an exporter, but the local yards have kept the wagon and engines moving at a steady pace.

The express business has been very heavy throughout summer, and the extensions extending into the freight ...

Bandits Later Abandon Car With Dead Body Inside.

BALTIMORE, Md., Oct. 1 (Canadian Press).—Three bandits held up and robbed the paymaster of the Henry Sonneborn Company, clothing manufacturers, of $47,000 this morning and fled in an auto. The car was found later with the dead body of a man inside. There was no trace of his companions.

GET MARRIED TO FUSE MINDS

Doctor Advises Women How Perfect Thought Can Be Obtained.

WAR THREATENS.

NEW YORK, Oct. 1 (United News).—A war of sexes impends if the present glorification of women continues, Dr. Winnifred Stoner predicted on Thursday at the exposition of women's arts and industries.

Asserting that women are indeed superior to men spiritually and morally, Dr. Stoner warned her female listeners that these qualities are not everything.

She listed physical, economical and mental qualifications as belonging most abundantly to the male.

"Only by a fusing of the male-female mind can perfect thought and action be achieved," she said. "If women wish to succeed in business, the professions, or any line of work they should acomplish this fusing."

"How can this be done," she was asked. The doctor replied: "Get married."

MINING EXHIBIT IS INTERESTING

Ontario Department Assists Kiwanians in Big Local Exhibition.

One of the most interesting of the Exhibits at the Produced in Canada Exhibition to be held in the Armouries shortly will be that of the Department of Mines of Ontario. This was secured through W. H. Bradburn, M.P.P., and through a visit to the Department of President John J. Craig of Kiwanis Club.

The display will include samples of the ores and minerals of Ontario, gold silver, nickel, copper, iron, also non-metallic minerals such as talc, graphite, feldspar. There will also be exhibited products derived from the various ores or minerals.

Handbooks on the mining industry and on various phases of mining will be available, and photographs of mines and mining scenes will illustrate the collection. The Porcupine, Kirkland Lake, and other gold camps will be represented, also the silver fields of Cobalt, South Lorain and Gowanda. The great nickel mines of the Sudbury district will be represented by characteristic ores and products.

WOOLER NEWS.

WOOLER, Sept. 30 — Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kinnear of Melville were entertained on Friday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Scott.

Mr. and Mrs. Burrill of Texas and Mrs. Faux are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Herle Wessels.

Mr. and Mrs. Allan of Toronto are the guests of Mrs. E. McConnell.

Mildred McColl has returned home after spending a few weeks in Ottawa.

Mr. and Mrs. W. W. McColl motored to Ottawa last week returning on Thursday.

On Monday evening, September 27th, a shower was given at the home of the bride to be, Miss Emma McColl, in honor of her marriage to Mr. J. McIntyre of Saskatchewan which wedding took place on Wednesday at high noon at Mrs. Maggie McColl's home. The large gathering that assembled showed the esteem in which Miss McColl was held. After all the friends were there L. H. Rowe asked that Alex Dunn would act as chairman for the evening. After the singing of "My Old Kentucky Home" a number were called on for short addresses, and the following address was read by Mrs. S. L. Terrill.

Dear Emma, — The friends and neighbors have gathered here tonight, in your home, to spend a social time on the eve of your marriage. We do not come with the thought of your departure but rather that you are going to bring a life partner to live in our midst.

We feel that we cannot let this opportunity pass without showing you in some small way our esteem and good will. Your cheerful disposition in always helping and working in the church through the activities of the Women's Missionary Society, Ladies' Aid Sunday School and faithful attendance at the church services, has won for you many friends. We therefore ask you to accept these gifts, not for their intrinsic value, but because of the good wishes which prompt them.

May God richly bless you and yours, is the earnest wish which accompanies these gifts.

On behalf of the friends and neighbors.

(Signed) Mrs. S. L. Terrill, Mrs. H. Richards, Mrs. L. H. Rowe.

YOUNG'S POINT NEWS.

YOUNG'S POINT, Sept. 30—Mr. David Johnston of Peterboro spent Sunday with his brother, John Johnston.

Milford and Wesley Cumming returned to the village after their trip to the west on Monday.

Mrs. Bryden of Hastings is the guest of Mrs. Alex Spence.

Mrs. Ed. Young spent Sunday in Peterboro.

On Sunday, September 26, the annual Harvest Festival service was held in Holy Trinity church, Haultain. The church had been beautifully and tastefully decorated with grain, vegetables fruit, and flowers and a large congregation was in attendance.

Rev. R. T. C. Dwelly, B.A., Incumbent of the Stoney Lake Mission (of which Holy Trinity is a unit) was in charge of the service.

Mrs. A. Spence of Young's Point very kindly acted as organist. The text of the sermon was Hebrews iii., 4: "He who built all things is God."

The preacher showed the value of the harvest thanksgiving service, as being the one call to worship God and to thank Him for His many blessings, and also the recalling to our minds of the fact that after all we human beings are not entirely responsible for all the things that we think we are but that God is behind every act in life and that "He who built all things is God."

On Sunday evening, October 3, Rev. J. O'Conor-Fenton, R.D., of Norwood, will preach in St. Aidens Church, while Rev. R. T. C. Dwelly, B.A., will take services in Norwood and Warsaw.

"A MULE, A MULE—"

FULTON, Mo., Oct. 1.—Callaway county is renowned for its fine mules, but not so this year. According to reports here not a mule has been brought for fattening purposes by Grand Prairie feeders. In recent years Grand Prairie feeders bought hundreds of the animals. Mule feeders declare they have lost millions of dollars since the World War, rarely getting a profit on their sales.

MARMORA IN 1864 AN ISOLATED PLACE

Great Changes Have Taken Place in Sixty Years.

MARMORA, Sept. 30.—Marmora of bygone days is hard to conjure up in present day imagination. With its lesser facilities, the upkeep of church and communal life entailed such struggles and self sacrifice, as little zest remain for, in this comparatively comfortable age. In the days under review, no one worked for self advertisement and diaries were short lived. Half a century ago and beyond that, Marmorians were too humble to extol their labors and too busy to chronicle the leading events of their village's history. The appearance of the first directory of the County of Hastings in A.D. 1864 provided the first advertisement of the general wealth of the district and outlined its activities. With the aid of its second volume, published in 1865, and with assistance from Marmora's oldest resident, Miss Angelina Bentley, the writer is enabled to gather up fragments of Marmora's past history and set them in order for lovers of tradition to appropriate, it is hoped, with some degree of interest.

"Marmora" is derived from a Greek word meaning "rock."

In all probability, the village received this name from the first settler of whom there is recollection. He was an Englishman named Hays. This gentleman was considered wealthy, owning some 1800 acres of mineral lands in Marmora township. One of Marmora's lesser streets today bears his name. The present soap factory is a transformation of the first house erected by him. It has aso served as the first school house of which there is recollection. As Mr. Hays failed financially, his property was taken over by an English company known as Forsyth, McGill, Burstall & Co. Owing to difficulties of transportation this company soon abandoned their project. They left their mark behind however, in the streets which bear their names. Later Marmora Iron Works were operated by an American company styling itself the Cobourg, Peterboro and Marmora Railway and Mining Company, of which W. P. Chamblis was managing director and David Bentley, the Marmora agent. It is recorded that these works were erected at a cost of over $100,000 and that over $300,000 were expended upon them up till 1865.

It will be readily understood that Marmora of seventy years ago was in the wilderness state. It was the happy hunting ground for Indians of the Crowe tribe whose villages were situated at Roseneath and Alnwick. These hunters would conclude their yearly hunt shortly before Christmas. Between Marmora and Stirling in those days, a mere cow path was the only line of travel. Those who had business in Stirling or Belleville travelled by horseback. From Stirling to Belleville if they wished, they might enjoy the comforts of a lumber waggon. Later came the extension of the county road as far as the steps of the present Royal Hotel.

The public cemetery in those days has been described as being no better than a potter's field. No fence surrounded it. Here and there, piles of stone indicated to the stranger that it had been an Indian burial ground. Burials were conducted with deference to position. In course of time, Mrs. Margaret Brady was instrumental in a bee being organized whereby the cemetery was cleaned and enclosed by a fence erected by Mr. William Leonard.

The first ecclesiastical edifice to be built was the old Roman Catholic church, west of Crowe River, whose ruins remain today. It is reputed as being over a century old. The services of other denominations were held alternatively and somewhat irregularly in the old Town Hall. It was no uncommon thing in those days for young ladies, as well as other folk, to ride horseback to Stirling to attend Divine worship and later on to Madoc also. Funerals were largely attended. If there was a funeral within ten miles, everyone went to it.

Approximately seventy years ago, seeing the children roaming at large on the Sabbath, Miss A. Bentley wisely conceived the idea of a united Sunday school. She gathered together in the Town Hall a motley group of young Anglicans, Methodists, Presbyterians and others, holding Sunday school every Sunday morning at nine o'clock. Very soon from the start she had an attendance of sixty-five children this number increasing as time went on. The children were instructed in the faith, exhorted to pray, and taught simple hymns. With scarcity of books, they were not asked to read but listened to addresses from their superintendent on the Gospel stories and other Bible teaching.

They attended Sunday school in simplest attire. The boys wore plain cotton pants and came bareheaded and barefooted. The girls wore plain dresses and it was the privileged few who wore boots. At the start the superintendent specified that she wanted the scholars to come clean and mentioned that she did not care so much how they were able to dress so long as they came neat and clean. Miss Bentley recalls, with humor, one effect of having given this counsel. On the second Sunday a little lad approached her, saying, "I went home and told mother what you said. She made me stay in bed on Saturday while she washed my shirt. Father bought a piece of soap and I went to the river and had a good wash. Look at my feet! See how clean they are." In course of time Mr. G. D. Bowen, J.P., postmaster of the village, lent valued assistance in her work.

The first postmaster of Marmora was a Mr. Fidley. Mail came from Stirling each day in the week save Thursday and Sundays. Envelopes were not used, letters being folded. Stamps were not thought of, the cost of transmission being written on the folded letter by the postmaster. A receipt for a registered letter took up as much room as a letter of average size today.

Marmora's first store was kept by the company operating the Iron Works. It stood near to the Pearce Company's present office. The meetings of Marmora's earliest Councils lasted two days, sometime being adjourned to the third. The councils were not lavish in their expenditures. People in those days had no livery to resort to. An old democrat belonging to Mr. G. D. Bowen, J.P. was loaned extensively to folk with business out of town. It is said that it rarely ever saw the home barn. A one horse wagon, the property of Mr. David Bentley, was also in constant demand.

The population of Marmora township in 1830 was 369. In 1860, according to census returns, the population of Marmora and Lake was 1499. At that time Lake township contained about 200 inhabitants which would leave about 1300 as residing in Marmora township. In 1865, the list of householders in Marmora numbered forty-nine.

Whereas in those earliest days Marmora had no resident priest or minister, it is left on record that in 1864 services were conducted in Marmora township (embracing the present village) by Rev. E. H. M. Baker Church of England, Rev. John A. Dowler, Wesleyan Methodist, Rev. N. H. Howard, Episcopal Methodist, Rev. M. McGilvray, Presbyterian, and Rev. E. P. Lalor, Roman Catholic. All the foregoing gives but a glimpse into the Marmora of bygone days.

A most unusual will offered for probate in England not long ago was one which was written on an egg. The egg had been carefully "blown," and on it the testator had written in pencil a few words stating to whom his possesions were to go.

CHURCH MAY BUY OFFICIAL ORGAN

Board of Religious Education of Anglican Church Approves Purchase.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 30.— (Canadian Press.)—Purchase of The Canadian Churchman and its adoption as the official organ of the Anglican Church in Canada was discussed and approved at the closing session yesterday of the annual meeting of the General Board of Religious Education. The action of the board will be brought before the Executive Council of the Church Saturday, and the Council is expected to approve the recommendation and place it before the Synod.

During the debate at the board meeting yesterday Bishop Richardson of Fredericton referred to The Church Messenger, now the main Anglican publication in Canada, and said that this organ was "unworthy of representing the Church in Canada."

The report of the Parochial Board was presented to the meeting. Total circulation of literature in the past year had aggregtaed 131,290 volumes and leaflets. The estimated expenditure in the Editorial Department for 1927 was placed at $52,870, in the Supply Department at $10,392, and in the Church House at $2,520. The report showed that all the departments coming under the board were self-supporting.

The General Board of Religious Education passed a resolution in appreciation of the work accomplished along the lines of religious education by the school teachers of the Dominion, "who have taught religion and morals by example and precept."

The annual meeting of the Board of Management of the Missionary Society of the Church of England in Canada will open here to-day.

NORWOOD NEWS.

On Monday afternoon Mrs. B. W. Squire held a reception at her home on Queen street in honor of her cousin, Mrs. William Rutherford, of Nelson, B. C., who is her guest. The house was profusely decorated with cut flowers and autumn leaves. Many old friends of Mrs. Rutherford and a number of new ones took this opportunity of meeting Mrs. Rutherford before her return to the West.

The Ladies' Aid of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church met in the Sunday School on Tuesday afternoon, when arrangements were made for serving meals in the dining-room on the Fair Grounds during both days of the Fair, which are Tuesday and Wednesday, October 12 and 13.

A social evenng was held by the Young People's League of the United Church on Monday evening in the Sunday School room, and was well attended. A good time was enjoyed by all present, and at the close dainty refreshments were served.

Friends of Mr. and Mrs. Fred. Fry will be pleased to learn that they have decided to remain in Norwood. Mr. Fry had secured a position in Kingsville and intended leaving in a short time for that place. However, he has been persuaded to stay in the village.

Mr. James Baskin was in Toronto the first of the week on business.

Mr. Gerald Gardner returned from Western Canada on Sunday night. He left for Toronto on Monday to resume his studies at the Dental College in that city.

Miss Marie Heffernan has secured a position in Windsor and left the first of the week to begin her work.

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 1, 1926.

. . . MIRROR OF THE PUBLIC MIND . . . INTERPRETER OF THE PUBLIC INTENT . . . TROUBLER OF THE PUBLIC CONSCIENCE.

A RADIO CLUB.

Preliminary steps are under way to organize among radio enthusiasts in Peterboro a listeners-in association for the purpose of improving reception conditions in the city.

This is a movement that ought to commend itself to all set-owners in Peterboro.

Some 700 possessors of radios here pay a license to the Dominion Government, and it is felt that in return for this license fee there should be some official assistance in eliminating some of the interference that makes things unpleasant for listeners-in.

The source of much of this interference, it is felt, can be located and conditions materially improved, and it is along these lines that it is hoped much progress can be made by a co-operative effort on the part of set-owners.

There should be no difficulty in enrolling a strong association among the many local people who are members of the nightly radio audience.

ADVERTISING CANADA.

There have been complaints from time to time in Canadian papers that this country does not receive nearly as much publicity in newspapers across the border as is given on this side to United States news.

In fact, at a meeting a year ago of American and Canadian publishers in Canada the point was made by several speakers that a great deal of space is given in Canadian newspapers to the interests of the United States, and that papers in the States seldom give any extended publicity to important things that are going on in Canada.

However, the October issue of the Review of Reviews makes up for a lot of this neglect in the past, for its space is chiefly devoted to telling its readers in the United States and the world over of the commercial, agricultural and economical development of Canada.

The wide circulation of the Review of Reviews makes this publicity of great importance to this country, especially as the articles have evidently been prepared with much care, and will advertise Canada along sound lines before a very fine class of readers.

DEMANDS FOR FREE SPACE.

The Examiner, in common with other Provincial newspapers, has been asked by the Ontario Government Board of Health to give free publicity to articles advertising the Dental Health Day to be held on Wednesday, October 20th.

Newspapers are always glad to assist every worthy movement, and it is recognized that proper dental attention is a very effective health aid, and that the public should realize that fact.

Yet in view of the rigid views of the dental profession in regard to newspaper advertising, views that ban such advertising as objectionable to professional dignity, it seems strange that newspapers should be called upon to stir up the dental business by giving free space to articles dealing with the danger of infected teeth and other similar topics.

The newspaper never sees the day go by that does not bring forth a demand for free space, in spite of the fact that advertising space is the commodity the paper sells and the commodity that keeps the machine running.

If the Ontario Government agrees with the dentists that personal advertising is a breach of professional etiquette and yet wishes to give the profession the benefit of publicity, the Government and not the newspapers should meet the cost of the propaganda.

THE MUNICIPAL DIRECTORY.

There has recently been published a most useful compendium of information on municipal life in the Dominion, entitled the Canadian Municipal Directory.

This two hundred and fifty page book gives for the first time concise and accurate information covering all the communities, and it will be a surprise to many to know that in our country there are no less than 4,000 urban and rural communities, each functioning under their own governmental system.

The contents of the volume is divided into three main chapters, the first being devoted to municipal personnel, including some twenty thousand names of municipalities and officials; part two includes reference information and includes a number of valuable articles on municipal government, as well as some forty pages devoted to statistical tabulation of financial statistics, and also figures concerning waterworks installations in Canada. The third part is devoted to an alphabetical list of supplies used by municipalities, with names of makers and dealers.

It is interesting to find that the municipal government system in Canada is supervised through a Provincial department in each Province, with the exception of the Maritime Provinces, and as a result the administration of our urban and rural communities is steadily improving as a whole.

The Canadian Municipal Directory is distinctly a valuable publication to all those interested in municipal government. It is well arranged and the information readily available. The work has been endorsed by the municipal departments throughout Canada as being of the greatest value, and there is no doubt that it fills a long felt want in Canada.

The editor and founder is H. Wisely Bragg, who has been associated with the publication of municipal magazines in Canada for many years.

AS CHICAGO SEES US.

It is a recognition of the new importance which, in the opinion of the world, the British overseas Dominions have attained internationally that the Imperial Conference to be held next month in London should attract so much attention outside the Empire. That the interest thus shown should be especially keen in the United States is quite understandable. Speaking the same language and possessing largely the same traditions, and with ideals almost identical, it is natural that the American people should be concerned with the doings of a neighbor who divides with them much the greatest portion of the North American Continent. And in their discussion of the purpose and the outcome upon the future relations of Great Britain and the daughter States of the London Conference we find, in the main, fair statements of the questions that will come up for consideration, and sympathy with those views which will make for a stronger and more compact Imperial Commonwealth.

Here and there, however, we are confronted in responsible papers with articles conveying an impression for which there is no real justification regarding the attitude of the self-governing Dominions toward the question of Empire relations. Such an article appearing in a recent issue of The Chicago Tribune gives a distorted conception of Canada's position on the problem of Dominion status. It tells us that "Henry Bourassa, a leader of the Canadian Nationalists, proposes to confer with Desmond Fitzgerald of the Irish Free State and Premier Hertzog of South Africa," and that this is interpreted in London "as a clear intimation that Canada, South Africa and Ireland are preparing to co-operate to obtain greater independence of action."

How any such consultation between these gentlemen could possibly influence the position taken by Canada at the Imperial Conference it is difficult to realize. Mr. Bourassa, even if he purposes conferring with the Irish and South African delegates, which we doubt, cannot speak for Canada. This Dominion will be represented by the Canadian Premier, who is specifically pledged to maintain Canada's position within the Empire. That undertaking is given in unambiguous terms which cannot be misinterpreted. A meeting such as The Tribune suggests would partake of the character of an intrigue, in which Mr. Bourassa could not very well afford to be implicated, and which would be regarded in Canada as a very sinister political adventure.

But The Tribune is satisfied that Canada is going one way—the way which leads to separation—and the way opposite to that which Australia will pursue. It rests its argument on resentment in Canada that it was not consulted when the Locarno treaties were being drafted—resentment which The Tribune claims, exists in South Africa and Ireland. There is no such feeling of resentment in Canada, nor to any appreciable extent in the other States, and the Locarno treaties will come up for free discussion when the Conference meets.

But it is on the question of Imperial defense that The Tribune sees likelihood of dissension at the Conference. Australia and New Zealand, it says, need the protection that British power affords, and Canada does not. "Canada knows," it declares, "that she can rely upon the United States to protect her territorial integrity under the terms of the Monroe Doctrine." This is a highly interesting statement indeed, and full of purport. But Canada, if she ever needs assistance, will prefer to obtain it from her own people, to whom she is bound by the closest ties of interest and affection—people in whom her trust is placed. She will not call in even a friendly neighbor to save her. History teaches the unwisdom of such a procedure, and Canada has too much to lose to place her security in the hands of an outsider. The Monroe Doctrine does not apply to her, and her people are content that it never shall. Such overtures as this make it only the more desirable that this Dominion, as Australia and New Zealand do, should perceive the present advantages it enjoys and the future benefits it will obtain as part and parcel of an Empire whose invincible strength and progressive policy will be employed for the common good of all.—The Globe.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Peterboro has made a royal response to the Royals' appeal.

A three-year term for Aldermen is again being mooted in Belleville. The system is all right if the people are lucky enough to pick the right men.

The feeling against hampering the new Government by opposing its Ministers in the by-elections is so strong that it is not expected there will be any contests.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Oct. 1 (Canadian Press).—The export trade in Canadian grain on the Montreal market yesterday was again extremely dull. The demand for cash grain room was also limited, but rates were maintained.

The trade in cash grain was also slow, but owing to the strength that developed in the Winnipeg market for oats, spot prices for car lots were advanced one cent per bushel.

While a stronger tone prevailed in the local Spring wheat flour market, prices showed no change. A moderate amount of business was worked with foreign and local buyers. Prices for all grades of Winter wheat flour were well maintained under a steady demand.

An active business was done in all lines of millfeed and values were steady. The trade in standard grades of rolled oats was fair and prices were unchanged.

The egg market was moderately active and the undertone to the market was firm. The receipts were 584 cases.

The feature of the potato trade was the weaker feeling that developed in the market for Quebec stock, and prices scored a decline of 10 cents per bag owing to the more liberal offerings. Sales of odd cars were made at $1 per bag, while the market for New Brunswick Cobblers was steady under a fair demand at $1.30 per bag of 90 pounds, ex-track.

Extreme dullness marked the butter trade and prices were fractionally easier. The receipts were 2,325 cases.

The demand from foreign and local buyers for cheese continued quiet and values were again shaded. The receipts were 6,654 boxes.

The trade in beans was quiet, but as the offerings were not large the undertone to the market was steady with car lots of choice white handpicked quoted at $2.25 per bush., and smalled quantities at $2.35 to $2.45 per bushel.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Oct. 1 (Canadian Press). — Except during belated month-end liquidation just at the last, wheat showed an advance in price most of the time yesterday. New export sales of North American wheat totalled more than 1,000,000 bushels and France was also buying future deliveries. Closing quotations on wheat, however, were unsettled at the same as Wednesday's finish, to 1 5-8c lower, the latter for September contracts, with 1-4 to 1 1-4 down; oats at 1-2c decline to 1-8c advance, and provisions varying from 12c off to 30 to 32c up.

In the late dealings liberal profit taking sales of wheat shaved down early gains scored by December and May deliveries. Meanwhile a sharp break in the value of September wheat contracts came in the final 15 minutes of trading. Houses with Eastern connections did much of the selling just before the day ended, the apparent purpose being to adjust accounts and to begin with a clean slate for October. Until last evening, evening up process eclipsed other transactions, the course of the market was chiefly upward owing to storms in Canada and because of reports of adverse crop prospects in Argentina.

Broadening of the volume of trade in wheat was an outstanding feature yesterday, business being larger than for several days back.

Corn and oats swayed with wheat. The country sold more than 150,000 bushels of old corn to arrive here, and Eastern demand was slow. More corn in elevators was posted as out of condition.

Hog cholera reports were responsible for an upturn in the provision market.

CHICAGO CATTLE

CHICAGO, Oct. 1 (Canadian Press).—Cattle 8,000; native fed steers and yearlings grading good and choice scarce, mostly strong to 25c higher, yearlings and medium weights up most; $12.40 paid for 1,011 pound yearlings; mixed steers and heifers scaling 720 pounds $13.35; she stock and bulls fully steady; vealers 25 to 50c lower; mostly $15.40 to $15.50 to packers.

Hogs, 20,000; desirable hogs generally strong to 10c higher than best prices Wednesday, or 15 to 25c higher than average; pigs and light lights fully 25c higher; bulk desirable 170 to 300 pound butchers, $13.30 to $13.75; heavier butchers downward to $12.50;; bulk packing sows $11.25 to $12; shippers took 4,000; estimated holdover 9,000.

Sheep 19,000; better grades fat lambs steady to strong; in-between and lower grades about steady; bulk fat range lambs $13 to $13.50; choice lambs held about $13.85 late; sheep steady; bulk fat ewes $5 to $6.50; feeding lambs steady to strong; bulk $12.25 to $13; top $13.25.

HOW DO YOU SAY IT?

(By C. N. Lurie.)

Common Errors in English and How To Avoid Them.

"AMONG" AND "AMIDST"

(By The McClure Syndicate, Inc.)

"The many who are silent are always judged by the few among them who are not."

This sentence, taken from a recent newspaper article, seems at first reading to contain a contradiction. It seems to say that there are persons who are both silent and not silent, which, is, of course, absurd. The writer could have avoided the possible misunderstanding by writing:

"The many who are silent are always judged by the few amidst them who are not." "Among" has several meanings. One of them is, "mixed or intermingled with; surrounded by." Another is, "conjoned, or associated with, or making part of the number of; in the number or class of."

It is this second meaning which probably comes first to the mind of the person who reads the sentence with which this article opens.

RINGSIDE TICKETS.

Dear Sir,—Could you please settle an argument we had at our shop and tell me what were the prices for the ringside seats for the Dempsey-Tunney match. One fellow said they were $27.50, but I couldn't believe it and so I am writing to ask you. Please answer this in the "Voice of the People."

Thank you very much.

Yours truly,
A Constant Reader.

The seats for the big fight ranged from $5 to $27.50, the latter, of course, for ringside seats. Incidentally 28,903 tickets at $27.50 were sold.—Sporting Editor.

KNOCKOUT VICTORIES.

Sporting Editor, Examiner.

Dear Sir,—I am writing to you for information regarding boxing bouts and hope you are able to favor me.

A day previous to the Tunney and Dempsey fight of last week, you published a schedule of champions dating back to John L. Sullivan.

I enclose a clipping from the Toronto Star, which says that the heavyweight championship crown has never passed from one man to another on decision points for over 40 years till last week.

In your schedule printed last week you state in several cases where it did by challengers stopping the champion, and in other cases you state it passed from one to another by the challenger defeating the champion; only in a few cases do you mention knock-out. If you are right in your schedule then please give your idea of the Toronto Star printing what I have mentioned. Perhaps both are right, inasmuch as you mean knock-out by using the word defeat and stopped. Please publish this information I have asked in your valuable paper and thanking you in advance, I am, yours very truly,

John E. Cahill.

Both the Star and The Examiner were right. The heavyweight championship never changed hands on points for over 40 years until Tunney last week won the title by getting the decision over Dempsey. In The Examiner's table of champions, "stopped" or "defeated" was used several times instead of "knockout" to avoid repetition of the latter word. Whenever used these words meant the winner had won either by a clean or a technical knockout.—Sporting Editor.

HARVESTING POTATOES.

Dear Sir:

The remark is passed these days that potatoes are going to be scarce again this winter as they are simply rotting in the ground. Of course, they will be scarce when farmers leave their potatoes in the ground to rot after the tops are dead and they are stopped growing, especially when the weather is so wet as it is this fall.

When potatoes are done growing they should be dug and put in pits in the field and covered over with a thin layer of straw and earth where they will be kept dry until the frost comes, when they should then be put in a dry cellar.

Lyrics Of Life

(By Douglas Malloch.)

PLAYING CAR

I live up yonder, up the crick,
And haff the time my Ma is sick,
And haff the time my Pa can't find
A bit of work of any kind.
And yet we get a lot of good
From things he'd buy us if he could,
For playing car is lots of fun,
Almost as much as owning one.

One time my father had to go
To town to pay a bill we owe,
Because the interest came due,
And so he went, and took me, too.
I knew I'd see some children there
Who had the nicest clothes to wear,
And cars to ride in every day,
And nothing else to do but play.

I saw a boy who had on shoes,
A boy who had a car to use,
And there he sat and cried and cried—
He didn't seem as satisfied
As boys who didn't have a car.
And Father said, "That's how things are,
For dreaming things is lots of fun,
Almost as much as having one."

Then we went home, and then one day
That very boy rode up our way
And camped right there, and there they stayed,
Because we played and played and played.
I heard his father tell my dad,
Of all the days that boy had had,
That was the happiest by far—
And all we did was just play car.

SENATOR WAGES FIGHT ON TARIFF

Accepts Challenge of Democrats Who Attack Protection.

MILLS PROSPEROUS.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30 (Canadian Press).—The textile industry is in good shape and going to be better; the Republican campaign is in good shape and the election promises a happy outcome for the Administration, and if the Democrats want a fight on the tariff, which ought to be increased on certain commodities like the products of the New Bedford mills, they can have it.

Chairman Butler of the Republican National Committee, voiced these expressions of the general political situation after two conferences—one at breakfast and one at lunch—with President Coolidge. Senator Butler told the President, and told the newspaper correspondents later, that he had no misgivings as to the result of his own contest in Massachusetts, were his Democratic adversary, David I. Walsh, is doing himself no good by his assaults on the tariff.

Prosperity is the real issue of the campaign, according to Senator Butler. "The people of the country," he said, "want the Administration, now in the middle of its great work, to carry out the policies of the Republican party."

"The state of our prosperity is borne out by the bank statements, the statistics of home building, and the condition in the manufacturing industries. The textile industry is improving constantly; there is less unemployment than there was, and in a short while the mills will all be working full blast."

This led to his declaration of acceptance of the Democratic challenge on the tariff. The Senator was not quite sure of the procedure, but expressed his willingness to take on any Democratic assault on the sched-

SIX KILLED AT VERA CRUZ

Official Reports State Six Fatalities in Monday's Tornado.

VILLAGES DESTROYED.

MEGICO CITY, Oct. 1 (Canadian Press).—Official reports thus far state that six persons were killed in Monday's tornado which struck Vera Cruz and Jalapa, but reports are trickling in indicating that several villages in remote sections have suffered heavily.

Governor Jara of the State of Vera Cruz has reported that the hamlet of La Antigua has been wiped out but has made no mention of casualties. La Antigua has a population of not more than six hundred. Governor Jara also reported that landslides occurred in the mountainous districts, cutting off railway communication on the Interoceanic and Tecolonia line. In addition he reported the destruction of the San Francisco bridge which was erected at a cost of a million dollars.

Of the six persons officially announced dead, two were killed at Vera Cruz and four at Jalapa. Twenty houses were destroyed in the latter place when the river overflowed. The exact number of victims in the district will not be known until communications have been fully restored.

Dry Law Enforcers Quit Bread and Water To Banquet

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1 (A.P.)—After slightly more than a forty-eight hour test, two Department of Justice agents last night abandoned a self-imposed bread and water diet by attending a banquet.

Howard Jones and Arthur Henderson, assistants to Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, who is in charge of prohibition enforcement in the Justice Department, decided to try the diet after hearing that it had been prescribed for liquor law violators by a Nebraska court. Both declared they felt none the worse for the experience.

"A sentence of bread and water for liquor violations," Mr. Jones said, "is not bad. In fact it ought to do the prisoner good. We both feel all right and have lost a little weight—which, of course, will hurt neither of us."

ASK DOMINIONS TO HELP DEFEAT FILM MONOPOLY

Imperial Conference To Discuss United States at Sittings

WANT FAIR SHOW.

Many New Subjects on Agenda Paper Up For Discussion.

LONDON, Oct. 1 (United Press).—The British Government is apparently determined to enlist as much support as possible from the Dominions to insure the granting of a fair show for British films as opposed to American. A memorandum has been prepared giving the latest information regarding the British film industry, and this has been sent to all Dominion governments, so that when the question comes up at the forthcoming Imperial Conference, the Premiers of the several Dominions will be well-informed on the subject.

The plan favored by the British Government involves a compulsory quota system by which a certain proportion of all films shown throughout the Empire must be of British make, in order to break the American system of block booking. The Government will argue that in certain respects American films are a real menace to the best interests of the Empire, unless a proportion of British is also shown.

Heavy Programme.

The accumulation of subjects on the agenda paper for the conference, which is growing steadily as the date for the meeting approaches, ranges from discussion of a common Empire foreign policy down to research in afforestation, and so heavy is the programme now, that many assert that if the conference is forced to give its attention to all of these subjects, it might last for several months.

As Premier Mackenzie King will only be able to stay in London for a short period, it is obvious that he can only consider the most important and pressing of these subjects which are down for discussion. Of these the outstanding are foreign affairs, Imperial relations, and migration within the Empire.

Y. P. L. MEETING.

Good Attendance When Mission Circle Puts on Programme.

MILLBROOK, Oct. 1.—There was a good attendance at the Young People's League meeting on Monday evening, the Golden Links Mission Circle being responsible for the programme.

Mrs. J. McKnight, president, was in the chair, and Miss Lila Whyte read the Scripture lesson from Hebrews the eleventh chapter, "The Westminister Abbey of Faith."

A solo, "Forgive, O Lord, I Pray" was sung by Mrs. G. W. Sayles, and the first chapter of the new study book, "New Days in Old India," by Dr. Frank H. Russell, was taken up, a ready interest apparently being aroused by the material presented.

The Tuxis Square will be responsible for the Citizenship topics during the current year, the C.G.I.T. group for the "Canadian Authors" study each month Mrs. P. Stinson and Mrs. G. W. Sayles having the social and missionary evenings, respectively, under their charge.

Next Monday the annual Rally Day programme will be followed, and the pastor urged the appointment of a delegate to the United church conference being held in Massey Hall, Toronto, from Tuesday to Thursday of next week; it is expected that at least four representatives will go from the local congregation.

TWO INJURED BY EXPLOSION

Hot Water Boiler For Heating Explodes, Doing Great Damage.

HAD BEEN REPAIRED.

LONDON, Ont., Oct. 1.—Mr. and Mrs. James Drake, aged about 45, are in St. Joseph's Hospital dangerously injured as the result of the explosion of a hot-water boiler used for heating in the boarding-house of A. J. Scott, 566 Wellington Street, last night. Dr. Percy Banghart, who was called, stated that Mrs. Drake's condition is most critical, she having been terribly burned by the boiling water and steam. Mr. Drake is suffering from a bad scalding, and also injuries about the chest and head, but his condition is not so serious.

According to the story told Fire Chief Aitken, plumbers had been working on the boiler. When they left the place the family started a fire. Shortly afterward a gurgling noise was heard, and, becoming alarmed, Mr. and Mrs. Drake, who were boarders, went into the basement to draw the fire. While Mr. Drake was doing this, the explosion occurred.

Apart from the injuries sustained by the couple, the house, a large terra-cotta brick, formerly used as a college by the Ursuline Order, was badly damaged. Windows were blown out and several doors, frames and all, were torn from the walls by the force of the explosion. The property loss is around $2,000.

U. S. TO CHANGE POLICY ON DEBTS

London Times Expects New Attitude in Next Five Years.

NOT SENTIMENT.

LONDON, October 1 (Canadian Press).—Discussing the impending elections in the United States, the Times, in an editorial yesterday, contends that although at present there is no prospect of the people of the United States modifying their attitude on European debts, "the next five years will show that reparations and debts will not and can not be paid in any such measure as the politicians now declare, and that the politicians themselves will be forced to admit the impossibility that reparations and debts can be paid at all if the United States tariff is maintained at its present level."

The cancellation or revision of debts, the newspaper thinks, will not be sentimentally inspired, but recognized as an act "of wisdom and necessity."

"It is only bare justice to admit," the Times adds, "that this recognition may be somewhat deferred without, for this reason, seeing in the U. S. a Shylock without conscience and without heart."

SALVATION ARMY HARVEST FESTIVAL

Good Meetings Held By Campbellford Corps at Week End.

CAMPBELLFORD, Oct. 1—The Salvation Army, under the leadership of Captain Wright, held its annual Harvest Festival on September 26 and 27. The services on Sunday were in charge of the local officers, while on Monday evening Lieut.-Colonel Taylor, Field Secretary for Eastern Canada, and Brigadier Bloss, D.C. were the speakers and a splendid meeting was held.

On Tuesday evening at eight o'clock Captain Wright, as auctioneer, sold all the fruit, vegetables, pies, etc., that had been donatted for the sale, and a good amount of money was made. Miss Beatrice Colalrd, a member of the Corps who had been ill for the past year, donated a large pasteboard drum and drumsticks, decorated with the Army colors and filled with a variety of good things. There was great competition for the ownership of this novel donation. Capt. Wright finally winning out. Many handsome baskets, gaily decorated, were also sold.

ROSENEATH NEWS

ROSENEATH Sept. 30.—The re-opening of the United church will take pace next Sunday when Rev. Albert J. Moore of Toronto is expected to conduct the morning service at 10.30 a.m. and in the evening at 7.30 p.m.

A number from here attended ed harvest anniversary service at Alderville on Sunday to hear Rev. Jones of Warkworth deliver an excellent address.

In spite of the heavy rains on Saturday the Woman's Missionary Society held their afternoon tea, rather than postpone it, and were highly pleased at the results of the afternoon, proceeds amounting to $19.

King's Mission Band will meet next Saturday afternoon. October 2, in the old Presbyterian church. Everybody welcome.

Mrs. A. Lapp and family spent Sunday with friends in Campbellford.

Mr. Charlton Grigg is attending Agricultural College at Guelph.

Miss Bertha Clarke spent the week end at her home in Campbellford.

Miss Lottie Nichol is visiting friends in Norwood.

Mrs. E. Brown and family visited friends in Warkworth on Sunday.

Mr. Kyle Brown is home from the Cobourg General Hospital and is slowly improving from his serious illness.

DEANERY W. A. MEETING HELD

Ladies of Victoria Branches Gather at Millbrook.

DR. BOYLE SPEAKS

MILLBROOK, Sept. 30.—The combined Rural Deanery meeting of the Women's Auxiliary and the clergy of the Deanery of Victoria was held at Ida on Tuesday, Sept. 28, St. John's Church and the new Parish Hall being used for the sessions.

About two hundred delegates were in attendance, and among the clergymen present were: Rev. Rural Dean Kidd, of Cannington; Rev. Canon Marsh, of Lindsay; Rev. Mr. Bruce, of Grafton; Rev. A. Weir, of Omemee; Rev. T. R. Haughton, of Bobcaygeon; Rev. Mr. Gallagher, of Lindsay; Rev. Canon Allen, of Millbrook; Rev. P. R. Howard, of Millbrook; Rev. Mr. Fierheller, of Bethany; Rev. Dr. Boyle, of Cobourg.

The interior of the church was beautified with the "Harvest Home" decorations of grains, fruits and flowers, left in place from the previous Sunday's services, and the convenience of the commodious new hall, used for the first time for such a gathering, was much appreciated.

The rector of the parish, Rev. Canon Allen, had charge of the morning worship service at 11 o'clock, Rev. Mr. Boyle, rector of St. Peter's Church, Cobourg, preaching the sermon, choosing as his text Genesis 1:1, "In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth," and characterizing this statement as "the beginning of the revelation of God to us."

Stating that he was dealing with a subject probably of more interest to a gathering of clergymen, the strife between science and religion which has been creating a certain disturbance and unrest for the past fifty years, the speaker, though limited for time so that the barest outline of his topic was given out all that was possible, yet brought evidence to prove that the claims of evolution do not necessarily mean the abandonment of Christian faith.

"The scientific attitude of mind it is necessary to adopt. It means simply this, that we have an honest desire to get at the truth of things. If our faith will not stand the light of investigation and research, so much the worse for our religion."

The speaker dealt with three great epochs and their effect upon the church's thought, beginning with the Copernican theory of the universe advanced in 1537. Then the impetus to the study of geology was given in the early part of the 19th century by such men as Sir William Dawson, whereby the general opinion of the age of the earth had to be revised, and again in 1858 when Charles Darwin published his epoch-making book, "The Origin of Species," and later "The Ascent of Man." The latter made evolution a popular system, created a profound impression, and the church rushed to the defence of the faith. Many other branches of science have made great advance as well.

"Certain facts have been established by the research of reputable men of science that bear upon our Christian religion and faith, and we must face these squarely. We are apt to think of evolution as a monster, ready to destroy and eat up our Christian faith," the speaker maintained, outlining, under three heads, the claims which this evolutionary theory implies. First, it teaches that within every organism there is an inner capacity for development, even new species being created through this process. Second, it means the power of adjustment to environment which comes about by a gradual process. Third, it teaches the survival of the fittest, nature providing for the weeding out of the unfit by natural process.

"There are certain facts which have been established by evolution which reputable clergy do not refuse to believe. For instance, the human being and the anthropoid ape have striking similarities that make it impossible to deny that in some far back age they had a common parentage. Many good men of the brightest intellect, the deepest thought, and finest Christian experience, accept the theory of evolution up to a certain point—only so far as science has established its thesis by actual proof.

"All law is divine; there is not a material law and a spiritual law, with danger of coming into conflict. Through centuries of history and in the physical and mental life there is a slow gradual development. It is a mistake to draw a line of demarcation between the material and the spiritual, for there is only one agent throughout it all, and that power is divine.

"Christianity is scarcely affected at all by the doctrine of evolution, though some regard it with horror, fearing it will destroy our faith; but accepting the New Testament as true, we are lifted into a realm far above its teachings and claims. Whatever our ancestors, we are today reasoning, reasonable, human beings. To me, so far from darkening the horizon, it really illuminates it, for behind all the material there is the spiritual holding sway.

"Scientists solve one puzzle only to find another beyond it demanding explanation. Their theories may explain in part, but fall very far short of solving all the phenomona I see about me. Science still leaves us with the great first cause; the foundations remain, for in the beginning God created the heavens and the earth.

"God has revealed to us what science has no means of revealing, so faith is still secure, and we hold to the verities of our Christian religion."

An impressive hour followed the sermon when the celebration of the holy communion took place, Rev. Canon Allen and Rev. Dr. Boyle officiating.

An interval for dinner came at 12.30, the meal being served in the basement of the Parish Hall, the ladies of St. John's branch of the W. A. providing the meal and giving every attention to the wants of the guests. Rev. Rural Dean Kidd, of Cannington, expressed the appreciation of the clergy and the other delegates for the generous hospitality extended.

Mrs. P. W. R. Boyd, of Bobcaygeon, Deanery Officer, presided at the afternoon gathering of the W. A., held in the auditorium of the hall, and Mrs. (Canon) Allen gave the address of welcome.

Miss Twamley, of Lindsay, read the Secretary's report, and in answer to the roll call, the following auxiliaries responded: St. Paul's, Bailleboro; St. John's, Ida; Trinity, Cavan; St. Thomas', Millbrook; Bobcaygeon, Blackstock, Cannington, St. John's, Emily; Fenelon Falls, St. Paul's, Lindsay; Bethany and Omemee. There were a goodly number of representatives from each of these branches, only Beaverton and Sunderland failing to send delegates. The reports in each case were most encouraging and showed much faithful service in the line of study and work, and a substantial sum raised throughout the Deanery for missionary and parochial purposes.

Mrs. Boyd was re-elected to her office by acclamation, having already been Deanery Officer for the past two years to the apparent satisfaction of the auxiliary workers. The invitation of the Blackstock branch to hold the next annual meeting at St. John's Church in that town was accepted with thanks.

The first address was given by Mrs. (Rev.) P. R. Howard, who very kindly allowed herself to be persuaded to fill the position of substitute, two speakers from Toronto having been expected, but failed to appear.

Mrs. Howard was listened to with both interest and profit as she gave some personal experiences of work with her husband as missionaries at Rupert's House, James Bay, where they received supplies but once a year and mail only twice in the twelve months. In 1913, a bride of but three months, she and her husband had started from Montreal on the two months' journey to their parish in the far north, the last forty-five miles being made in an open boat, the speaker suffering from sea-sickness as a consequence.

"The Indians were all down to meet us, and they afterward told the fur-traders that the new clergyman was a nice young man, and he had brought an old woman with him as his housekeeper," Mrs. Howard related, her hearers laughing outright as she made the statement.

The general ignorance of Rupert's House, which the missionaries found in most quarters before going there to labor, was explained by the fact that it was then supported by the Mother Church in England, but in 1920 the Canadian church took over the Indian work. They were embarrassed to find that medical knowledge and practice was expected from the missionary and his wife, and that they also must teach the school.

"Tuberculosis is prevalent among the Indians, owing to insufficient clothing and under-nourishment, especially among the children who suffer much from convulsions. Every case of illness we had we took to God in prayer, and as a result we were much blessed. It comforts the Indians if you look after their children, and you then have an opportunity of winning them for Christ."

The Indian children acquire a surprising amount of knowledge in a comparatively short time, Mrs. Howard said, and added that prayer, perseverance and a willingness to do whatever task God asked of them, had brought to their efforts the measure of success with which they had been crowned.

Cake-making when no eggs were available was quite a task for the missionary's wife, especially as a large quantity was required when a Christmas tree and supper were being held. The custom of calling on New Year's Day evidently prevails among the Indians, for one hundred and twenty of their parishioners were entertained, unexpectedly, on the first of such occasions after going to their new field. Generous supplies of cake were consumed then.

"Our Indians love their church, and no weather is bad enough to keep them at home. I've known them to travel twenty days' journey over ice that would hardly hold them to be present at holy communion service on Easter Sunday.

"My husband had six and even seven services a Sunday in the summer months. The Indians come for the pure gospel, and will sit eagerly drinking it in, and after becoming Christians are devotedly faithful. They love to sing," the speaker added, and made a strong plea for sending a good instrument to aid in this part of their worship. Having been organist at Rupert's House, she knew something of the "asthmatic organ" which had been in use there.

The bales sent are much appreciated, and Mrs. Howard urged the Dorcas Secretaries, "Do put in some patches; they have practically nothing with which to mend their garments."

The address was closed with an earnest appeal for more prayer on the part of the workers at home, the Indian girls, especially, because of temptations to which they are subjected, needing care and divine protection. Also, because Rupert's House is now without a missionary, she pleaded for prayer that a consecrated missionary might be ly sent.

The Secretary announced offertory of $21.77, and on of Mrs. Allen and Mrs. C. M. macott, this amount, less ex was voted to the educationa of the church.

Rev. Dr. Boyle gave the c ing address, by request of the Dean, speaking on the subject Present Crisis of the Chur England," referring to it explosive topic, but one of interest."

TREASURE HUNT WILL INTEREST ALL PETERBORO

Prize For Lucky Finder of Key is Fifty Dollars.

EVERYONE TRY.

Has Attracted Large Following in Other Cities Recently.

Peterborough will follow the example of London and New York.

No sport has had such a success in London and New York as has had the treasure search. In London, this search for a sum of money or a valuable object hidden somewhere in the city has been the favorite pastime of English society.

These treasure seekers are seen everywhere. On foot, in the motor car, in the taxi-cab, on horseback, they are to be seen passing through the streets, children, elderly people young people of both sexes, all anxiously searching, stopping a moment near a seeming hiding place to count their steps, turning to the right, then to the left, examining the spot carefully in all its corners and, disappointed, suddenly setting out again on another course towards another place.

This is the treasure hunt.

In New York, this treasure hunt has reached gigantic proportions, like everything done or happening in that city.

The treasure hunt has captivated thousands and thousands of devotees. Huge crowds have been seen gathered at a given spot, where the treasure has been supposed to be hidden, searching feverishly to discover it. The enthusiastic search by an amused crowd, a search full of unforeseen and comic incidents, never wearies the adepts who are never astonished no matter what turns up.

This is called the search for the Black Pirate's Treasure and the original search was directed by the famous cinema actor, Douglas Fairbanks himself.

In this search it was necessary to find the key which led to the Black Pirate's treasure.

For more than a week a New York paper gave each day some definition. These definitions were those of words which it was necessary to discover. Taken together, the words formed a phrase which indicated clearly, on the last day, where the treasure was hidden. During the week, most of the entrants had begun the search following the details they had already received. Some amusing mistakes were made, but many were there who with very little to guide them, simply by skill of their deductions, came very near to the desired haven.

But the sight of the vast crowd gathered on the last day at the place near which the treasure was hidden! It was a telephone employee, named Edward F. Cummings who discovered the key, which permitted him to claim the Treasure, the sum of money which had been offered as a prize. It is impossible to describe the joy of the happy man who gained the prize, in the face of such a windfall. It was well merited for if he gained the treasure, he did so by exhibiting a veritable treasure of intelligence and finesse. All agreed that the solution demanded many other qualities.

Peterborough has now made this treasure hunt its own.

It commenced on Thursday. A key has been hidden in a certain spot in the city.

Get on the job, and if you discover the key you will receive from the newspaper "The Examiner", the merited recompense which consists of the sum of $50 in gold. But how are you going to find any thing so small as a key in such a large city as Peterborough? "Ah ten! You have overlooked the assistance given by the Black Pirate. He will not leave you without help. Thanks to him, you will have a riddle which will give you some detail as to the place where the hidden key will be found.

At the end of the term you will be able to form a complete phrase. This phrase will, if you have succeeded in forming it, be sufficiently clear to permit of your locating the spot without difficulty. We will give every day, three definitions. Each of these definitions will be that of the word which it is necessary to discover. These words will form the complete phrase necessary to find the treasure. It will then only be necessary to arrange them in the proper order, for it is intended to place them otherwise than in logical sequence.

Now it only remains to you to begin to exercise your faculties and to commence without delay the search for the treasure. The treasure is hidden for you.

Look For It.

In order to be sure of arriving in time at the last day you must not neglect a single day to consult the paper and study carefully the definitions we give you.

There is nothing to prevent the search beginning now, if anyone thinks that he has, possibly any day, sufficient clues available.

Fall in then for the hunt for the Black Pirate's Treasure.

The key is waiting for you. Look today for the large ad. with the words.

SYNOPSIS

His father's warning—"Take women's love scornfully—and forget"—has made Juan the world's greatest lover. His cynicism is checked by Madonna-like Adriana Varanese; loving her, he reforms, but incurs the enmity of infamous Lucretia Borgia, who loves him, and Donati, her kinsman, who covets Adriana. Circumstances destroy Juan's faith in Adriana. He becomes cynical again. He kills Donati; Adriana flees; her father is killed and Juan is flung into a dungeon, refusing Lucretia's offer of freedom if he will give her devotion. Trying to escape, he hears the jailers coming—

CHAPTER XI.—Continued.

He would have smiled had he heard the order which the keeper gave his men.

"If Her Excellency does not arrive in five minutes, proceed with the Spaniard's execution."

Amusing, that Lucretia should wish to remain with him even unto death!

The men were walking along the stone corridor now; the chains dragged behind them, clanking out a song of approaching death.

Juan turned toward the opening in the wall that led to his own cell. He must go back, so that they would find him there.

But the madman threw himself before the opening in the wall, grabbed Juan by the shoulders. His strength was superhuman.

"Not death for you!" he cried. "You shall live. You shall endure every torture your victims knew. Never shall you know peace until their score is evened!"

Juan struggled frantically with him, but was helpless in the other's grasp. He felt himself being dragged across the floor. Rinaldi knelt down, still keeping a firm hold of him, and fumbled about until he found the iron ring in the door of the trap in the floor. For an instant he released his hold in Juan, and with a mighty effort pulled the door open. Then, grabbing Juan by the shoulders again, he thrust him through the opening, through which the waters of the Tiber came surging.

For a moment Juan let himself be carried by them. The current caught him, would have swung him swiftly into midstream, but he clutched at the masonry of the prison as he passed.

The great stones were slimy after years of immersion in the water, but once Juan caught at a jutting corner and clung for an instant; again, beginning to swim strongly, he was able to cling to the edge of a great block of stone.

Prepared for another such opportunity, he seized it when it came, clung to the stone against which the waters dashed him, and drew himself up a little way, then a little further.

He clung there for a moment, looking down at the swirling waters below. How close they were. How easy it would be to let go the rock and be carried by the Tiber to the death for which he had longed. He relaxed the fingers of one hand, then suddenly tightened his grip again.

For in that moment new life had come to him, a new purpose. Suddenly he was prepared to fight death as valiantly as ever he had fought it; prepared to cherish the life he had so longed to throw away. Adriana—it was as if her arms were around him, her heart beating against his.

He was convinced that what Lucretia Borgia had said was true. Adriana was there in the prison, somewhere, and he must find her and save her. He must live!

There, face to face with death, he was facing truth as well. And he knew that his suspicions had been baseless, that Adriana was all that was good and pure and lovely, and that it lay in his destiny to rescue her.

It came to him like a revelation from the God to Whom he had seen her pray. And, too, there came strength to make the almost superhuman effort that must be made.

Clinging to the slimy, gray stones of the prison, Juan drew back his head and laughed at the dangers that lay ahead. For he knew that he could win through them, that he would be carried along by the strength of the love which he had tried to kill; that as it had tortured and tormented him, so it would help him also.

Adriana's love had changed him, made a new man of him; his doubts of her had made him a beast capable of such cruelty as that which had resulted in the death of the Marchesa Rinaldi.

And now this new, abiding faith in her made Juan come into his own, showed him the man he was meant to be.

He climbed the wall, slowly, with bleeding hands. There was a window in the wall, one wider than the one in the cell into which he had been thrust; reaching it, he clung to the sill, bracing his feet against a narrow ledge of stone, and looked in.

There in the cell was Adriana, stretched on the rack which was one of the most fiendish of the devices used by the Borgias to torture their victims. Her lovely face looked as if the Angel of Death had already begun to shelter her with his wings. Her slender arms were drawn to their fullest length. Her body was as limp as if its spirit had already flown. Only in her great dark eyes was there life; defiantly they looked down at the man who, working with small vials of bright colored liquids, paused sometimes to leer up at her.

Adriana—and Neri, the sorcerer.

In that moment Juan realized anew his love for Adriana, and her worthiness of it. He knew that, no matter where and how she had bestowed her heart in the past, his love could never atone to her for the cruelty he had allowed to sway him.

And too, he realized that even if his suspicions had been justified, she was the very spirit of purity, that never could she have done anything wrong. Clinging to the window sill, looking in upon her loveliness, he dedicated his soul to her.

And within him rose again the will to fight for her, to save her from the fate which threatened. The Borgias, Neri, the most skilled sorcerer in all Europe—what could they do against the love he bore for that slender, lovely girl who, torn with agony, looked down from the rack in defiance of her enemies.

CHAPTER XII.

For a moment longer Don Juan clung to the ledge of stone outside the window of Adriana's cell, staring unbelievingly at the picture before him—the girl he loved stretched on the rack, and Neri the sorcerer mixing a poisonous brew which would end her life.

Then, slowly at first, his mind began to plan, to tell him what to do. Luckily there were no bars at the window; luckily, also, it was wide enough to permit him to squeeze his way into the cell.

Neri was wearing a long robe with a hood which was drawn over his head, and which prevented his hearing the slight noise Juan made as he wormed his way through the narrow opening. Adriana, fortunately, was too numb with pain and terror to realize what was happening; had she looked up and seen Juan, surely her expression would have warned Neri.

Cautiously Juan edged through the window and dropped to the stone floor. He leaned against the wall for an instant, summoning his strength.

Then, like a tiger, he leaped upon Neri.

The sorcerer was no mean foe. Lean, sinewy, he made a valiant fight, and Juan, weakened by his struggles with the huge stone in his own cell and by his climb up the side of the prison, found it hard to subdue the man.

(To be continued).

WARSAW CHURCHES.

Professor Irwin Preaches at United Church—Presbyterian Service.

WARSAW, Oct. 1.—Professor Irwin preached at Mr. Herrington's services on Sunday. The text was "Be not drunken with mine, but he filled with the spirit." It was not a temperance sermon, but a talk about differefnt spirits that may influence people. There will be no service in Warsaw United church on Sunday next, because of the anniversary services at Bethel.

There will be preaching services conducted by Mr. Dutton from Peterboro in the Presbyterian church at eleven o'clock a.m. next Sunday. There will be the regular Sunday school service.

The United church Sunday school held its rally service on Sunday morning. There were eighty present. The regulation rally day service program was used. Mr. E. Hawthorne gave a splendid talk on "Praise."

The heavy frosts of Saturday and Sunday nights damaged all but the more hardy pants. Tomatoes, potatoes, pumpkins, corn, beans and kindred things sufefred. Tomatoes generally, were just beginning to ripen nicely. A few fields of corn do not look much affected.

People were giving their corn as long as possible, but now there is a general rush to get at it, or at least, be prepared. A good many fields are already cut. A few farmers are stacking their corn.

Some are digging their field potatoes and find an excellent crop.

Some grain is turning out well. Henry Baten threshed two thousand five hundred bushels on Monday. There was a larger crop on a smaller acreage than for several years.

Others had smallers yields.

SCHOOL FAIRS

NORTH CAVAN.

MOUNT PLEASANT, Oct. 1.—On Monday afternoon the North Cavan Rural School Fair was held at Ida. A large number of people were in attendance, ideal weather adding much to the pleasure and success of the occasion.

Colonel Odell judged the school parade and the physical culture exercises. Some of the schools found it impossible to participate in the latter ,owing to the teachers finding it impossible to muster sufficient pupils to take part in this popular event, many children being still absent owing to sore arms, following the recent vaccination.

The winners in the parade were: first, Mount Pleasant School; second Cavan; third, Cairo.

For physical culture the standing was: first, Cavan School; second, Fairmount; third, Cairo.

The banners carried by each school in the parade were handsomely designed, and the costumes deserving of mention.

A feature that called forth well deserved applause was the bringing of all the pupils in the parade to a halt, the giving of the general salute to the flag led by Colonel Odell, and the massed pupils sang the National Anthem.

Exhibits were of good quality and fairly numerous. The list of winners was as follows:

OMEMEE CHURCHES OBSERVE RALLY DAY

Special Services Held in United and Presbyterian Edifices.

OMEMEE, Oct. 1.—On Sunday morning Rally Day services were observed in the continuing Presbyterian church and the United church in connection with the Sunday school. Both churches were profusely decorated with beautiful flowers and each followed, as far as possible, the special Rally Day programmes.

In the Presbyterian church, the pastor for the day, Rev. Mr. McCulloch, led the service, which was held in the body of the church and after the opening exercises delivered a very inspiring address. Several of the scholars assisted on the programme with recitations and the choir rendered a pretty carol during the offertory.

The Sunday school scholars turned out in full force in the United church. The centre pews of the auditorium which were reserved for the occasion, were almost all occupied by pupils and teachers, while the side pews were fairly well filled with parents and members of the church.

The superintendent, Mr. T. C. Ivory and the assistant superintendent, Mr. H. Lamb, were the leaders of the opening ceremonies. Assisted by the pastor and several junior boys and girls the programme was carried out to the letter. The school rendered as a chorus, "O, Come in Childhood's Sunny Hours."

Rev. E. W. Rowland delivered a very interesting talk to the children which might also be helpful and applied to grown folk as well. The subject chosen was "The Golden Key". After relating a short story which was quite appropriate for a children's service, he mentioned three palaces, namely: "Education", "Success" and "The Kingdom of Heaven," and on each he spoke briefly.

(1) The golden key to education is the key of "Application or concentration". No boy or girl can obtain this without the willingness to apply him or herself.

(2) The Golden Key to Success is the key of "work." The door of success is crowded. We must be industrious, for nothing worth while can be obtained without work. Let us determine to use this key and we wil be rewarded.

(3) The Golden Key to the Kingdom of Heaven is "Seek".

This key denotes diligence and determination and is the termination of all three. We may have many keys but if we don't use them they are useless. May we endeavor to seek the pearl of great price.

In closing, the speaker narrated a short story for the benefit of the parents and grown ups, after which the service was brought to a close.

MODELLING IS AN ATTRACTION

Peterborough People To Pose as Models Under Direction of Alfred Howell.

AT EXHIBITION.

People from Peterborough who attended the Canadian National Exhibition in Toronto this year will recall the crowds that centred around the exhibit of the sculptural art under the direction of Alfred Howell, the famous English Sculptor. This has been secured for the Produced in Canada Exhibition through the energic endeavours of President John J. Craig, of Kiwanis Club, and will form one of the attractions.

It is planned to have local men of importance sit for the modelling, which will be done in a section of the open part of the Armouries where all may be seen. From the models made here, the sitters may have casts made in bronze if they so desire.

COBOURG PRESBYTERY GATHER AT OSHAWA

Hundred Members Attend Services at King St. Church on Tuesday.

NORHAM, Oct. 1 .—According to schedule the Cobourg Presbytery met in King Street Church, Oshawa, on Tuesday morning with an approximate attendance of one hundred members out of a possible one hundred and thirty. After the usual devotional exercises the chairman Rev. J. U. Robins thanked the members for their loyal and kindly support for the past year and with a request that he be not considered as possible re-election, called for the election of chairman. Ballots were handed by Revs. W. W. Jones, J. E. Griffith, Andrew McLaughlin and J. R. Trumpour. On the second ballot, Rev. F. J. Mazwell, of St. Andrews Church, Oshawa, was elected to the chair, receiving 57 votes out of 94 votes cast. On the second ballot, Rev. J. G. McKee, of Baltimore, was elected secretary, receiving 65 out of 95 votes cast. Rev. C. D. Daniel of Seymour Circuit was elected treasurer by open vote on motion of A. J. Irwin and Andrew McLaughlin.

Revs. H. S. Dougall, R. A. Whattam and D. W. Best were then appointed a committee to receive communications. Rev. C. C. Washington of Courtice then introduced a motion re dividing of Presbytery. On motion of Rev. J. S. I. Wilson of Brighton this was laid on the table until lated in the day.

Dr. Solandt of the United Church Book Rooms, addressed the Presbytery re the church publications. He stated that The New Outlook was unsurpassed anywhere in the world. The Sunday School papers were carefully edited, and requested that anyone not being well served would report to the editors. Good literature, said Dr. Solandt, is of inestimable value and a great means of character buildings. The speaker stated that arrangements were under way to provide reading circles for all ages who could avail themselves of them. He brought along 60 books corresponding to the different grades to illustrate his plans. These were on display in the school room.

The afternoon session of the Presbytery opened at 2.00 p.m. On motion, the chairman and secretary were appointed a committee to settle the time and place of the next Presbytery meeting. On motion of Dr. J. T. Daley, Revs. F. W. Anderson, H. S. Dougall and J. U. Robins were appointed to further the interest of reading circles, etc.

Revs. J. S. I. Wilson, F. W. Anderson and A. J. Irwin were appointed a committee to strike standing committees.

Rev. J. S. I. Wilson then reported on the prize money given by H. W. Ackerman of Belleville re the Maintenance and Extension Fund for last year. The following charges received prizes: Prince Albert $50.00; Frazerville $100.00, Whitby Tabernacle $150.00, and St. Andrew's, Oshawa $200.00.

On motion of Colonel Snider and Dr. Dougall, a resolution of appreciation was tendered Mr. Ackerman for his splendid assistance re the Maintenance and Extension Fund work.

Rev. F. J. Horwood of Marmora, who has resigned his charge, was then heard for a few minutes. Mr. Horwood stated that he was leaving the pastorate to locate either in Toronto or nearby, and intended to devote his musical talents to the benefits of the United Church. He already had several engagements and felt his move was the call of God.

On motion of F. H. Howard and William Higgs, Zion appointment, which had been attached to Port Hope, was attached to Canton circuit.

Dr. Laird addressed the Presbytery at some length emphasizing the idea that the spiritual and financial problems could not well be separated. The motive of the church's money enterprize was word evangelization. Reaching folk with the spirit and message of the Gospel was the meaning and genius of our task.

The second year of the new church would be more difficult because the novel impulse had somewhat passed away. He stated that the second year of a minister's pastorate was usually the critical year because that year he seemed to be on the treadmill of routine. It was a case of running and flying the first year, but one of walking the second year, and it was more difficult, he said, to walk than either to run or fly. The church had now come to the walking time. Eighteen charges in the Presbytery had sent in $3 594.00 and the whole church $170,000.00. It cost $75,000.00 a month to carry on the work. The delay in sending in funds meant that from $40,000 to $50,000 being paid out in interest. He urged prompt payment to save this interest. Church work was the King's business and should be done with the same regularity with which we nourish our bodies. Dr. Laird urged group meetings and an every member canvass. Out of the 400,000 families in the United Church only 1,000 were as yet subscribers to the Record and Missionary Review.

Rev. C. D. Daniel reported for the expense fund as follows: Receipts $2,309.07; expenses $1,293.25. The probable expense for 1926-27 would be $2,050.00. On motion of A. R. Anderson and C. C. Washington, the treasurer was instructed to note all charges with a view to having contributions sent in during the month of October.

The following grants were voted to weak fields: Stockdale $250.00, Glasgow $300.00, Pontypool $150.00, Oshawa Mission $1,000.00, Greenwood $330.00, and Brighton, St. Andrew's $200.00.

On motion of A. R. Whattam and Dr. H. S. Dougall affirmation was given to plans for a new church in Oshawa to cost from $30,000 to $35,000. The money to be raised by Albert Street congregations, assisted by grants and loans from mission funds and subscriptions taken in Oshawa churches. Cedardale was permitted to mortgage their property to the extent of $1,000.

J. E. Bissel reported for Religious Education and stated that 14 meetings of an aggressive type had been held in the area covered by the Presbytery during the past year.

Rev. J. Ferguson reported for the Church Property Committee, as follows:

Port Perry Parsonage trustees be given privilege to sell their parsonage and apply proceeds to the purchase of a new one.

St. John's Church, Brougham, be allowed to use material in former Methodist Church and sheds, to repair and enlarge present property in use.

The matter of the sheds and church at Bethel be left in the hands of the Boundaries Commission.

The chairman, secretary and treasurer were appointed an interim Presbytery committee, to deal with urgent matters.

The chairman named a committee to deal with the matter of Presbytery boundaries, same to confer with representatives from Lindsay and report at the Spring session of the Presbytery.

The arrangements at present existing re supplying former Presbyterian Church at Orono were confirmed, viz., That it be supplied from Bowmanville.

On motion of D. W. Best and S. C. Moore, a resolution was carried stating that no transfers of property, etc., be considered unless properly vouched for and legally brought forward from boards of church trustees.

On motion of H. S. Dougall and R. A. Whattam, the following resolution was unanimously carried:

"The Cobourg Presbytery of the United Church of Canada expresses its very deep conviction that the only successful methods of overcoming the menace of the liquor traffic for beverage purposes in Canada is by a prohibition law rigidly enforced, and therefore urges the following:

That the Provincial authorities charged with the enforcement of the Ontario Temperance Act be thanked for their splendid work in the past, and urges that every possible effort be made to secure even better enforcement by the elimination of bootlegging and every other form of violation of the act.

That in anticipation of a coming Ontario election, the General Secretary of the Ontario Prohibition Union, Toronto, be requested to approach each candidate of the Provincial Parliament, after his official nomination, asking from him a statement in writing of what would be his attitude in Parliament, if elected, towards the enforcement and strengthening of the Ontario Temperance Act,—particularly his attitude towards Government Control or Sale.

That the new Government of Canada be urged to take action to secure the following results:

1.—That investigation be made which will discover the actual facts in regard to reported scandals in many places in Canada in connection with the Customs service, and such re-organization effected as will assure the Canadian people that liquor is not being smuggled into Canada.

2.—That the Government of Canada heartily co-operate with the Government of the United States in every way possible to prevent smuggling into our sister country, which is under a prohibition law.

3.—That the parliament of Canada enact a law which will require that when a Provincial Legislature enacts the prohibition of the sale of liquor for beverage purposes, the manufacture of liquor in and the importation of liquor to that province will also be prohibited.

That a copy of this resolution be sent to the Ontario Temperance Commission, the Premier of Canada, and the General Secretary of the Ontario Prohibition Union.

DOURO EXHIBITION.

Poor Crowd at Fair Owing to the Unsettled Weather.

DOURO, Oct. 1 .—The weather man was very unkind on Saturday and as a result it was not possible to hold the sports in connection with the Fair. The exhibits, too, were affected by the inclement weather. A large crowd gathered around the noon hour waiting patiently for the clouds to break, but the miserable drizzle continued all through the afternoon.

On Friday the school fair was held and was attended by a fair-sized crowd. Favorable comment was made by the judges, especially on the singing and public speaking of the children.

The results of the sports which were held following the close of the school fair were as follows:

Barn yard golf—Frederick Walsh and Austin Allen.

Men's three-legged race—1 Charles Town and Frank O'Brien, 2 Leo Moher and Hubert Allen, 3 Austin Allen and Emmett Allen.

FIRST LIVERY STONED.

CHICAGO, Oct. 1.—One of Chicago's earliest liveries was maintained by Mrs. Louise de Koven Bowen. The first time she rode out in her conspicuous equipage, with a footman liveried in gorgeous colors and silver buttons, small boys hooted at the retinue and threw volleys of stones and rotten eggs. Once Mrs. Bowen was in bed for two days after having been struck with a flying missile.

Day-Fan RADIO
A YEAR AHEAD

SOCIAL EVENING.

Zion People's League Held Gathering in Orange Hall Monday.

PETHERICK'S CORNERS Oct. 1. — The Zion People's League held a most enjoyable social evening in the Orange hall on Monday evening, which was attended by most of the League members. The Reds, winners of the attendance contest, put on the following programme:

A humorous dia'ogue entitled "The Society for the Suppression of Slang," which proved highly amusing as the efforts of the young ladies to suppress their slang expressions were futile. A vocal duet by the Misses Alma and Gladys Simpson was much enjoyed as was an instrumental duet by Miss Evelyn and Mr. Fred Barnum, and a reading by Miss Bessie Meiklejohn.

The main feature of the programme however was the debate — "Resolved: that a woman can do a man's work easier than a man can do a woman's work."

The affirmative was upheld by Miss Hazel Brown and Miss Jennie Fry, and the negative by Mr. Grenville Meiklejohn and Mr. Earl Fairman. This debate proved both interesting and amusing as the contestants strove to uphold the versatility of the opposite sexes.

The judges, Miss Nellie Bennet, Mr. George Anderson and Mr. Thos. Craighead gave their decision in favor of the negative, the winners' margin being very small.

Rev. Mr. Daniel brought out some interesting facts about debating in his critics' report.

Mr. Fred Barnum performed the duties of chairman in his usual able manner.

After the programme a number of contests were put on with t ners of each having to perfor fresh stunt.

After the close of the cont Reds as guests of honor were on the platform and lunch w ed by members of the other Everyone present voted the e entertainment a great success.

The league's big rally serv be held in the church on T evening, October 7th, at 8 when choosing the sides coming year will commence.

This community was well sented both afternoon and at the K.K.K. demonstration i bellford on Sunday last.

THOUGHT LAST MOMENT HAD COME.

But Kellogg's ALL-BRAN conquered constipation, the cause of her trouble

Now she's healthier and happier than ever!

"I awoke with a most disagreeable sensation around my heart and, together with fear, thought my last moment had come. After that I began to be troubled greatly with constipation. This I treated differently with several cures, but never found anything that completely relieved me except ALL-BRAN."
Mrs. M. Mason. (Address on request.)

Constipation is the hideous bugbear of health. It fastens its ravaging hold on young and old. Sallow complexion, pimples, headaches—are all symptoms! Cleanse your system of its poisons for good.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is guaranteed to relieve constipation permanently if eaten regularly. It is 100 per cent bran. That's why doctors recommend it!

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is made by Kellogg in London, Canada. A ready-to-serve cereal, delicious with milk or fruit. Used in cooking too. Served everywhere. Sold by all grocers on a money-back guarantee.

Reeve Rye was authorized to attend the adjourned tax sale for the County of Peterboro and to purchase for the township all property not bringing taxes and costs.

Bert May appeared before the council as one of the trustees of Mays school house and asked the council's permission for temporary use of a small portion of the north end of Grier avenue for the purpose of fencing in a school ground. Mr. May stated that the school board had arranged with Thomas Hooper for the use of three lots owned by him.

The council approved of the plan for providing a school ground for the younger children attending the junior room which is held in the Orange Hall.

Mr. May's request was granted, providing there are no objections from interested parties.

The clerk was instructed to acknowledge Dr. McPherson's letter on behalf of the Rotary Club Crippled Children's Committee, and to state that the council does not know of any cases of crippled or deformed children at the present time; and also assuring Dr. McPherson and the Rotary Club of the council's appreciation of the services rendered. The meeting then adjourned, the next regular meeting to be held at the Court House, Peterboro on Monday, Oct. 11th at 2 p.m.

WEDDING BELLS.

CUMMING—WESTON.

CAMPBELLFORD, Oct. 1.—A very pretty wedding took place on Wednesday, September 29th, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Weston, when their elder daughter, Lily Maude, became the wife of Robert D. Cumming, barrister of Haileybury, son of Mr. J. D. Cumming of town. Rev. E. D. Forde conducted the ceremony.

The bride was given away by her father and looked lovely in a gown of rose georgette and carried a bouquet of roses and lily of the valley. She wore the groom's gift, a diamond solitaire. The young couple were unattended.

After the wedding lunch, Mr. and Mrs. Cummings left for Toronto and other points west, the bride wearing a painted gray chiffon with hat and shoes and blue and platinum wolf trimming. They will reside in Haileybury.

ART EXHIBIT GROWS APACE

Nearly 150 Exhibits Already Received For Big Attraction at Fair.

WAR TROPHIES.

Nearly 150 exhibits have already been received for the Art Exhibtion that will form part of the Produced in Canada Exhibition at the Armouries, and all of these carry out the original scheme by being entirely Canadian in their conception and artistry. An advance view given The Examiner proves that the exhibition will be well worth a visit.

There will be an added attraction in the form of an exhibition of war trophies loaned for the occasoin by Peterboro soldiers. The was has receded far enough into history to make this showing interesting, perhaps most of all to the children who have never had an opportunity to see the "souvenirs" of the events in which Canadians took so prominent a place.

Whatever else is missed in the building, every citizen should see the Art Exhibition and the collection of War Trophies.

OBITUARY.

GEORGE ALBERT DUNSFORD

LAKEFIELD, Oct. 1.—The death occurred on Thursday of George Albert Dunsford, age 63, who recently moved to the village from Dummer. He had been in poor health for some time.

The funeral will take place on Saturday from the family residence on Nassau Street to St. Mark's Cemetery, Warsaw.

THOMAS DUNSFORD

LAKEFIELD, Oct. 1. — Mr. Thomas Dunsford, who passed away on Wednesday, aged 86 years, was born in the Township of Dummer, the son of John Dunsford and Mary Ann Payne, who were among the pioneers of Dummer, making the journey from their home in England by sailing ship. He married Louise Harmalin, who predeceased him 18 years ago; some time after his marriage he removed to Smith Township and years later to Lakefield, where he has resided for the past 52 years.

He leaves to mourn his loss two daughters, Mrs. Clement from Warsaw, and Miss Gertrude of Lakefield, also four sons, William of Warsaw, Fred of Florida, Allen of Toronto, and George of Rochester. There are seven grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

He was a member of the Sons of England and of the Regent Street Church. Rev. F. A. Kemp will take charge of the funeral service, which will be held at the family residence, Dean Street today at 2.00 p.m., leaving for the Lakefield Cemetery at 2.30.

ROBERT TROTTER.

WESTWOOD, Oct. 1.—Robert Trotter, one of the oldest pioneers of Clanricarde, Anstruther township, passed away at 9 o'clock p.m. on September 10th, after an illness of about four months. In 1884 he was married to Sarah Anna Comstock and made a home for himself and family, where they lived until two years ago when their house and nearly all the contents were destroyed by fire.

To them were born four children, two passing away when young. The remaining two are Robert H., of Clanricarde and Mrs. A. Neilson, of Saskatchewan. Mr. Trotter passed away peacefully as he had lived—a firm believer in the saving power of God and his last words were "Glory, glory," which should be an incentive to all people.

The funeral was held on Sunday, Sept. 12th, the Rev. A. Ogden, of Apsley, conducting the service. The casket was covered with floral tributes, tokens of deep sympathy from many of his friends.

Mr. Trotter had four brothers, Thomas of Percy, Alex. of Saskatchewan, Joseph of Clydsdale and John of Peterborough, and one sister, Mrs. Richard Thedford, of Douro. His brothers and nephews were pallbearers, who gently bore his body to the Elmhirst cemetery and laid to rest, at the deceased's own wish, beside those of his two little girls.

His sorrowing wife and family have the deepest sympathy of the entire community.

INDIANS HOLD GRAND COUNCIL

Delegates Come To Chemong From All Parts of Province.

FROM 27 RESERVES.

HIAWATHA, October 1. — The Grand Indian Council for the Province of Ontario was held at the Curve Lake Indian Reserve, last month. The last Council met at Manitoulin Island in Georgian Bay, two years ago. Some twenty years or more the people of Aldervile Reserve had the duty and pleasure of entertaining the delegates or representatives from the different Bands or Reserves. Two years from now the Reserve at Garden River, near the Soo will have the honor of having the Council there.

The Council business has to do with matters that arise over the different treaties that they have made with the Dominion of Canada.

This year there was a wide representation as some delegates came from the territory of the Hudson's Bay country. One man came from Osnaburg north of Lake St. Joseph. It cost him one hundred dollars to come to the Council just for train fare alone. He paddled for six days to reach Lake Nipigon in Thunder Bay district and took a steamboat to Fort William and thence by train to Peterboro.

It is interesting to note the prices of food and clothing that the people have to pay. Flour is ten dollars a bag. Tea is not much dearer than it is in Southern Ontario, one dollar a pound. This man paid thirty dollars for a suit of clothes worth about eight dollars in Peterboro. His shoes, which seemed very uncomfortable and were worth about $3.50, cost him thirty-one dollars. An eighty-five cent shirt took five dollars to buy.

A new canoe costs one hundred and sixty-five dollars and a similar one here at Hiawatha would be forty.

The Hudson's Bay Company charges these prices and in return the hunters and trappers hand over their season's catch of pelts and furs. On all these the Company exacts a royalty.

In the country around Lake St. Joseph there are only two hunters that are not Indian. This delegate had great difficulty in speaking English. In speaking of months he used the word "Moon" and he referred to a day as one "Sun".

The local delegates from Hiawatha were Messrs. Madden Howard, Sr., Hanlan Howard, and Chief George Paudash.

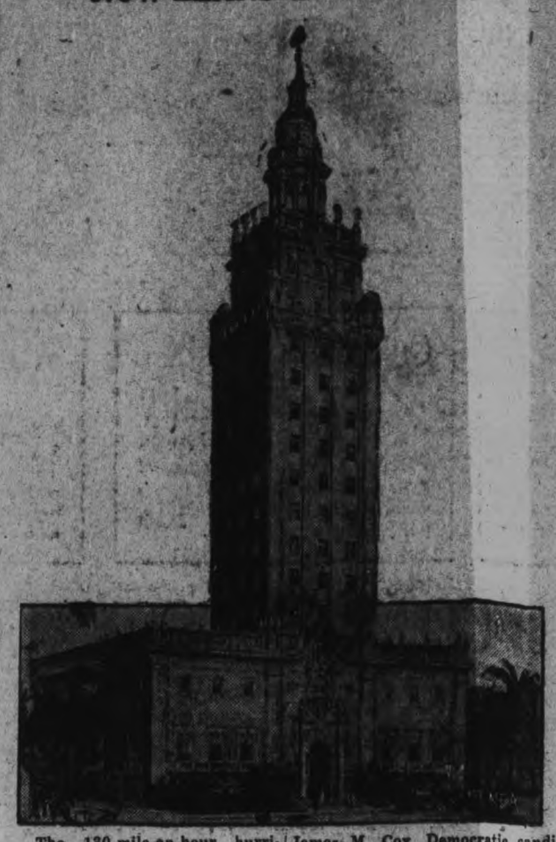
Twenty-seven bands or Reserves sent their representatives. Alderville did not have a spokesman at the Council this year.

Some of the reserves who sent their delegates were:

Schawanaga near Bala; Chapleau Scugog; Georgina Island near Beaverton; Osnaburg north of Lake St. Joseph; Garden River near Sault Ste. Marie; Scugog near Lindsay; Rama, north of Orillia, near Washago; Moraviantown, western Ontario; Muncey, near St. Thomas; Walpole Island, close to Sarnia; Chemong, Curve Lake; Hiawatha on Rice Lake; and Cape Crocker on Georgian Bay; also Fort Hope near Osnaburg.

Mr. Alfred McCue, Chemong is secretary-treasurer of the Grand Council and Mr. A. Peters is the assistant secretary.

NOW LEANS 20 DEGREES



The 130-mile-an-hour hurricane that hit Miami and caused a huge loss of life bent over this beautiful tower at any angle of 20 degrees. The building is the plant of the Miami Daily News, owned by James M. Cox, Democratic candidate for President in 1920. It is one of the finest newspaper buildings in the country. A large beacon burned in the tower as an aid to ocean navigation.

GREAT SINGER COMING.

William Heughan Will Visit Peterborough During October.

An event of interest to music-lovers of the city will be the visit here during the month of October of William Heughan, acclaimed as "Scotland's Incomparable Actor-Singer."

Mr. Heughan, who has been given excellent press notices by the Toronto critics, and has been praised in high terms by Augustus Bridle and Lawrence Mason, the latter characterizing the singer as "unquestionably a genius", has also scored success after success throughout the principal cities of the world and has included in his tours South Africa, Australia, New Zealand, India, and the Orient, including China and Japan. Last year, he toured Canada and the United States. He is described as a "magnificent bass singer."

RALLY DAY SERVICE.

Held in United Church at Westwood on Sunday Morning.

WESTWOOD, Oct. 1—The annual Sunday School Rally Day was held in the United Church on Sunday morning. The church was beautifully decorated with house plants, cut flowers and autumn foliage. The programme, "Rallying for Service," was followed. The choir chairs were filled with the younger members of the school, while the superintendent, G. Humphries, was in charge of the service. The pastor, Rev. S. H. Moyer, gave a splendid address on "Rallying for Service."

In the evening a special Rally service of the young ladies' Sunday school class was held, with the teacher of the class, Mrs. John Sargent, presiding.

The spirit of the service was missionary, with appropriate topic, readings and music. Prayer for the mission cause was made by the pastor, Rev. S. H. Moyer.

Bible readings were given by four girls: Misses Leta Slade, Mary Brackenridge, Della Drummond and Mary Cameron, and three missionary readings by Mrs. James Claysdale and Misses Grace Cameron and Helen Brackenridge.

The topic by Mrs. John Sargent and the address by Mrs. (Rev.) Moyer were much appreciated. Mrs. Moyer dealt with the condition and the degraded lives of the women and children of the heathen people, including the Mohammedans, Indians, Africans, and Japanese, and told many thrilling tales of the adventures of missionaries in the foreign lands.

A special feature of the service was a splendid choir composed of twenty-five voices, including the members of the young ladies' class and the regular choir members. A trio by Mesdames Moyer and C. Brackenridge and Rev. Moyer, and a quartette by Mesdames C. Brackenridge and E. Sargent and Messrs. D. Cameron and S. Warr were much enjoyed.

Both services were attended by large congregations.

Had Narrow Escape.

On Wednesday morning, Vernon, the little son of Sidney Warr had a narrow escape from death, when he was struck by the knives of the corn binder. Fortunately the machine was stopped in time, but not before the child had received a nasty gash in the hip, which required several stitches.

Mr. and Mrs. B. Cardwell and Mr. and Mrs. W. Morris attended the Lindsay Fair.

Mr. Fred White returned to Kingston on Sunday to resume his studies at Queen's University.

Mrs. Waldon (nee Edith Abar) of Castleton was a recent guest of Mrs. William Morris.

Miss E. Comstock, who has been visiting friends in Apsley, returned on Monday.

Born—To Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Elmhirst, on Thursday, Sept. 23rd, a daughter—Barbara Ruth.

Miss Emma Robb of Manitou rived on Tuesday for a visit relatives here.

T. Cardwell, Sr., attended Lakefield Fair on Wednesday.

The Harvest Home service o Anglican Church will be held Sunday evening, October 3rd.

RELIC OF BROCK FOR ARCHIVES

General's Despatch Box Being Sent To Ottawa By Owner.

OTHER RELICS.

ST. CATHARINES, October 1. — An interesting historical relic which is owned by Miss Catharine Welland Merritt, the well-known writer, of this city and Toronto, is being sent to the Archives at Ottawa, prior to Miss Merritt leaving for Southern France, where she will spend the winter.

It is a small trunk, or despatch box, owned by General Sir Isaac Brock, which he left at the home of Major Thomas Merritt, where General Brock spent his last night before the Battle of Queenston Heights, when he was killed. Major Merritt lived near Niagara-on-the-Lake.

The despatch box is almost as good as new. It is lined with brass tacks, and on the cover in large letters, also in brass tacks, are General Brock's initials, I. H. B.

Has Plans of Old Canal.

Miss Merritt, who is a granddaughter of Hon. William Hamilton Merritt, builder of the first Welland Canal, has the drawings made for the canal by her grandfather in 1818. The first sod for the canal was turned in 1824, and five years later the first schooner, the Ann Jane, built in Shickluna's shipyards, at St Catharines, passed up. She was followed up the canal by the schooner R. H. Broughton of Youngstown, N. Y., and, according to an old book which Miss Merritt owns, the entry of the vessels into Buffalo harbor created a big stir among the population. Artillery fire, and applause from the people lining the shore greeted the little vessels, and the Buffalo newspapers of a century ago were warm in their praises of the enterprising Canadians who had conquered the menacing cataract, Niagara Falls, and made navigation possible between Lake Erie and Ontario.

There has always been a controversy also how St. Catharines got its name. Miss Merritt yesterday gave documentary proof of the origin. The city was named after her grandmother, Catharine Rodman Prendergast, who afterward married her grandfather, William Hamilton Merritt.

Possesses Interesting Papers.

A copy of the first newspaper ever printed in St. Catharines is also a prized possession of Miss Merritt. It is the Farmers' Journal and Welland Canal Intelligencer, and was started by a man named Leavensworth, whom Mr. Merritt brought here to print information of the Welland Canal.

Miss Merritt has the commission appointing her grandfather President of the Committee of the Executive Council of the Province of Upper Canada in 1848. This office was the same as that of Premier. She also has a letter from Sir William Johnson, Commander of the British forces in North America prior to the Revolutionary War.

Show Your Mettle!

DIG into the Gold that's in your Heart and convert it into the gold that we can divert to the needy

You don't have to be confronted with the seamy side of life to know that it exists for many of the city's unfortunates.

You don't have to see hungry children, under-nourished infants, shivering old women, helpless and hopeless old men, stricken invalids and crippled warriors and wayfarers in the struggle for existence—

You don't have to see these before your eyes to pity and want to protect them.

Pity them with your profits.

Protect them with your prosperity.

Provide for them with your open palm.

LADY WHO LIVED IN PETERBORO' TELLS OF STORM

Mrs. James Bex Writes of Experiences in Miami Disaster.

SAT IN BATHTUB.

Canvas Over Shower Fixture Only Shelter From Rain.

A graphic story of how one family sat for hours in the bath tub of their Coconut Grave home while the cyclone threatened every moment to crash the house on them, is told in a letter received by Mrs. William Gatfield, 137 Rubidge Street, from Mrs. James Bex, formerly of Peterborough, but for some years a resident of Coconut Grove, Miami.

"We are lucky to be alive," writes Mrs. Bex, "and you would say the same if you could see the place.

"The place we were living in was not our own, you know. It was damaged pretty badly. The whole back part of the house and part of the front went down. The roof went off, and we were afraid the ceiling would cave in on us. So we sat in the bath tub for four hours during the last storm, as Dad thought that if the ceiling did fall it wouldn't be so likely to hurt us, as if we were in one of the bigger rooms.

"The rain poured in almost as bad as if we were outside, and we had to sit in water all the time. It was terrible. Not knowing if you would be alive the next minute or not. We fixed canvas over the railing that held the curtain around the shower, and got two chairs and sat in the tub as that was the dryest place we could find. Some of the windows and the front doors blew in, so we had nowhere much to get out of the wind.

"We thought we were bad off until we got out and saw what some of the others had to go through, people that were in several houses and had to get out of each as each one fell, and when they did get out, crawl on their hands and knees and sometimes drag four or five children with them, too.

"You have no idea how terrible it all was.

"The paper stated that not over one hundred were killed in Miami, but you know there must have been more than that. Some friends of ours were telling us the other night that a neighbor went down to make arrangements at a funeral house for his little baby who was killed in the storm, and he couldn't get in in one place in Miami. They were all so full and with all the funeral houses there and here, and with them burying them every day there must have been over one hundred to have crowded the place so much."

"One young fellow we know told us that out in Hileah, where he lives, they were lying in piles all over. He said he saw them himself. You see that place is very open and with quite a lot of little houses, so that it really got hit worse than we did.

"You just ought to see the Grove. It used to be the prettiest place around Miami, and now you can stand outside and see for miles around. All the trees and shrubbery are down and everything is bare-looking.

"Dad and Ed. have been doing Red Cross work with their cars. Everyone needs them so bad. They can't get enough cars to carry food and clothing around. They have turned all the school houses into places for refuge, also churches and all apartment houses and places like that. Everybody is doing their little bit and things are sure building up fast again. You would be surprised to see the spirit of the people and the way they are going at rebuilding. Some seem so cheerful about it. More so I think the people that lost everything. The people that got off light, a lot of them, are doing nothing but groaning about what happened to their homes."

LEGION NOTES

The first meeting of the newly-elected board of directors was held last night, Comrade C. H. Ackerman presided. A considerable amount of business was transacted, and the following were appointed as chairman of the various committees:

House Committee—R. E. Layfield.

Entertainment and Euchre Committee—N. E. Crowe.

Visiting and Relief Committee—J. Abraham.

Employment Comimttee — The Secretary.

Finance Committee—D. J. Lawrie.

The arrangements for Poppy Day and Armistice Day celebrations were left in the hands of the President and Secretary. Social activities of the Branch will commence on Wednesday night next when the first Euchre Drive of the season will be held.

Branch No. 52 of the Canadian Legion has a membership campaign under way and wants every ex-service man to become a member. We want them to tell us of their difficulties, ask us for information they may desire, to use the adjustment bureau, to do everything they possibly can to revive interest amongst those who are not members, or attached. One hundred per cent of this can only be obtained by the united efforts of every individual ex-service man, attached or unattached. The desire of the officers of Branch No. 52 is to show the public of Peterborough that at last a united body of ex-service men has been brought into existence and that they will work for the benefit of all who served and for those who have been left dependent through the rigors of war. To further this end another meeting of the board will be held on Monday evening next, at Legion headquarters, Murray Street, and all members who have already signed their membership form are requested to be present at this meeting and to make a special point of bringing a comrade with them.

There is a tremendous amount of work yet to be done, and this can be accomplished much more easily if we have the weight and influence and the voice of the general mass of ex-service men throughout the communities in the Dominion. The object of the Legion is Service, and in return for that Service all that is asked is the good-will, co-operation and an esprit-de-corps of all those who have served. We want your co-operation in assisting to ameliorate the conditions of those who are suffering today as a result of their service in the cause of their country. A cheerful look, a helping hand is what we ask. Come to the socials which are expected to be a feature of the season. Wednesday will be the opening night. The chairman, Comrade N. E. Crowe has made all the necessary arrangements for a bumper evening. The usual time, and the usual place. Don't miss this treat.

Wells Uses Statesmen As Characters In Novel

LONDON, Oct. 1 (United Press).—Characters in the second volume of H. G. Wells' new novel, "The Life of William Clissold," speak frankly of contemporary statesmen. Unlike Arnold Bennett, who created "Lord Raingo" in a recent novel, and now has all England wondering about his lordship's true identity, Wells used real names ad his characters described their bearers as follows:

"Lord Balfour—A damned M-doun lily.

"Lloyd George.—A magnificent weed.

"Ramsay Macdonald.—He postures to an audience that died 25 years ago.

"Margot Asquith.—Where ever the foreground is, you will find Margot Asquith."

GREAT WELCOME

The last lap of his flight started from Sartrouville, near Paris, at 11.15 a.m. After crossing the channel and passing over Rochester, Kent, where he started on June 30th, the flier took a course over the Thames at Gravesend and went up the river to Hammersmith before turning back to land at Westminster.

The Daily Mail calculates that Cobham in his aerial flights in various parts of the world has now covered half a million miles. Recalling the honors bestowed on men who have made great flights in past years, people are guessing what recognition of this kind is in store for Cobham. The main supposition is that the King will confer a knighthood upon him. Cobham has been hopping sensationally over the British Empire for the last two years just to show the stay-at-homes that their Empire was not so far flung as everybody seemed to think.

He is a most cautious airman. He does no spectacular stunts. Mrs. Cobham says she would not worry about his safety while he is on a flight if well meaning friends did not contisually telephone her every minute when her husband is overdue on any particular leg of his journey.

Taken ashore in a tug with his mechanician, Ward and Captele. he was welcomed on Parliament Terrace by his wife; the Air Minister, Sir Samuel Hoare; the Air Marshal, General Sir Sefton Brancker; T. P. (Taypay) O'Connor; Sir Joseph and Lady Cook; Sir Charles and Lady Wakefield, and other notables.

Soon after setting foot on land, he was presented by the Air Minister with the King's message offering a cordial welcome home and adding: "I congratulate you heartily upon the successful termination of yet another historic flight." As Cobham stepped from the tug, he shouted: "Hello, everybody. It's fine to be home—"

Before he could finish the sentence his wife fell into his arms, and the crowd redoubled its cheers as the bronzed airman smothered her and their fourteen months old boy with kisses.

FIRE IN LINDSAY.

Dental Office and Jewelry Store Damaged By Blaze.

LINDSAY, Ont., Oct. 1.—(Canadian Press.)—Fire broke out in the laboratory of Dr. H. A. Nesbitt's dental office last night, causing $5,000 damage to the McCarty jewelry store beneath and to the dental parlors. The cause is believed to have been due to an explosion of a vulcanizer.

Michael O'Leary, V.C., In Dire Circumstances

HAMILTON, Ont., Oct. 1 (Canadian Press). — Michael O'Leary, V.C., who, single-handed, bombed his way to renown in the Great War, has fallen on hard days. He and his wife and their children are in sore straits. They have been in this city for several months.

John McMenemy, relief officer, yesterday recommended to the Board of Control that sufficient money be advanced to pay the passage of the family to a relative's home in Ireland. Michael, it is said, has a rich uncle there who has promised to look after them, but he will send no money to them as long as they remain away from the homeland. The recommendation was approved.

COAL STOPPAGE IS NEARING END; MINERS GO BACK

Trickle of Men Becoming Rush, Especially in South Wales.

MEN GIVE UP HOPE.

Their Proposals Now Would Have Been Accepted in May.

LONDON, October 1.—The coal stoppage, which began five months ago, seems near its end. The trickle of men back to work slowly increasing for weeks has become a rush in some districts. Sixty per cent. of the South Wales miners are expected to be back, on the owners' terms, by Monday, and what A. J. Cook, the miners' secretary, called "an organized retreat," shows signs of becoming a rout.

The delegates of the Miners' Federation in London yesterday voted to refer to the ballot of the men the Government's and their own peace proposals. It will take six days for the results of this ballot to be announced, but there are indications that by then the bulk of the miners will already be at work. The greatest industrial dispute in British history, which is estimated to have cost Britain two billion dollars, thus seems about to end in collapse.

The miners' executive proposals are that the men resume work at wages not less than those paid in 1921, and that an independent tribunal draw up a national wage agreement. The Government proposals are that work be resumed after local negotiations and that the Government thereafter set up a national tribunal to fix wages in cases where the old hours are increased.

The men have given up hope in many districts, and the result of the prolonged deadlock will be complete victory for the owners, tempered only by the national tribunal, and even this may not become effective. Worse, from the men's viewpoint, their National Federation seems on the verge of destruction. This result has been brought about by the successful tactics of the owners against Government pressure in refusing to negotiate national agreements on hours and wages. The failure to get national agreements destroys the power of the Miners' Federation, since the agreements under which the men are now seeping back are made between local bodies of workers and individual or local combinations of mine owners.

The tragedy, from the miners' viewpoint, is that their present peace proposals which the Baldwin Cabinet now says it is unable to impose on the owners, would have been accepted with alacrity by the Government and undoubtedly forced down the throats of the owners either before the general strike or immediately thereafter. The price the miners pay for rejecting Sir Herbert Samuel's memorandum, which ended the general strike, is that they cannot now get terms approaching those offered in that document.

MINERS URGED TO TAKE TERMS

GAS IN THE STOMACH IS DANGEROUS

Recommends Daily Use of Magnesia to Overcome Trouble Caused by Fermenting Food and Acid Indigestion

Gas and wind in the stomach accompanied by the full, bloated feeling after eating are almost certain evidence of the presence of excessive hydrochloric acid in the stomach, creating so-called "acid indigestion."

Acid stomachs are dangerous because too much acid irritates the delicate lining of the stomach, often leading to gastritis accompanied by serious stomach ulcers. Food ferments and sours, creating the distressing gas which distends the stomach and hampers the normal functions of the vital internal organs, often affecting the heart.

It is the worst of folly to neglect such a serious condition or to treat with ordinary digestive aids which have no neutralizing effect on the stomach acids. Instead get from any druggist a few ounces of Bisurated Magnesia and take a teaspoonful in a quarter glass of water right after eating. This will drive the gas, wind and bloat right out of the body, sweeten the stomach, neutralize the excess acid and prevent its formation and there is no sourness or pain. Bisurated Magnesia (in powder or table form—never liquid or milk) is harmless to the stomach, inexpensive to take and the best for stomach purposes. It is used by thousands of people who enjoy their meals with no more fear of indigestion.

With production from the metal mines of Northern Ontario alone totalling over $5,000 000 every thirty days, more and more investors are turning their attention to his field and availing themselves of the remarkable opportunities that exist for incressing capital in a short space of time.

Consistent with the growth of the mining industry there is more information available today than ever before on mining methods and conditions so that the public may better understand the benefit by the progress in this industry.

In this connection Stobie, Forlong & Company, Reford Building, Toronto, have just prepared a new bulletin reviewing the latest situation at a number of the most attractive mines. This information has been obtained from the firm's own engineering staff and anyone interested in the subject of mining should obtain a copy.

CHICAGO, Oct. 1.—(Canadian Press.)—With indications of clearing weather in Canada, likely to bring about better conditions for crop movement, wheat values went lower to-day during early dealings. Opening 1-4 cents to 3-4 cent down, the wheat market continued to sag. Corn and oats were easy, corn starting unchanged, but soon undergoing a slight decline. Provisions held about steady.

TORONTO, Oct. 1 (Canadian Press).—Trading was steady on the Standard Exchange today, 334,644 shares being dealt in a wide range of issues. Argonaut, down 1 1-2, had 56,450 shares dealt in; Barry Holly rose 1-2 at 69 1-2. McIntyre was 25 cents higher at 24.50 with less than a thousand shares dealt in. Wright Hargraves 5 cents up, Teck Hughes up four; Castle Trethewey up 4, and Canadian Lorrain 2 higher were among the leaders. There were few recessions, Dome Mines losing 15 cents at 10.25. The balance of the list was unchanged.

Most Stocks Show Gains In Slow Toronto Session

TORONTO, Oct. 1.— (Canadian Press.)—Trading was slow on the Toronto stock exchange this morning, few issues being touched. Mc. Kinnon shares, common and voting trust, received the largest part of attention on the part of traders, the former being up one at 31 and the latter rising two at 31. One hundred and eighty-five shares of voting trust changed hands, with only six of common.

Barcelona climbed 3-4 on a small transaction. Abitibi was up 1-8 at 95 with only eight shares being sold. Industrial Alcohol was actively played, this issue closing at 23 1-4, up 1 1-8. Winnipeg Railway showed a more optimistic note when it rose 3-4 to close at 57 1-4.

Almost all issues showed fractional raises, with Brazilian down 1-2, and Massey Harris down 1-4, the only two major stocks to show declines.

Fear Of Higher Rate Removed; Trade Broadens

NEW YORK, October 1 (Canadian Press).—Bullish effect ran rampant in the stock market, and the restraint imposed by fears of an increase in the Federal reserve discount rate, was removed for at least another week. More than a score of issues were elevated to their highest prices of the year. United States Steel Common touched 153, or more than 10 points above the recent low, and General Motors sold close to 166, a record price for the present stock. Mack Trucks and Chrysler showed traces of heaviness. Miami and Nevada Coppers touched new 1926 peak prices. Most of the public utilities pointed upward, but special weakness cropped out in American and Foreign Power Common and Preferred, which sank to new low levels. Another outstanding weak spot was Continental Bacon "A," which broke six points to within a fraction of the year's low.

High-grade rails moved upward with the industrials, with the best gains recorded by Chesapeake and Ohio, "Nickle Plate" Common, Norfolk and Western and Delaware and Hudson.

KIWANIANS SEE SLIDES OF WORK

Views Shown of Activities of Club in Many Places.

FAIR ARRANGEMENTS.

At the Kiwanis Club luncheon today a series of slides was shown depicting the many activities of Kiwanis International throughout the United States and Canada.

Kiwanian Doug. Paterson operated the lantern and slides and Kiwanian J. John described the activities portrayed on each picture.

Some time was spent discussing arrangements in connection with the Produced - in - Canada Exhibition, which will take place from October 11 to 16 in the Armories.

Charlie Elliott was the booster for the occasion. The prize winners were Martin Chenhall, Charlie Saunders and Doug. Grant.

Among the visitors present were the Rev. John Bushell of Toronto and his daughter, Miss Madeline Bushell.

DATE NOT FIXED FOR ELECTIONS

Writs For Ministerial Contests Can't Be Issued Yet.

LIKELY NEXT MONTH.

OTTAWA, October 1 (Canadian Press).—No definite official announcement in regard to the date for the Ministerial by-elections is available here yet. Writs cannot be issued for the by-elections until the general election writs are returned, and these will not be back until some time in the second week of this month. The probability seems to be that nominations will take place about the middle of November, with voting a week later where opposition is offered.

A brief meeting of the Cabinet will be held this afternoon before the Prime Minister and his colleagues board the special train for Quebec, where they will meet the new Governor-General, Lord Willingdon. A number of matters await the consideration of the Government, among them the report of Sir Andrew Duncan on the problems of the Maritime Provinces. There are also some appointments pending.

Meighen in Toronto.

TORONTO, October 1 (Canadian Press).—The Right Hon. Arthur Meighen, Conservative leader, is in the city to-day, and this morning met some of the leading Toronto Conservatives. It is understood that Mr. Meighen has an appointment for the Albany Club this evening, and it is presumed he will there confer with prominent members of the party.

Absent Minded Burglar Steps From Wrong Window

NEW YORK, Oct. 1 (United Press).—Louis Cesaro is dead of an acute case of absent-mindedness.

He entered a third floor apartment in a Mulburry Street tenement by the fire escape, and was busy collecting wearing apparel and bric-a-brac when surprised by tenants.

Both arms full, he stepped through an open window. But the fire escape was outside an adjoining window. He fell three storeys, receiving fatal injuries.

COMMANDANT IS SOMEWHAT BETTER

Former Officer of Local Corps of Army Shows Improvement.

Bandmaster Robinson of the local Salvation Army Corps, who returned yesterday from Toronto, reports that the condition of Commandant Smith, formerly in charge of the local Salvationists, who has been seriously ill with asthma in Toronto, showed signs of of improvement yesterday. On Wednesday specialists in attedance expressed grave concern over the condition of the Commandant, but yesterday, he rallied somewhat and a more cheerful outlook is exhibited by the physicians.

CAMPAIGN ENDS.

Makers of Cleaning Preparations Have Been in City.

A ten-day house cleaning campaign was concluded to-day by F. W. Bryan, representative of the Cudahy Packing Co., who has been working in the city, with a crew of men. A large number of window displays and local advertising efforts have brought before the community the properties of Old Dutch Cleanser, Solvene Soap, and Gem Lye. The visitors have made an impression on the city.

FASHIONS

By HEDDA HOYT

(Written for the United Press)

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—(United Press). — When boyish haircuts came into existence the female sex lost something which it will take years to regain and that is, feminine appeal!

Men learned that when once woman's glory" was shorn to the skull she was a creature not unlike themselves with protuding ears, shaved necks, peculiar looking foreheads and irregular features. They learned that the average woman is no better looking than the average man.

Long ago hairdressers suggested thmat "none but the beautiful" attempt the mannish hairuct with its severe outlines. None of them would believe that the mode for boyishness would extend to the extreme where unbeautiful women would risk augmenting the length of their noses and the bulginess of their foreheads merely to prove that they, like males, had ears. And yet, there are hundreds of plain looking girls today wearing their hair plastered flat to their craniums in a fashion that women with perfect profiles would shun. In fact, very few really beautiful women will attempt a mannish haircut. This mode of hairdressing is largely confined to flappers and to women who would be vamps. Some of the younger girls look rather cute but fresh complexions and bright youthful eyes can withstand almost any test of headdress. Most of them would look far prettier with softly bobbed hair. Girlhood should be typified by soft lusterful locks, dainty frocks and sweet mannerisms but we rarely find a young girl displaying any of these charms today.

The modern miss calls a spade a spade, clips her hair, rouges her lips, cheeks and earlobes, is as awkward as a puppy and has the knowledge of a 50-year old woman combined with a slangy silliness which one would associate with a moron.

The masculine haircut is responsible for a lot of this, for the moment a girl clips her hair and becomes unfettered with feminine charms she attempts to ape the mannerisms and swagger of the male. Daintiness and charm mean nothing to her. She wants to be sort of a female sheik, a perfect counterfeit of her boy friend, and one wonders what her boy friend thinks as they dance side-burn to sideburn.

Bobbed hair has been a great blessing to women and it is hoped that the extreme mannish cut will not be the means of dealing the death-blow to short hair in general. When a style becomes too extreme we flee from it as rats flee from a sinking ship. Let us not permit a grotesque hair style, that is certain to have a demise, linger long in its passing.

A GIRL of TODAY

A CRUEL ACT

"But I thought you wanted to come here," said Jerry in surprise.

"I did, but I've been properly punished for it. I never knew myself yet to try and feed my vanity and get away with it. I didn't expect that Tremaine woman was going to be here. I thought she would have the decency to stay away from such places now that her husband is out of town. She's primed for trouble. Look! She's sending a note over to Joan."

At that moment her brother, who seemed to be the only carefree person in the whole party, spoke to me.

"I've decided not to go to Africa, darling. Why should I throw away all my happiness for the sake of some old dry scientific research?"

I did not turn my head.

"Judy, darling, I am talking to you."

"Oh, pardon me, I didn't know my name was 'Darling'."

"Stop your joking, you knew it was—you knew you were my darling—turn and look at me—I have hardly had a glance of your eyes tonight; and beside, you are not eating anything, you who told me you were so very hungry before we started."

I turned toward him dutifully and so did not see Joan's face and so did not read the note which had been sent her by Mrs. Tremaine.

"Judy," she called across the table, "here is something which I think might interest you," and she lightly threw the paper across.

I glanced at Mamie. I knew that Mrs. Tremaine was trying to make trouble for her, and then I read the note.

"My dear Joan: I am quite sure that you do not know that one of the guests at your party is a young woman that I am going to make co-respondent in my coming action for divorce from Buddy. I am writing this to you for I am also going to inform the management of her character immediately, and suggest that I, in deference to my position, cannot stay in this restaurant while she is in the room. This will give you a chance to ask her to go as I know you do not want her any more than I do. Affectionately and cordially yours, Sally Tremaine."

"What does that cat of a woman mean, Judy," asked Joan, as I slowly laid the note down upon the table.

"Is she writing about me?" questioned Mamie. "Please, Miss Meredith, let me leave your party; Jerry will take me home and I do not want to make any trouble."

"You'll do nothing of the kind, Mamie," I spoke. "We'll just go on as nothing had happened."

"But I must, I must, Judy," said Mamie. "She is determined to ruin me, I can't stay here. Please, Miss Meredith, excuse me; oh, I didn't think she could be so cruel."

DRESS
By MARY MARSHALL

Evening frock made all of sequins, the frock itself of gold, with band of black at bottom, and trimming of flowers in shades of red. The flowers are edged with tiny silver beads.

There is something stimulating in the mere reading of a list of the colors considered smart for the season. "New colors," we call them, though many of them are certainly older than Egypt and were quite ancient when Babylon was young. They are as old as the sunset, the rainbow or the petals of flowers. The only thing new is in the assembling of them. Each season the mysterious forces that direct what we call fashion bring before us certain colors, certain shades, and they become the smart colors of the season. Just those colors have never been brought together before. That grouping of color accords with the fashion mood of the day.

Once more we have quite a distinct line drawn between evening shades and day-time shades. Certain tones are entirely in the picture for afternoon or morning, but out of the question for evening. Black, however, occupies an important place at any time. Black evening frocks are much more desirable than they were a season ago. Next to black and white comes pink—and after the pinks, say the experts, come oranges.

Such shades as jungle green and egg-plant purple are seldom used for evening gowns. No one chooses brown for evening nowadays. Gold and silver and the glimmer of diamante are still most desirable for evening. Blue is seldom seen after candle light. However, navy blue is chosen for street wear by a number of very well dressed women. So-called Valencia blue is the color of a number of afternoon costumes, and porcelain blue is used by innumerable milliners.

Fringe is Smart

The striking use of fringe is one of the charming features of this new model. Quite individual, too, is the cross-over arrangement of the collar, the ends of which are held in place with buttons. The dart-fitted sleeves are finished with buttoned tabs, and a narrow tie belt assists in creating a blouse effect at the low waist-line. The foundation of this frock is in one piece, the fringe being set on in rows one above the other. NO. 1393 is in sizes 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42 inches bust. Size 36 requires 3¼ yards 39-inch material; 4½ yards fringe seven inches wide. 20 cents.

Our Fashion Book, illustrating the newest and most practical styles, will be of interest to every home dressmaker. Price of the book 10 cents the copy.

CONDITION—Flabbiness about the waist.

TREATMENT—You were endowed with plenty of muscles to keep your waistline trim if you just make them all work instead of allowing them to loaf. Take the position illustrated, and with the hands and feet thus moored bring your body as far from your hands and then as near as you can. This will pull and stretch at the muscles of the stomach and abdomen and remind them of the reasons of their existence. This will also be beneficial for your spine.

LOVE LETTERS THAT MADE HISTORY
(By Joseph Kaye.)

JOHN PASTON AND MARGARET BREWS

(By The McClure Syndicate, Inc.)

The following letter is from the famous collection of the old letters of the English Paston family, a collection which is celebrated for the complete picture of the life of a family and its branches and the period they lived in. Miss Brews' almost pathetic missive to her "valentine" could be used as material for a chapter of a novel. It is comforting to know that her resignation to any fortune her love might bring and her faith bore fruit and she and Paston were eventually married.

"February, 1477.

"Right worshipful and well-beloved Valentine, in my humble wise I recommend me unto you. And heartily I thank you for the letter which that ye send me by John Beckerton, whereby I am informed and know that ye be purposed to come to Topcroft in short time and without my errand or matter but only to have a conclusion of the matter between my father and you. I would be most glad of any creature in life so that the matter might grow into effect. And there as ye say, ye would no more put my father and my ladye my mother to no cost nor business, for that cause, a good while after—which causeth mine heart to be full heavy; and that if ye come, and the matter take to none effect, then I should be more sorry and full of heaviness.

"And as for myself, I have done and understood in the matter that I can and may, as God knoweth; and I let you plainly understand that my father will no more money part withall in that behalf but £100, and one mark which is right far from the accomplishment of your desire.

"Wherefore, if that ye could be content with that good, and my poor person, I would be the merriest maiden on the ground. And if ye think not yourself so satisfied, or that I might have much more good, and as I have understood by you afore—good, true and loving Valentine, that ye take no such labour upon you as to come more for that matter, but let it pass and never be spoken of, as I may be your true lover during my life.

"No more unto you at this time but Almighty Jesus preserve you both body and soul.

"By your Valeintine, M. B.

YOUR JEWEL COLOR FLOWER
By Mildred Marshall

The omen of ill luck is today's natal, and talismanic stone. This is the wondrously beautiful and uncanny opal. It is an emblem of good fortune, however, on this day. The fire opal is particularly lucky, and that rare gem the black opal, is thrice lucky. The gem came into evil repute because it was believed to symbolize the Evil Eye, and absurd contention which has no basis of truth.

Violet is today's lucky color. It will bring happiness and serenity to those who wear it.

The red carnation is the flower of today.

GOATS LIKE GUM.

GLACIER PARK, Mont., Oct. 1.—Rangers in the park have discovered that mountain goats like to chew spruce gum. The animals go down to timberline to feed and gnaw the drops of sap from the trunks of spruce trees. Observers saw an old billy goat get gum in his wiskers and become more and more entangled as he tried to comb it out.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, but do not Compel.

(Copyright, McClure Syndicate.)

FOR SATURDAY OCTOBER 2 1926.

Jupiter and Neptune in benefic aspect dominate to-day, according to astrology. Mercury, the Sun and Saturn are adverse.

All the signs appear to indicate a tremendous revival of business which will be conducted with unusual foresight.

The tendency in every line of work will be more and more toward scientific efficiency, the seers foretell, and only the super-men and women of splendid training can hope to lead.

Science is to make amazing strides in the coming winter, astrologers foretell, and discoveries will go beyond the material and physical into the realm of the occult.

Perception and foresight should be sharpened under this rule of the stars which is most helpful to those who make plans.

Although crime apparently is to increase there is to be a decided accession of interest in intellectual and spiritual things, the seers prophesy.

Dress will reflect in a measure this reaction, for there will be extremes of fashion, it is foretold.

Saturn is in a place read as threatening to the serenity of government here or abroad, for many puzzling international questions will develop.

Municipal improvements of many sorts will be encouraged by the planetary government in which the good aspect of Venus to Saturn is helpful, the seers predict.

The Moon aspects promise much for publishing. Writers and editors are to benefit in many ways in the next few months.

Fires, earthquakes and mining disasters again are foretold by the fact that Mars is approaching opposition to Saturn.

Persons whose birthdate it is should be careful in money matters for deceptions may be easy.

Children born on this day may be exceedingly ambitious but they should be taught not to indulge in false hopes. These subjects of Libra often have unusual talents.

No army, no taxation, no roads, and therefore no automobiles—that is the record of Andorra, the strange little republic in the Pyrenees between France and Spain.

UNCLE WIGGILY

Today's Bedtime Story

By Howard R. Garis

(Copyright, 1926, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"Wow! Ouch! Gurr! Katinka!" howled the Skillery Scallery Alligator as he waddled up and down the middle of his den on the edge of the dank, dark, dismal forest.

"What's the matter?" asked the Alligator's wife who was mending a hole in one of the 'Gator's socks. And, as he wore four socks, and had long claw nails, he was continually making holes in his socks, so it kept his wife very busy mending them. "What's the matter, Allie?" she asked.

"Toothache!" he howled. "Such a dreadful toothache! Gurr!"

"Why don't you go to the dentist and have it pulled?" asked Mrs. 'Gator. "I'm sure that would be best."

"Best for the dentist, but not for me!" snarled the scaly old grouch, which I hope you will excuse me for calling him, but such he was in very truth. "Do you think I'm going to pay a dentist for taking out one of my teeth?" asked the surly chap.

"I guess that is the only way to stop the ache," said the Alligator lady, who was not quite so pestifferous as was her husband. "Is it a hollow tooth?"

"It is!" snapped the 'Gator biting down hard upon it, which only made it ache all the worse. "But I'm not going to a dentist. Don't think it! I'll cure my own pain!"

"How?" asked his wife.

"I'll go out and catch a rabbit," was the answer. "If I can nibble a rabbit's ears, my toothache will stop, I'm sure. I'll go out and catch Uncle Wiggily."

"Be careful he doesn't catch you!" said the Alligator lady, and though it sounded as though she had sneezed, she hadn't.

"Ha! Ha! I should like to see Uncle Wiggily catch me!" sneered the Skillery Scallery Alligator. "I'll get him first!"

So out of his den he waddled, his hollow tooth aching more and more, until that 'Gator was angry enough to bite an elephant, if he had seen one.

Uncle Wiggily, knowing nothing of what was in store for him, was happily hopping home toward his hollow stump bungalow and his forty ,leven little bunny children. I say he was happily hopping and so he was, for Uncle Wiggily was bringing to the children some summer taffy.

Having been out looking for an adventure, and finding none, except that he jumped in a mud puddle and saved a little red ant lady from getting drowned, Uncle Wiggily was on his way home, a bit disappointed, when he passed a little roadside stand where an old dog gentleman sold old bones for hungry puppies, and also summer taffy.

"How different from any other candy is summer taffy?" asked Uncle Wiggily as he read the sign.

"Why," answered the old dog, "summer taffy is made to be eaten in the summer, just as winter taffy is made to be eaten in the winter."

"I'll buy a bag of your summer taffy for my little bunnies," said Mr. Long-

His tooth ached worse than ever.

ears, and so he did. He was on his way then, happily hopping toward his home with the summer taffy when, all of a sudden, out from behind a bush popped the Skillery Scallery Alligator, his hollow tooth aching more than ever.

"You're just the one to cure toothache!" snapped the 'Gator, opening wide his mouth. Uncle Wiggily looked inside and saw the bad chap's hollow tooth. And Uncle Wiggily knew that sweet candy, like summer taffy, was bad for aching teeth. The rabbit gentleman took careful aim with his bag of taffy and threw it into the 'Gator's mouth so it went into the hollow tooth.

And then such a howling as that bad chap started. For his tooth ached worse than ever.

"Gurry! Scurry! Flurry! Wow! Wunk! Wink!" yelled the 'Gator, and such tears of pain came into his eyes that he couldn't see to bite the rabbit gentleman, who hopped off to one side, back to the old dog's stand, where he bought more summer taffy.

"And I hope I don't meet any more bad chaps," said the bunny. He did not, soon safely reaching his bungalow with the bag of sweet candy. And, as the little bunny children all had good teeth, none of them ached, and they had no trouble.

So everything ended happily, except for the 'Gator, and he was served as he should have been. And, if the loaf of bread will take the pound of butter to the lollypop's picnic, I'll tell you again about Uncle Wiggily.

NEW MOTOR OIL.

PARIS, Oct. 1.—Chemists, seeking a substitue for castor oil, which has to be imported, have found a way to secure the oil from grape seeds. This is said to be of very high quality and suitable for airplane engines. Seven or eight gallons of oil are taken from the seeds in a ton of grapes.

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK?

By EDSON R. WAITE, Shawnee, Oklahoma.

That a man's first obligation, after his duty to his God and his family, is service to his community.

So many men and women become so engrossed in their own personal fortunes and welfare, they give little thought to their town and state.

That is selfish in the extreme. If every one did that, what sort of world would this be?

The community booster is sneered at by such men as Mencken, but you take this same element out of a community and it will die of dry rot.

ANNA

Though coming originally from the same source, Anna and Anne are two very different names. To call a girl bearing the pretty appellative derived from the Hebrew Chaanach, Anna or Anne indiscriminatively, is a gross error. They are separate names and should not be used interchangeably.

Anna was first known as the Roman goddess of the circling year. She was confused later with Anne, the companion sister of Dido, whose tragic end is recorded by Virgil in the "Aenid." According to Roman tradition, Anna pursued the faithless Aeneas to Italy, after the suicide of Dido, and there drowned herself in the river Numicius where she became a presiding deity.

The Irish have a similar legend to account for their Anna: the daughter of the chief of the Firbolg race drowned herself in the river Life, and since the Irish word for river is Amhain, the two words became, on English tongues, Anna Liffey, and were supposed to form the unfortunate lady's name.

There was also a St. Anna in Byzantium for whom the Emperor Justinian built a church in 550. Thus Anna became a popular name among Greek damsels, and a daughter or Emperor Basil married Vladimir, Grand Prince of Muscovy. Another famous bearer of the name was Anna d'Este of Italy who brought her title to the house of Guise.

Like Anne, the talismanic gem of Anna is the pearl. It promises her good fortune, many friends, and extreme affability. Wednesday is her lucky day and 5 her lucky number.

FOOD AND HEALTH.

FOOD AND THE MODERN HOUSEWIFE

By Winifred Stuart Gibbs, Food Specialist.

"Mrs. Three-in-One," Isabel Cotton Smith calls her, our modern housewife! For she, like her pioneer ancestress, must be cook, waitress and gracious chatelaine at one and the same time. The waited-upon leisure of the women who came in between, when even a modest household had at least one "girl" or "maid," according to geographical location, are over. None but the wealthy now bask in complete absence of household drudgery.

This state of affairs would be far more sad than is the case were it not for the fact that the modern women has risen, as is the way with women, to meet her problems. She has brought her trained mind to bear upon the matter and is slowly but surely evolving a program of admirable efficiency.

It is because she must combine the viewpoints of so many occupations that Mrs. Three-in-One has such an interesting time with her housework. Since it is with the nutrition of the household that "Food and Health" is for the most part concerned, how about analyzing Mrs. Three-in-One's triple title from the standpoint of must this, complete nutrition?

Cook first. Mrs. Three-in-One in this capacity is accustomed to apply her chemistry to the preparation of her family's food. This is good but it is not enough. Back of her thoughts of how too much heat will toughen the fibres of the roast, while too little makes the starchy foods indigestible, must go Mrs. Cook's thoughts to the question of her own health. Unless she brings to her task as cook a brain and hand tuned to co-ordinated effort she will not have a light touch with cake or sauce. Unless she is well nourished herself her brain and hand will lack the maximum of ability to co-ordinate, and there you are or rather she is!

When it comes to be waitress the house-mistress will, of course, have a slightly different type of problem from the professional waitress. She will be thinking of far more than the mere handing of the dishes. Her sub-conscious mind will be dwelling on the anxious wonder as to whether the pudding is sufficiently simple for Bobby and appealing enough for Bobby's father, and so on, ad lib. Here again, if Mrs. Waitress is herself well fed, she will find that these questions cease to worry her, for she will have used her own health as the motive power to drive her on to such mastery of nutrition principles that she will know that little Bobby and big Bob are receiving just what they should have for both health and pleasure!

As for the last of Mrs. Three-in One's titles, when she is acting either as home mistress or more formally, as hostess to guests, then indeed will her own well fed nerves help her to dominate the situation. Her own supple and responsive muscles will lead her unconsciously to such graceful movements as will give pleasure to all concerned. Her strong bones will provide for her well-built body such a firm foundation that the very spirit of graciousness will inhabit that body and look from its eyes!

A multiplication of words, when we simply mean to say that a well nourished woman is a better house mother and hostess than a mal-nourished one?

Perhaps. But even so, one may be quite convinced of the truth of certain principles while at the same time he is ignorant of their laws of operation. Therefore a bit of a talk sometimes will prove suggestive!

The Storm

By SHIRLEY RODMAN WILLIAMS

THERE was a mother who couldn't understand her child's nervousness and fear of the dark, yet every time a storm came she hustled the whole family down cellar where they waited in the awful dusk. She never had witnessed a cyclone either—she was just afraid and either couldn't, or didn't, control herself, never realizing that she was doing more harm to the child during one storm than she could correct in weeks. If you are afraid of anything, don't ever let the little ones know and if they are afraid, by your own calmness and seeming lack of concern, instill quite a confidence into them. A storm is a thing of great beauty, with its mountainous thunderheads ripped with lightning and its swirling wind clouds. Let your child look at it. He won't attract harm any faster than if you draw him fearfully away, and he will experience a sense of strength and strange beauty.

BIG CONFERENCE IN MASSEY HALL

Five Conferences of United Church To Send Delegates.

NEXT WEEK.

TORONTO, Oct. 1.—All the congregations of the Bay of Quinte conference from Whitby and Lindsay to Kingston and Pembroke, have been invited to send delegates to an unique conference of the United church forces, to be held in Massey Hall, Toronto, October 5-7. Indications are that, in addition to the pastors, a representation of the congregations, Sunday schools and young people's societies from most pastoral charges will be secured. Toronto committees are already arranging accomodation for all delegates on arrival.

Three days of closely-packed programme await the representatives of the five conferences within the two provinces of Ontario and Quebec. Bay of Quinte leaders will take an active part. The president of the conference, Rev. G. A. Brown, M.A., B.D., Kingston, has been asked to conduct a devotional service. During discussion of congregational work, W. S. Martin of Stirling will share with W. B. Sparling of Toronto the duty of expanding the every person canvass. H. W. Ackerman, Belleville, is taking part in the laymen's banquet. Mrs. H. S. Lavell Kingston, president of the Woman's Missionary Society, will address the convention.

On Wednesday afternoon the five conferences will meet separately, the Bay of Quinte delegates assembling then in Carlton Street United church to discuss their special problems in relation to maintenance and extension of the church's work.

The main conference lasts till Thursday night, when the Very Rev. Dr. Harvey of Scotland, Hon. N. W. Rowell, K.C., and Mr. J. H. Gundy will be the speakers at the final evening session to be held in the Metropolitan church. Dr. Harvey is expected to arrive in Canada in time to address the opening session on Tuesday. He is to speak each morning and his addresses, with the Moderator's opening message are expected to be features of the conference.

Newfoundlanders in the Canadian ministry, of whom each conference has its share, will hold one of the many special reunions made possible by the unusual territorial scope of the gathering. It is said that 115 former pastors and probationers of the Newfoundland Methodist Conference are now serving throughout Canada and that half of these will be at next week's gathering.

College reunions, including both ministry and laity, are also being arranged.

The theme of the whole conference is Dominion and World Service, and its effects on the church's work are expected to be general during the coming year. A small group of laymen are underwriting the cost of bringing all the 1,300 ministers in five conferences of London, Hamilton, Toronto, Bay of Quinte, and Montreal and Ottawa to this centre. Congregations are looking after the travelling expenses of their lay delegates who will spend the three days in consideration of the task of the United church at home and abroad.

INSPECTOR BAFFLED AT WOMAN'S DEATH

Miss Roediger May Have Met Death in Three Ways, Says Officer.

ST. CATHARINES, Oct. 1.—Admitting that his investigations in the case have disclosed three possible answers to the question as to the manner in which Mrs. Meta Roediger met her death here several weeks ago, Provincial Inspector John Miller, who is in charge of the case, came back to the city yesterday to finish up a few remaining details prior to the inquest. Inspector Miller said that the Provincial Analyst's report on the examination of the women's stomach would be ready by today, and would undoubtedly disclose that she died of poison of some kind, whether taken by accident, self-administered with suicidal intent or given her with intent to murder.

Three Conclusions Formed

Inspector Miller said he was led to the three conclusions in this puzzling mystery by the fact that Mrs. Roediger had in the pantry a package of soda which she used for indigestion. This stood near a package of a mixture used to destroy harmful insects on the farm. She may have taken up the wrong package by accident or possibly on purpose, while it may have been placed there by some one who wished her ill, as her husband charges.

Was Subject to Melancholia

The woman was subject to fits of melancholia, members of the family admit, and the children say the mother often seemed very downhearted. The neighbors also corroborate that Mrs. Roediger at times was not herself. One night some time before her death George Roediger obtained the assistance of neighbors to hunt for his wife, as he said she had disappeared. After some time she returned, having gone to see her eldest son, who does not live at home, without telling anyone where she was going. Inspector Miller points out that the dual life insurance policy for $2,000 held by Mr. and Mrs. Roediger may be looked upon as of no consequence, as that would be found practically in every family.

ESKIMO RUINS ARE EXCAVATED

Remarkable Discoveries Made By Museum Officials in North.

ANCIENT CULTURES.

Mr. Diamond Jenness, Chief of the Division of Anthropology in the Victoria Memorial Museum has just returned to Ottawa from a four months' field trip to Bering Strait, Alaska, where he was excavating some of the ancient Eskimo ruins and studying the local dialects in an effort to determine the origin and antiquity of an ancient Eskimo civilization that has left its traces in Canada from he Mackenzie River Delta right across to Hudson Bay. He reports that travelling in this region is very uncertain on account of the small size of the coastal vessels, the lack of sheltered harbours, and the storminess of middle and late summer. Much of his work was necessarily in the nature of a reconnaissance, but he was fortunate in making some interesting discoveries. At Wales, the nearest point of Alaska to Asia, he unearthed ruins belonging to four distinct periods, all of which preceded the discovery of Alaska by Europeans; and—significantly enough—the remains in the ruins of the second period coincided very closely with those from the oldest known ruins in Arctic Canada. Subsequent excavations on the Diomede Islands confirmed those at Wales, and revealed also the presence of a still earlier culture of which no traces have yet been found within Canadian territory. The most remarkable feature of this earlier culture was some beautiful curvilinear engraving, curiously reminiscent of the work of Melanesian natives in the South Pacific; but since contact with Melanesia seems entirely out of the question, one will have to seek among the neighboring Indian tribes or in North-East Asia, for the sources of this strange Eskimo art, so unlike what we know from Eskimos elsewhere, or indeed from these same Eskimos in more recent times. The local Eskimo folklore and traditions do show, in fact, strong Indian influence, which Mr. Jenness discovered also in the masked dances, in the use of body armour made of bone or ivory, and in certain sounds in the language.

Historical records being altogether lacking in this region, and geological evidence not available, Mr. Jenness was unable to assign definite dates to the various cultures he unearthed. He is confident, nevertheless, that the earliest must go back to at least 1000-1500 years, and may well be much older. He believes also that more extensive researches around the shores of Bering Sea will reveal still more ancient remains, and throw much light on the origin and history of the Eskimo tribes not only in Alaska, but also in Canada and Greenland.

GENTLEMANLY WOMEN

When something new evolves it is up to the lexicographers to find us the proper word to define it. As when, for instance, flying machines began to fly they evolved "airplane" as the proper word.

Very well then, of course there have been "gentlemanly women" throughout history to a certain extent, but not enough of them to inspire the lexicographers to define them dictionarily. We made a good deal of capital out of the fact that there was no word for "gentleman" in German, during the war. This was good for a column by many an Allied scribe—even if we have since discovered that the one-time "enemy" can prove more "gentlemanly" about his financial engagements than some of our more approved Allies of that hectic day.

Nowadays, however, there is quite an effulgence of "gentlemanly women" who we should shudder to define as that much abused word "ladies." "Lady" doesn't mean the same thing at all.

A Word for Highly Honorable Women.

We want a word that means something rather superior in the way of integrity and good sportsmanship, something that means taking things gallantly, courageously, honestly, fairly. Something that combines good manners, good morals, fair dealing, kindly consideration, a scrupulous regard for other people's rights and preferences. We want a word that is the antithesis of petty selfishness, sneakiness, trading on feminine weaknesses and privileges; a word, in short, that means a highly honorable woman.

The need of this word becomes so apparent in numerous modern plays. There is quite a vogue for describing heroines as "gentlemanly." "Gentlewoman" would not do either, for that implies graces rather than qualities of scrupulous fairness and integrity and unfailing honesty of purpose.

When we say that a woman is a "good sport," that is so inadequate and open to misinterpretation. It lacks polish. We want a word that implies infinitely more than that.

Not only on the stage and in novels, but we are meeting this type of woman every day in real life—a type of woman with not only a well-informed mind, a clean and courageous mind, replete with spiritual scruples and kindly understanding, but who is also gay, interesting, well-groomed, capable, and would scorn to trade on the traditional privileges of her sex, a type of woman that meets men on their own best level and asks no quarter. She is a most engagingly attractive type combining both charm and integrity—and yet we have no word to describe her better than "a good sport" or a "gentlemanly woman."

Although it is a bit hackneyed, we know exactly what we mean when we describe a man as "A gentleman in the best sense of the word." We mean something not only well-bred but essentially honorable. "Gentlewoman" signifies the breeding and grace of manners, but not essential honor and honesty, superior courage, fine scruple.

A movie actor recently offered $100 to anyone who would think up a better word for "sheik"—a word that would imply a combination of cave-man, heman, sheik—and something a bit superior—masculine besides.

But I think a new word for the "gentlemanly woman" is even more urgently needed. We can have all the fine qualities remain masculine through the ages.

YOUR HOME AND YOU

How many eggs should we use? Some years ago it was estimated that the average consumption of eggs in this country was thirteen dozen or 156 per individual per year. Such average figures really give us little idea of what our own habits should be. To quote an authority of the United States Department of Agriculture: "Judged by available statistics, eggs compare favorably with the more common animal food as regards both the total food material and the total protein and fat furnished by them in the average daily dietary. In other words, investigations show that they constitute one of the very important articles of diet in the American household."

How many eggs do you allow per individual in your own weekly budget of food? Excepting where strictest economy is necessary each child in the family—even in winter when eggs are dear—should have an egg a day. To be sure there are some cases where eggs disagree but this is rare. There are other cases where children simply do not care for eggs—this is unfortunate and a difficulty that can sometimes be overcome by the use of a little suggestion and tact. One very conservative children's specialist says that "most children from four to ten years old will take one egg for breakfast and another for supper for an indefinite period with relish and benefit."

Most adults can eat one or two eggs for breakfast with benefit. The number of eggs that should be eaten by anyone should, of course be decided partly by the amount of meat and other protein included in the daily diet. Two or three eggs or even more a day would hardly be too much for the normal adult who ate little or no meat.

An authority on dietary matters tells us that when eggs are high many housewives eliminate eggs almost entirely as a meat substitute—they give up eggs for breakfast, they do without omelets, poached eggs, etc. What few eggs they do have are used for cakes, puddings and elaborate made dishes. Now this is the wrong way about. When you must do without many eggs—use what you can still afford for the simple egg dishes. Because eggs are more beneficial in this form. Give up the rich egg desserts and in their place substitute simpler dishes.

Airtight Pitching Wins Third Game For Toronto

LEAFS' STRING OF VICTORIES THREE BEATING COLONELS IN 10TH INNING

Mullen Scores Winning Run When Miller Singles.

SORRELL PITCHES.

Final Game of Series in Toronto on Saturday.

TORONTO, Oct. 1—Louisville's cup of grief was filled to overflowing when Victor Sorrell, Toronto's brilliant young hurler, pitched the Leafs to their third consecutive victory in the Junior World Series game at Leaf Stadium yesterday afternoon with only twenty-nine hundred fans looking on. The score was 2 to 1. For the second time in succession the game went past regulation innings, and, as on the previous occasion, Toronto's fighting team earned the verdict, Otis Miller's single in the tenth driving in Billy Mullen with the winning run.

Sorrell, in winning his ninth consecutive game since joining Toronto, was at his best, and the alleged hard-hitting Colonels were restricted to four hits, two of them being bunched in he fourth frame to give them their only run. In the other games "Jess" Doyle and Owen Carroll had hurled remarkable ball, but it remained for the youthful right-hander to make just as fine a showing. He used a fine change of pace, shot a fast ball across on occasions and made use of a curve ball that had the Kentuckians bending their backs in an effort to hit it.

Little Heavy Hitting

Tight pitching duels have been the order and in the thirty innings played the American Association champions have made only seventeen hits and scored but three runs. Toronto's record shows twenty-six safeties and seven runs. There have been only three extra-base hits, Shanks hitting two doubles in the second game and Otis Miller one in the first. That is pitching of major league calibre.

With the moundsmen dominating the situation the games have lacked the thrilling features that the fans expected but the fielding has been high-class and the extra-inning battles have produced plenty of excitement. Toronto however, is giving the series the go-by, and to date less than ten thousand fans have passed through the turnstiles. There will be no game this afternoon, but the final tomorrow should attract a record crowd for the season.

To say that the officials in charge of the series are disappointed is putting it mildly. The Toronto Club management anticipated that at least ten thousand would be the daily average, and now they find that figure hasn't been reached with all the attendance combined. But enough of the gloom.

The first nine men to face Sorrell learned to their sorrow that Toronto's undefeated moundsman has a lot of stuff. They went out in order, but when Sorrell tried to do the same thing all over again he lost control and walked Pittenger lead-off man, in the fourth. Guyon, the Indian flyer, tried to sacrifice, but Sorrell played the grounder poorly and Guyon was credited with a single. That started the trouble properly. Acoasta forced Pittenger at third, but Webb, the clean-up hitter, made his first and only safety of the series and drove Guyon home. Sorrell then struck out Devormer and Cotter grounded out.

C. G. E. LADIES ARE CONFIDENT

Have Been Practising Faithfully For Game With Supremes.

PLAY ON SATURDAY.

The C.G.E. girls have been practicing very faithfully and are in fine shape. They are confident of winning the game here on Saturday. Jack Pilling, their manager, says that with all due respect to the Supremes as a wonderful team, it took four games to decide the championship of Toronto between Danforths and Supremes. The last game was won by the umpire allowing Annie Miller to go home from second base on interference. Back in the spring, when Danforth played here, they beat the C.G.E. by only one run.

C.G.E. Ladies have the finest battery in the Dominion of Canada, and if Babe Vincent is going right there is no doubt in the manager's mind as to Saturday's game.

The line-up for this game will be the same as the last three. Umpires will be Alec Kay on bases and a Toronto man behind the plate.

The scores of the opening game of the World Series will be announced.

Anti-Sunday Clause In Keen's Contract

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—Howard Victor Keen, 26-year-old star of the St. Louis Cardinals' pitching staff, cannot be called upon for duty in the second game of the World Series Sunday.

Keen, a native of Philadelphia and graduate of the University of Maryland, is the son of a Methodist minister now located in Baltimore. Both father and son are opposed to playing on the Sabbath. Keen's contract has a clause exempting him from duty on this day.

OLYMPIC CHAMPION GOES PROFESSIONAL

Player Comes Into Prominence After Winning Boys' Tennis Championship.

NEW YORK, Oct. 1. — Vincent Richards, Olympic champion, and third ranking tennis player in the United States, has joined the ranks of the professionalism under the wing of C. C. Pyle. The announcement was made by Pyle last night at a dinner in honor of Suzanne Lenglen aboard the steamship Paris of the French Line here last night.

The first to congratulate Richards were Mlle. Lenglen, Mary K. Browne and Mrs. Richards. Richards, previously known as the 'Boy Wonder,' is 23 years old. He came into prominence in 1917 when at the age of 14 he won the national boys' championship of America. He held the title of national junior champion in 1919-21 and the indoor junior championship in 1918-20.

He defeated William T. Tilden for the national indoor singles championship in the final in 1922. His phenomenal rise in the tennis world carried him to joint possession of the national doubles title with Tilden at the age of 15. This was in 1918, and in 1919 he regained the doubles crown with Tilden again.

Richards' advent completes the array of tennis stars secured by Pyle for a professional tour of this country and Canada which starts on October 9 at Madison Square Garden. With Richards will be Mlle. Lenglen, Miss Browne and Paul Feret, the fourth ranking player of France.

Richards' departure from the amateur fold came as a surprise to tennis followers in view of his declarations several weeks ago that he would not join the professional fieled. His professional standing jolted the hopes of the United States as regards to a nucleus for its Davis Cup team next year, along with the probability that Richards might have been selected as the ranking No. 1 player of America. Richards was the only American to survive to the semi-finals in the recent national championships, finally being overcome by Jean Borotra of France. The likelihood of the passing of the national doubles championships from this country now held by Richards and Richard N. Williams is regarded as imminent.

The number of stars that can be seen by a person of average eyesight is about 7000. The number visible through the largest telescope is almost infinite.

WORLD SERIES PLAYERS PRIMED FOR THE OPENING

Believe Games Will Be As Hotly Contested as of Former Years.

VANGUARD ARRIVES.

Batteries For Either Teams Not Officially Announced as Yet.

NEW YORK, Oct. 1 (Canadian Press) — With another day's practice under their belts, the Yankees and Cardinals believe themselves primed for a finish fight in the battle for the world's baseball championship that starts Saturday in the open spaces of the Yankee stadium.

Experts who watched the rival teams put in brisk workouts at the American League park yesterday afternoon, as well as the advance guard of fandom's host, gathering from all corners of the country, are confident that the series will be equally as hotly contested as those of 1924 and 1925, each of which went the full limit of seven games. The closely matched playing strength of the two teams as well as the ability of each to rally under reverses, strengthens the prospect of a keenly fought title battle.

Although Wall Street betting commissioners have established the Yankees as slight favorites, many wagers being placed at odds of 6 to 5, a tendency toward even money was indicated yesterday as Yankee supporters encountered the rush of incoming Cardinal rooters.

The spur of conquering clan was evident in yesterday's batting and held drill of the Cardinals. Hornsby still was visibly affected by the death of his mother in Texas but he directed the workout and courageously put as much zest as possible into his own efforts. The manager's ordeal has strengthened the admiration and affection held for him by his men and his decision to play through the series apparently has fired them to renewed determination.

Neither Hornsby nor Miller Huggins, Yankee pilot, shed further light on their pitching selections. Hornsby said he would not make any choice before tonight but the Cardinal camp seems certain it will be either Willie Sherdel or Grover Cleveland Alexander. The annoying effects of a slow-ball on the energy of the Yankees' attack may sway Hornsby's selection to Sherdel, who possesses a tantalizing toss of this variety. The Yankee twirling choice is understood to rest between Herb Pennock and Urban Shocker, with the chances favoring Pennock.

New York absorbed the vanguard of fans, many of them from St. Louis, with customary facility but hotel lobbies, the theatre district and centres of metropolitan sporing life reflected evidence of unusual series interest. It the rush on Saturday morning for the turnstiles to the unreserved areas of the Yankee stadium is anything like expectations, the big ball park will bulge with a record series crowd. The previous high mark, 62,817 in 1923, may be exceeded by 5,000 if all available room is filled.

Weather prospects are none too bright for the opening game Saturday, with a week end of rain predicted. The present schedule calls for the first two games here Saturday and Sunday with a jump to St. Louis for a renewal of the battles there Tuesday, but in the event of any postponement, the teams will remain here until two games are completed. The same rule holds good for the three contests scheduled in St. Louis. Providing the series is not settled in five games, New York will be the scene of the deciding conflicts.

YANKS MUST SHOW REVERSAL OF SEPTEMBER FORM TO WIN

Club Has Been Playing Poor Ball for the Past Six Weeks.

HAD BATTING SLUMP.

Cardinals Have a Splendid Infield, With Plenty of Spirit and Harmony.

BY BILLY EVANS

NEW YORK, Oct. 1—If the New York Americans are to have a chance of beating the St. Louis Cardinals in the world series, the Yankees must do a right about face quickly.

The Yanks literally staggered under the wire as the American League pennant winner.

For perhaps six weeks the club has been running in low gear. Down the home stretch it was in reverse most of the time.

Playing in mid-season form, the style of the game that enabled the Yankees to pile up winning streaks of 16 and 11 games, I would figure them to defeat the best the National League could offer.

When Bats Fail.

Should the club continue its September form in the world series, it would not present the formidable opposition it is really capable of.

The weak showing the Yankees have made in the home stretch can be charged to one thing— a terrific batting slump.

If there is one thing the New York club can do, it is hit the ball. That has been its ace in the hole in one of the most surprising campaigns waged in the American League in years.

Rated a joke team by a majority of experts in the spring, the Yankees were away to a good start. The club received better pitching than it expected. This help plus a punch at the bat, won the pennant and provided one of the greatest form upsets in years.

Then late in August the batting power of the Yankees dropped to a whisper. The pitching fell off a trifle. This naturally was followed by a decline in the morale of the club. So that in the final stages of the race, the Yankees suffered many unpleasant afternoons.

The strain of the pennant race removed, will it make a difference in the spirit and play of the New York club? I am inclined to think it will.

The Yankee club has great possibilties. When it is hitting it is one of those teams that overwhelms you.

Irregular Play.

One of he games in the final series with the Chicago White Sox best explains what I mean. After losing a double-header by close scores, in which a timely hit or two would have meant a couple of victories, the Yanks came back the next day and slaughtered Chicago, 14 to 0.

Every club is naturally at its best when in a batting mood, but no team more so than the Yankees, since strength in that department of play is the outstanding feature of the club.

There is no happy medium with the Yankees. The club is either great or just mediocre.

The 1926 clash between New York and St. Louis strikes me as a meeting between two good, but not great ball clubs. As a matter of fact, great ball clubs are the exception in the major leagues these days.

"The Chicago White Sox of 1919 would have won the American League pennant by at least a dozen games this year," was the remark one of the Yankee stars made to me after the race was definitely decided.

The St. Louis Cardinals is a young club that should improve. It has played throughout the season as if inspired and has shown the greatest of courage under terrific fire.

Hornsby Proves Stuff.

Rogers Hornsby has proved himself a highly competent manager. He has shown the way to his players. He has done everything he asks them to do. As a result the Cardinals have the spirit and the harmony that makes for success.

I rate the St. Louis infield better than the Yankees on both offense and defense, although the margin is not wide. I would give the edge to the Yankee outfield over the Cardinals by about the same ratio.

Bob O'Farrell, having one of the best years back of the bat, throws the margin to the Cardinals as to the catchers. The veteran, Hank Severeid of the Yanks is the most dependable, however, and in a short series, at the top of his game, would more than hold up his end.

Pat Collins, if showing the sensational form that featured his work during the first half of the season would be a most valuable asset to the Yanks. Pat went stale and has never quite reached the spring form that won him the place of first-string catcher.

The pitching is about a standoff. The Yankee staff is a veteran one and at time shows form that is unbeatable.

In Herb Pennock, it has the best southpaw in the American League and "Dutch" Reuther is still a mighty good one. The frail Pennock was not so effective during the final month of play. The strain had told on his none too strong physique.

Pennock is a money pitcher. He has great courage.

The rest prior to the world series should help his game.

Waite Hoyt, when he sticks to his fast ball, no pitcher in the American League has a better one, should trouble the Cards. When Hoyt slows up, and he has a fondness for that style of pitching, he's not so effective.

Shocker Troublesome.

Urban Shocker, with his spitball and baffling change of pace, is always troublesome and when the veteran Bob Shawkey and Sam Jones have one of their good days, they are tough to beat.

The great Alexander, always at his best in the pinch, Flint Rhem, a big winner all season, Jesse Haines, who has a great fast ball, and Vic Keen will probably make up Hornsby's selection of right-handers, while Sherdel and Reinhart will do the southpaw stuff.

Unquestionably the two teams are very evenly matched, as is usually he case in every world series. At the finish, the play of the Cardinals was smoother than that of the Yanks. The American League pennant winner played its poorest ball in September.

If the Yankees show a reversal of form, it as they can and play the ball they are capable of, they should rule about a 6-5 favorite over the Cardinals.

If the club continues in the slump that overtook it in September and offers no greater offense than it did bring during the final invasion of the west, the Cardinals would be favorites to win.

Can the Yanks do a right about face? That remains to be seen.

SOFTBALL FINALS.

Marmora Will Play Bridgeburg in O.B.A.A. Finals on Saturday

MARMORA, Oct. 1.—The game of the year will be seen at Deloro to-morrow afternoon, when the local team play their return game with Bridgebury in the O.B.A.A. finals of the Intermediate series. The fact that it took ten innings for Bridgeburg to win by the narrow margin of 4-3 on their own ground lends additional interest to the second game. The greatest crowd in local history will be seen on the Smelters' ground on Saturday for fans from the towns within the Hastings-Peterboro constituency are very anxious that the trophy comes east. The Deloro boys will stand a good chance of turning the tables on their opponents, so that in all likelihood a third game will be necessary to decide the championship.

MANY CHANGES FIRST DIVISION IS LOOKED FOR

Saturday's Games May Bring Change in English Soccer Leadership.

STRONG OPPOSITION.

Leicester City to Play League Title Holders on Latter's Grounds.

LONDON, Oct. 1 (Canadian Press) — Saturday's games in the first division of the English soccer league constitute a real menace for those clubs whose fortunes have so far brought them to the top of the table, and it is anticipated that not a few changes may be found in the constitution of the divisonal "form chart" at the week-end. Leicester City, the leaders, are confronted with a powerful opposition on Saturday when they travel to Huddersfield and meet the league title holders on their own ground. Huddersfield's present position is one that is occasioning not a little anxiety among their followers. For it is unusual to see the champions sojourning in the indifferent class for such a lengthy period. There is nothing that Huddersfield need so much as a spectacular victory in order to reassure their uneasy fans. Three times they have played at home this season and twice they emerged victorious. The defeat of the champions by Birmingham at Huddersfield takes account of the third home game. But these two occasions represent the only wins that Huddersfield have had so far inasmuch as in the other four turns-out the games were drawn. Whether Leicester City can take a leaf out of the book of the runners-up, Birmingham, and beat the title-holders on their own ground is a question to which no one can hazard an answer. The game will be interesting and much may result from it.

Birmingham are also engaged away from home, their opponents being Bolton Wanderers. The Wanderers have not yet dropped a game on their own ground this season, the only occasion on which they did not secure the full points at Bolton being when Arsenal played them to a 2-2 draw. They are going strong at present, having fully recovered from the 4-3 defeat administered to them by Burnley, and last week they accomplished the feat of defeating Aston Villa at Villa Park. At the same time Birmingham are hitting the top of their stride and visiting territory holds no terrors for them. They exacted their toll from Huddersfield away from home and did the same with West Bromwich. A win over Bolton would be a creditable performance, but consideration must be taken of the fact that on their own ground last Saturday they were played to a draw by Bury and that prior to that they could make it no better than one goal over the tail-enders, Everton.

Burnley, who are in third place are down for a visit to Bramhall Lane where Sheffield United will entertain them. The "Blades" have lost their last two games, Derby County taking the points from them on Monday last and Newcastle United blanking them last Saturday. But Sheffield are another team that have not lost on their own ground, all of their three defeats having been inflicted away from home, so that Burnley face a hard task. Sheffield have a duty to perform in restoring themselves into favor with their supporters, and Burnley may find themselves the medium through which this obligation will be carried out.

Arsenal are the only metropolitan team of the first string to be engaged at home, Newcastle United visiting them at Highbury. The Spurs travel to Bury and West Ham to West Bromwich.

Other scheduled games are:

Everton at Blackburn; Cardiff City at Derby; Leeds United at Liverpool; Aston Villa at Manchester (United), and the Wednesday at Sunderland.

Alexander Baille a noted French violinist who died recently, left directions that his Stradivarius should be buried with him, as also the score of music from his favorite operas.

Chief Justice To Act As Canadas' Governor

OTTAWA, Oct. 1.—In the interval between the departure of Baron Byng of Vimy and the arrival of Viscount Willingdon, Right Hon. F. A. Anglin, P.C., Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Canada, is Administrator of the Government of the Dominion. He was sworn in as such yesterday afternoon, and will hold the office until the new Governor-General is sworn in at Quebec on Saturday morning. Chief Justice Anglin, in company with Premier King, at the Ancient Capital on Saturday will call on Viscount Willingdon, and be present when the oath of office is administered. The new Governor-General will be sworn in by Mr. Justice Mignault, the Senior Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of Canada, to be present at Quebec at the time.

GLENNA COLLETT IS ELIMINATED IN GOLF TOURNEY

Is But One More Champion To Suffer Defeat.

CHICAGO GIRL WINS

Mrs. Henry Stetson Defeats Former National Title-holder 6 and 5.

MERION CRICKET CLUB, South Ardmore, Pa., October 1 (United Press).—Miss Glenna Collett of Providence, R.I., national women's golf champion, was eliminated yesterday in the third round of match play for the 1926 championship by Miss Virginia Wilson of Chicago.

Miss Wilson won, two up and one to play, after they had rounded the turn on even terms.

Cards:

Collett—

Miss Collett's defeat leaves Walter Hagen the only retainer of a major golf championship this season, and almost the only champion surviving in any popular branch of sport. He last week retained his professional championship, but Jack Dempsey, Bobby Jones, Bill Tilden and others of lesser fame all have fallen.

Former "Champ" Beaten.

Miss Collett's elimination was but one surprise of the day.

Mrs. Henry Stetson of Philadelphia, amazed even her ardent followers when she defeated Miss Edith Cummings of Chicago, former national titleholder, 6 and 5.

Miss Wilson, conqueror of Miss Collett, is a school girl of Chicago.

Play yesterday was difficult again. All night long there had been showers and the course was wet.

To defeat Miss Cummings, Mrs. Stetson went out in par 42, where she was three up, and came back in 46. Miss Cummings won but one hole, the seventh, with a birdie four. The others she lost or halved.

Miss Wilson, in last year's tournament, only reached the second round, where she was beaten, one down, by Miss Fritzi Stifel of Wheeling, W. Va.

Her match yesterday with Miss Collett had been considered as good as won by the Providence girl.

Mrs. Wright Goss, Jr., New York, beat Mrs. Norman Toerge, Glen Cove, N.Y., 2 up.

MINERS REFUSE GENERAL STRIKE

Request of British For Walk-out in Europe Turned Down.

PROMISE SUPPORT.

OSTEND, Belgium, Oct. 1 (Canadian Press).—A request by the striking British coal miners that a general European coal strike be declared was rejected today by the International Miners' Conference here.

An official communique says:

"The meeting continued its discussion today. The British miners' request for a general strike was fully considered. The majority of the delegates of different countries were unable to agree to this, but gave assurance of the fullest financial support possible and promised to continue to do their utmost to prevent coal exports to Great Britain."

FIGHT PICTURE COMPLETE TRIUMPH

Every Detail of Tunney-Dempsey Battle Shown in Film.

REMARKABLY CLEAR.

Superiority of Marine Convincingly Proven By Picture

The showing of the Tunney-Dempsey fight pictures at the Capitol gives the people of Peterboro a better chance to see how the world's heavyweight championship changed hands that was given the unfortunate fans who sat in the rain at the back of the huge stadium a week ago last night and watched the actual contest.

The fight film is remarkable for two things: In the first place, it is being shown in Peterboro just a week after the battle, that in itself a record, and, secondly, no previous fight picture has been so remarkably clear and distinct.

Everything is there but the noise of the crowd ,the thud of the blows and the sounds of the fighters' feet as they move about the ring.

No better quick action photography has been done than in the filming of the Tunney-Dempsey contest, and the big crowd which watched the presentation at the Capitol last night was able to follow every detail of the fighting.

The clean-cut nature of Tunney's win stands out in the picture. To the novice fight fan perhaps the truth of that statement may not be so apparent. In fact the writer heard more than one individual who had seen the film remark in surprise that it was not nearly so one-sided a fight as he had imagined from the press reports. And yet to those who followed the action closely Tunney's superiority was convincingly demonstrated. The marine outgeneralled Dempsey throughout the battle, and not one round could be given to the former champion; in fact to call a couple out of the ten rounds even would be to give the defender more than he merited. Dempsey tried all ways: crouching and wearing to and fro he seldom ceased to endeavor to get home a crashing punch that would wipe out the points earned by Tunney's rapier like left. But Dempsey never had a chance to put over the million dollar wallop. The marine's defence was airtight, and Dempsey sailing in wide open to deliver the big blow repeatedly ran into a rapid fire of sharp jabs that found him defenceless. The picture shows all this clearly, and it shows too that the former champion's accuracy disappeared with his crashing attack. His judgment at distance, the film proves, was bad. He is seen to miss completely, and for the most part Tunney had no difficulty in avoiding Dempsey's wild springs, while he himself rapped home a series of clean-cut jabs that earned him a wide margin in points and made the work of the judges easy.

The film is complete. The proper atmosphere for the fight itself is prepared by preliminary scenes of the training operations of the two fighters by splendid pictures of Tex Rickard and other celebreties responsible for the bout, and by views of the huge stadium as it was being set in order for the big night. No detail of the battle itself is lacking; radio fans are even given a chance to see in action the announcers, whose story of the fight they followed breathlessly through the head 'phones or the loud speaker a week ago.

The Tunney-Dempsey fight pictures shouldn't be missed. Even those who do not interest themselves greatly in the ring, the film is well worth seeing, as a demonstration of how the motion picture camera can be used to re-create a big news event.—F. D. C.

SPECIAL FRUIT TOURNAMENT

HANKOW, China, October 1. — Canadian Press.—The civilian population of Wu Chang, across the Yangtse River from here, is entirely without food and hundreds are reported to be dying. Colder weather is increasing the suffering. There is no coal and no firewood and the meagre remaining food supply is held entirely by the military.

The condition is the result of the siege laid to the city by the "Red" Cantonese forces to force the surrender of the northern troops holding it.

Peace negotiations at Wu Chang have been broken off entirely both through the efforts of the Chamber of Commerce both the contending factions have agreed to permit removal of the women and children at Hankow.

THEATRE

GREAT CAST APPEARS IN "BLACK PARADISE" AT THE REGENT.

In "Black Paradise," the thrilling melodramatic Fox Film now playing at the Regent Theatre, lovely Madge Bellamy, Leslie Fenton, Edmund Lowe, Edward Piel, Paul Panzer, Harvey Clark, Marcella Daly and others, almost as famous, are gathered together into a cast of amazing strength which acted with great realism the thrilling scenes and stirring situations of Rum Running and South Sea Island strife.

Jim Callahan, a weak young crook engaged to marry the beautiful Sylvia Douglas, arrives at her room a short time before they are to be married, but he comes staggering from loss of blood for he has been detected in a burglary, shot by the police and pursued to the girl's house. After a sensational and totally unexpected situation the pair escape and dash for the waterfront pursued by police and Graham, a handsome and daring secret service officer. They leap into a fast motor boat at the wharf, the detective gets another, and there is a wild race for a ship just passing out of the Golden Gate under full sail. The trio are taken aboard, and they find the craft to be a rum runner laden with gin and captained and manned by as desperate a crew of murderers and fugitives as sail the seas. And in command is the brutal owner Murdock. He recognizes in Graham the detective who sent him to prison for five years and determines to get even by marooning him on a devilish island given over to the scum and sweepings of the criminal world. He plans as well to get rid of Jim and make the beautiful Sylvia his own. Sylvia soon learns that Jim is weak and her love turns to Graham, who after a desperate battle beats Murdock and the story ends—as all good stories should, with the heroine and hero triumphant and safely locked in each other's arms.

AT THE CAPITOL

"THE STILL ALARM" AND THE DEMPSEY-TUNNEY FIGHT

The first-run pictures of the recent Dempsey-Tunney world's championship bout were the evident drawing card for a large number of people at the Capitol Theatre last night, for the big edifice was packed to capacity, every seat in the house being filled.

The fight pictures were interesting in the extreme. They were photographed with exceptional clearness, so that each move in the bout was apparent to the audience. Lacking any dramatic finale in the knockout which usually ends such a contest, the ten rounds of the fight were mainly, from a picture viewpoint, at least, a battle of wits and skill between the two men, with the palm to the younger and more alert man, the big marine who seemed to get a good deal of pleasure out of the affair in baiting his slower adversary. The former champion appeared to be unable to do anything with the quick-footed youth, who danced away from him at most times, or rushed in occasionally to land a punch on the body of the dark man with the lowered head and the bewildered demeanor.

The fight pictures are reviewed in full by The Examiner Sporting Section in another column of this edition.

"The Still Alarm" is the feature picture, with Helene Chadwick as Lucy Fay and William Russell as her husband, Dick Fay, a fireman. The opening scenes, set in the year 1905, show the discontent of the young wife with living conditions as a fireman's wife, and her final betrayal of her husband, when she leaves him with Perry Dunn, enacted by Richard Travers, on the night when her husband is risking his life to rescue a woman and child from a burning building. The child, Drina (Edna Marian) is adopted by the fireman, and the picture shifts to a scene seventeen years later, when the girl goes out with a flighty companion, Mazie Bush (a young actress with the extraordinary name of Erin la Bissonierre) and meets Perry Dunn, still on the lookout for a pretty face.

A rather modern touch is given to the portrayal of what used to be the favorite topic of dramatists, the betrayal of a trusting woman, by the villain of the piece, when deserted by his repentant victim, setting the lady up in business for herself as a fashionable modiste, while retaining the controlling interest in the enterprise. Although his former lover no longer cares for him, she remains his business partner, which is a sensible proceeding, after all, and, as Madame Celeste, builds up a good business. Later, she has the opportunity to foil his schemes when he tries to ensnare the youthful fair-haired Drina. Another distinctly modern touch is the final scene, when former ideals of harsh conduct are upset in the reconciliation between the husband and wife.—Jeanette.

DEMPSEY ALL RIGHT.

NEW YORK, Oct. 1 (Canadian Press).—"Tell 'em I'm all right," was Jack Dempsey's laconic statement to the Canadian Press to-day when rumors that he had been poisoned were called to his attention.

The former heavyweight is staying at the Belmont Hotel, where he is suffering some discomfort from a skin trouble contracted from one of his sparring partners.

He has no plans.

A Thrilling Story of Love and Adventure—also "STRINGS OF STEEL" an adventure serial with William Desmond and Eileen Sedgwick. A picture rich in daring deeds! Miraculous escapes! Breathless moments of suspense.

EXTRA! EXTRA! EXTRA!

Direct wire Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock from Yankee Stadium to this theatre giving you complete details of the first game of the World Series—

ST. LOUIS vs. YANKEES

Dick Lush will do the announcing.

Did You Know What It Was?

(How many people saw the little squares at the bottom of page 11 yesterday?)

It Was The Key To The Pirates Treasure!

The Examiner will help you find the treasure—$50 in gold—that is hidden in Peterboro within reach of everybody. All readers can participate in this treasure hunt which started yesterday and will continue for—well, we can't tell you how few days. Get The Examiner as soon as it comes off the press, look up the key for the day, and when you have enough particulars to guide you, go and get the treasure.

This is the plan:

Everyone, young and old, may set out to discover a key which The Examiner has hidden in a certain place in the city. They will need, in this hunt, to bring into play all the astuteness and skill of which they are possessed. Victory will go to him who knows how to use his judgment and clearsightedness to the best advantage, to him who knows how to read between the lines, and to decipher the riddle, part of which we will give every day.

Get on the job, and if you discover the key you will receive from The Examiner the reward which consists of $50 in gold.

But how are you going to find anything so small as a key in such a large city as Peterborough? Listen! You have overlooked the assistance given by the Black Pirate. He will not leave you without help. Thanks to him, you will have, every day, a riddle which will give you some detail as to the place where the hidden key will be found. At the end of the time you will be able to form a complete phrase with the words given daily, and this phrase will guide you to the spot without difficulty—if you have deciphered the words correctly. We will give every day three definitions of words, and at the end of the hunt you will arrange these words in their proper order.

START TO-DAY

In case you have thrown away yesterday's Examiner the words given then are being repeated—but, remember that they will not be repeated again.

Cut out this section with the Black Pirate's message, fill in the words in the squares provided, and save it.

In order to be sure of arriving in time at the last day you must not neglect a single day to consult the paper and study carefully the definitions we give you. There is nothing to prevent the search from beginning now, if anyone thinks that he has, possibly any day, sufficient clues available.

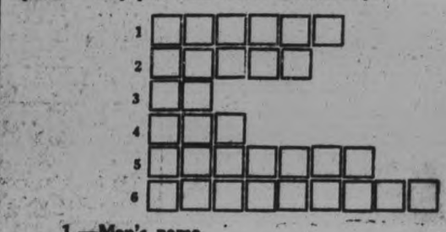
Get Into The Hunt—Win The $50 In Gold.

A real key has been hidden in a public place in Peterborough.

A phrase given a few words every day will say exactly where the key is.

You will find below the definitions of six words (three of which are repeated from yesterday) which are the first you must know in order to win the prize. Find the exact word in accordance with the definitions and you will have the exact instructions for the location of the key.

The words do not check downward like an ordinary crossword puzzle—they just read across horizontally.



1.—Man's name.
2.—Begin.
3.—Preposition denoting position.
4.—Conjunction.
5.—City thoroughfares.
6.—Woman's name.

Now, Get Busy—Make The $50 Yours!

WAR WOUNDED CONDEMN WAR

International Association Passes Resolution Without Dissent.

RIGHT AND DUTY.

GENEVA, October 1 (Canadian Press).—Claiming to speak for 3,000,000 former soldiers, the International Association of War Wounded and Ex-Service Men, at a meeting yesterday, went on record as condemning war. It was the second conference of the organization, which has virtually the same objects as the Inter-Allied Veterans' Association, although the United States veterans are not represented.

The resolution, prepared by a French delegate and unanimously adopted amid applause, declares that the men who went through the war and still carry on their flesh marks of the sufferings they endured, have a right and a duty to collaborate actively in world pacification and the national organization of relations between peoples.

FRANCE FORMING FEDERATION AMONG EASTERN EUROPEANS; JUGO-SLAVS ENTER ALLIANCE

Agreement Intended To Stop Italy From Leading in Balkans.

ITALY SATISFIED.

British Increase Italian Prestige in East To Counter Turkey.

PARIS, Oct. 2. — A Franco-Serb defensive alliance will be announced soon, Jugo-Slavia taking a place along with Belgian, Poland, Czecho-Slovakia and Roumania as a formal ally of France.

Foreign Minister Ninchitch, of Jugo-Slavia, lunched officially yesterday with Foreign Minister Briand and as their meeting was announced it was meant to have diplomatic importance— to be timed with Premeir Mussolini's luncheon on Thursday with Foreign Secretary Chamberland of Britain.

By the new alliance the Italian neutrality agreement of 1924 with Jugo-Slavia will be trumped by France. The play is not hostile to Italy, but it takes a trick and prevents Italy from playing a leading role in the Balkans.

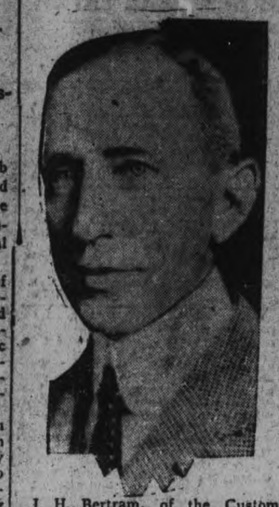
This is of much more immediate interest to Italy than the Franco-German rapproachment and the general political situation created by Locarno, which according to the official Italian statement, Chamberlain and Mussolini discussed. Their conversation is believed here to have turned largely on the role of Italy on the Continent and in the Mediterranean.

Mussolini is believed to have got his satisfaction in a new direction —Turkey. Italy in the future is expected to replace Greece as Britain's favorite anti-Turk force in the Mediterranean. Greece's internal weakness, ever since Greece proper was filled with refugees from Turkey, has made the British feel that Greece cannot be counted on in the future to counter-balance Turkey, and Italy can. This reduces Athens to a Balkan capital and makes Rome the potential check to Angora.

Chamberlain owes this to Mussolini, it is held, because the threat of a possible Italian attack on Asia Minor, carefuly fostered in Turkish minds some months ago, was believed to be the reason why the Turks came to terms with Britain over Mosul. Italy unwittingly did England a very important service, and French observers say it is time for Chamberlain to reciprocate, especially as England wants a useful friendly naval power in the Mediterranean. The British have not yet digested the fact that they had to come to terms with the Turks by the Lausanne Treaty because the country was not in condition to wage a successful war against Turkey.

By smiling upon Italian pretentions and increasing Italian prestige in the Eastern Mediterranean, Chamberlain can say he is merely strengthening Italo-British friendship, but at the same time he faces Turkey with an aggressive neighbor.

PROBABLE DEPUTY.



J. H. Bertram, of the Customs service at Toronto, Ontario, who is mentioned as a probable appointee as Federal Deputy Minister of Customs and Excise.

MARKET PRICES CHANGE LITTLE

Eggs Sell at 40 To 45 Cents and Butter Same Price.

POTATOES $1.75.

Prices were fairly stationary on the farmers' market this morning. Eggs were selling at 40 to 45 cents a dozen, with pullets' eggs at 33 cents. Butter was 40 to 45 cents a pound. A dry picked chicken, that "never saw water until its feet were washed," this presumably having taken place after its early demise, was a fine-looking bird, priced at the 30 cents a pound quotation which prevailed for young fowl. Hens and ducks were 25 cents a pound.

Clover honey in five pound pails was 80 cents and in a glass jar of a pound and a half content, 40 cents. Amber honey in the same containers was 65 and 30 cents respectively.

Potatoes were priced at 35 cents a peck, and from $1.75 to $2.00 a bag. Corn was 15 and 20 cents a dozen. Red onions were 50 cents a peck and large turnips a nickel a piece. One man had a novelty in salsify, or "vegetable oyster" at a dime a bunch.

Tomatoes were priced at 75 cents for an eleven quart basket; beans were 15 cents a quart, squash 5 to 15 cents, and pepers 20 to 30 cents a dozen. The elongated "telegraph" cucumbers were 10 and 15 cents and blue plums were 50 cents a large basket.

Little Yorkshire pigs were $8 apiece and foxhounds in a crated box $5 each. Small snuggly collie pups at basket entrance were a dollar apiece and had an admiring audience.

SPLENDID RECORD OF INSURANCE CO.

FRENCH OFFICER DENIES CHARGES

Says He Acted in Self Defence in Shooting Fray.

PROTESTS TO LEAGUE.

PARIS, October 2 (Canadian Press).—Lieutenant Roucier, French officer in the army of occupation, who is accused by the Germans of the unprovoked killing of a civilian at Germersheim early this week, acted in self-defence, the Foreign Office stated yesterday on the strength of first details of an official investigation.

Reports received from the military authorities in the occupied area indicate that the recent agitation in the occupied part of Germany is due to the infiltration of young Nationalists who have been reported particularly aggressive during the past few weeks. Most of these young Nationalists are said to come from Bavaria and to have entered the occupied territory fraudulently for the purpose of beginning agitation calculated to provoke disorders.

The military reports say that Lieut. Roucier had been threatened twice during the evening of the shooting by two different crowds of young Germans who showed great aggressiveness.

When he started to leave the town for the barracks outside, a half dozen men surrounded him and threatened him. He decided to turn back rather than risk the lonely road outside of the town. Whereupon, the report states, he again was surrounded, and he fired his pistol in the air to frighten away his aggressors. Canes were then raised against him, and he then fired into the crowd.

It was semi-officially said that the departure of the artillery regiment to which he belonged from Germersheim had no connection with the incident, and that no steps of any kind will be taken until the investigation is completed.

(An impressive demonstration was held by the citizens of Germersheim Thursday at the funeral of Emil Mueller, killed by a pistol shot fired by Lieut. Roucier. The latter is under arrest at Nancy. The Mayor of Germersheim has sent a protest to the League of Nations which, however, cannot take official action as the League is authorized to receive protests only from governments and not municipalities).

Around the World In a 22 Foot Sloop

CAPE MAY, N.J., Oct. 2.—(Associated Press.) — Dimetrius Sigelakis, 27 years old, sailor, formerly a waiter in a restaurant, sailed from Cape May harbor yesterday in a 22-foot sloop on a 36,000 mile voyage around the world. His first stop will be the Azores.

Sigelakis made a similar attempt in 1924, but was forced to put into New York harbor after giant waves washed his sextant overboard 200 miles off the coast. He estimated the trip will take him three and a half years.

E. F. MASON WILL COMPLETE TERM ON COMMISSION

Agrees To Withdraw Resignation If Relieved of Chairmanship

FINANCE MEETING.

Request For Grant To Hockey Team Refused— Drain To Be Made.

Complying with the unanimous request of the Mayor and Aldermen, E. F. Mason has agreed to withdraw his resignation from the Peterborough Utilities Commission, and will complete his term, which expires at the end of this year. Mr. Mason asked, however, that he be relieved of the chairmanship, as his business interests make it impossible for him to give the necessary time to the work of the Commission.

Mr. Mason's decision to remain at his post until the end of the year was received with delight by the Aldermen at last night's meeting of the Finance Committee of the City Council.

Expenses of the "Dressed Fowl Fair" to be held here in December, when it is expected that most of the fowl from a large district available for outside buyers will be brought to the city as a centre for the buyers to assemble, will be met by the Council. They will not amount to more than $75.00, according to a letter from the committee in charge.

It was felt that a dangerous precedent would be established in allowing the Peterborough Hockey Association a grant of $300.00, particularly as there was no appropriation available, and the request was received, although the Aldermen expressed agreement with the contention that the successful team of last year had been a good advertisement for the city.

The Board of Works, which also met last night, decided to go ahead with deepening the De Laval ditch and laying tile in it. A recommendation that a truck be bought for the Board of Works' use was left on the file for consideration next year. The Ontario Compensation Board will be notified in future when any contracts are let by the city in order that any accidents may be covered by the Board. A request for cinders or a walk around the cold storage plant between the two parts of Robinson Street brought out the fact that the city had no right-of-way across the tracks at that point, the road used being on the property of the Canadian National Railways.

Alderman Hancock reported that he had secured an option for a strip either 40 or 66 feet wide from Crescent Street to Ware Street, where it is desired to build a sewer to make it possible to provide connections for the houses on Crescent Street. Most of the Aldermen favored buying the narrower strip, which would be opened up as a street, if permission could be obtained from the Ontario Railway Board for that procedure.

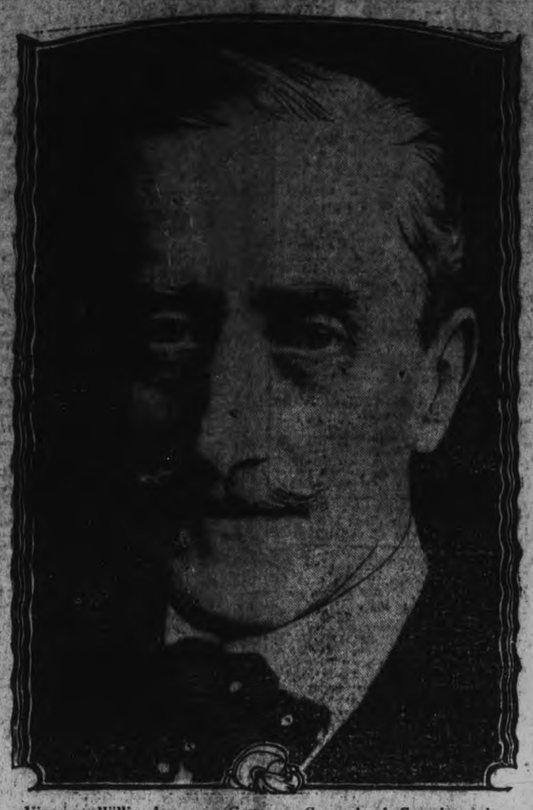
ARRIVES TO-DAY



Viscount Willingdon, new Governor-General of Canada, who arrived this morning and was sworn into office at noon at Quebec.

CANADA WELCOMES GOVERNOR WITH CEREMONIOUS DIGNITY

Viscount and Lady Willingdon Greeted By Leaders of Canadian Government on Arrival at Quebec This Morning.

BRILLIANT SCENE IN HOUSE AS NEW GOVERNOR TAKES OATH

QUEBEC, Oct. 2 (Canadian Press)—Canada today received a new Governor-General and his consort, Lord and Lady Willingdon landed at Quebec the scene of the struggles which decided the fate of the continent and were welcomed with the dignity of a country with more than three hundred years of the traditions of two races behind it and part of a great empire, with the warm heartedness of a country in its youth looking forward to its greatest destiny.

The weather was unkind. The city was shrouded in heavy mist. But through it loomed the befitting display of ceremony, the scarlet of military uniform, plumed and polished helmets, as the vice regal party were escorted through the historic streets of Quebec, up Mountain street from the lower town and then through the broader avenues of the upper town to the Provincial Parliament buildings. The installation took place in the legislative council chamber at noon.

The Empress of Scotland arrived in Quebec about daybreak. The ceremonies commenced at 10.30 when the Right Honorable Francis A. Anglin, officer administering the government of Canada in the interregnum between the departing and incoming Governor-Generals, and the Right Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King paid a courtesy call to Lord Willingdon on board the ship.

The call was brief and shortly after it Viscount and Viscountess Willingdon and suite were taken on board the Government steamer Bellechasse and conveyed to the King's wharf. Far up the heights the guns of the citadel boomed a salute of nineteen guns. At the wharf the party were received by the officer administering the government of Canada, the Lieutenant Governor of Quebec, the Prime Minister of Canada, and Premier Taschereau of Quebec. Other ministers and government officials were present and officers of the naavl, military and air forces. After the usual salute from the waiting guard of honor the procession of the vice regal party to he parliament buildings commenced.

Through streets lined with spectators the party with a bodyguard and escort of the Royal Canadian Dragoons proceeded over the paved and cobblestone streets which have echoed the dramatic events of the country's history through the centuries. The route was by way of Champlain street, St. Peter, Mountain Hill, Dufort and St. Louis street to the Parliament buildings. There another guard of honor of the Royal 22nd Regiment saluted the party.

The Legislative Assembly Chamber was brilliant with the handsome costumes of women in full dress and the levee dress of the men.

SALUTES EXCHANGED

S. S. Empress of Scotland — Shortly after midnight, the Canadian Pacific Liner Empress of France, carrying Lord Byng, the retired Governor General of Canada crossed on the St. Lawrence the incoming Empress of Scotland, conveying to the Dominion the new Governor General, Viscount Willingdon.

Both vessels were brilliantly illuminated with colored flares arranged along the whole length of their decks while rockets were fired to celebrate the historic occasion.

Many of the passengers on the ships stayed up to witness the fireworks and to add their salutation of cheers.

WELL BABIES' CLINIC.

The attendance at the Well Babies' Clinic for September was very satisfactory, considering the number of holidays and the pickling and preserving activities that go on in the home at this season. On the last Tuesday of the month, the total attendance was twenty-four. Doctors presiding over the Clinic during the month were Drs. O'Reilley, Clark and Birnie. Voluntary workers were Mrs. Wm. Lech, Mrs. G. Helson, Mrs. Natte, and Miss Marjorie Best. Visitors were Mrs. A. Mowat, Mrs. R. Harstone and Mrs. J. Mills.

Rotten Row in Hyde Park Yields To Traffic Control

LONDON, October 2 (Associated Press). — Fashionable Rotten Row in Hyde Park, where England's aristocracy has long ridden horseback, has succumbed to a "traffic control" system. For some time equestrians have been riding eight abreast, but the authorities now prohibit more than four abreast.

The fault originated with certain riding masters who took large parties of pupils out for a ride together when proficient. These pupils kept up the practice, thus interfering with other riders.

ALL IS READY FOR NEW TENANT AT RIDEAU HALL

Official Residence at Ottawa is Prepared For New Governor.

TO VISIT TORONTO.

Government Officials To Welcome Their Excellencies at Quebec Harbor.

OTTAWA, Oct. 2. —Rideau Hall is in readiness for Viscount Willingdon, his family and staff. Two weeks ago a retinue of servants numbering twenty-five and coming from the new governor-general's household in England, arrived here, while bales of personal effects were brought along with them. Old attendants at the vice-regal residence say the family plate of the Willingdons is quite the most elaborate ever brought here. The public works department has done its share with a staff of painters and decorators and some of the rooms have been refurnished. The place is guarded day and night by a corporal and two constables of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police.

The new governor-general and the Viscountess Willingdon come here with a reputation of extensive entertainers and Ottawa society is agog over the prospects of the social season of luncheons, teas, dinners and dances. Several of the former staff will remain, but Lord Willingdon brings his own private secretary.

Soon Visit Toronto.

Ottawa is not unfamiliar to him. He spent a week here last winter and several times was a spectator in the gallery of the house of commons. He will be unable to go there again because usage precludes a governor-general visiting parliament save officially to open or close it or to give royal assent to bills. Parliament Hill is being decked with flags and bunting and a pavilion has been erected for the official reception to the new governor-general on Monday morning. It is anticipated that he will officially visit Toronto and Moutreal after getting settled, but no extensive tour will be planned till after the new year.

The administrator, Chief Justice Anglin, cabinet ministers and several high officials, left yesterday afternoon for Quebec to attend the swearing-in ceremony and other functions which have been arranged.

WINGED COLLAR IS NOT NEEDED

Art Exhibition at Produced in Canada Exhibition Is For Mr. Citizen.

CATALOGUE FREE

"To appreciate this," said a Peterborough visitor at the Art Gallery of the Canadian National Exhibition, "you need a stiff collar with wings, a silk hat, and about two drinks."

There's nothing highbrow in the Art Exhibition being presented as an added attraction at the Produced in Canada Exhibition at the Armouries on October 11 to 16. It is an exhibition that everyone can appreciate and enjoy, with just enough of the spice of life to keep Mr. Citizen from feeling his education has been neglected. In Toronto there is a charge made for admission, and then if the visitor wants to know the name of a picture he must pay for a catalogue, but the admission charge at the Peterborough Exhibition entitles the visitor to a tastefully printed catalogue that he will wish to keep as a souvenir.

One of the most striking portrayals is "Beheaded,' after the famous painting by Estelle A. Freeman, A.R.M.A.

Cables Native Groups To Demand Abrogation of Sin-British Treaty.

UNIVERSAL STAND.

Geneva Observers Think He Is Acting Under Kuomingtang's Orders.

GENEVA, Oct. 2 — Mr. Chu Chaohsin, Chinese Minister to Italy and head of the Chinese delegation in the League Assembly, together with other Chinese officials, yesterday cabled to all Chambers of Commerce, associations and newspapers in China an appeal for a universal stand for the abrogation of Sin-British Treaty. The cable adds:

"The bombardment of Wahnsien on Sept. 5 by British gunboats was an extraordinarily serious act which could never be tolerated in accordance with international law. The Chinese delegation to the seventh Assembly, under instructions from the Chinese government, declared to the Assembly the facts relative to the bombardment so as to obtain the sympathy and support of internation public opinion.

"Repetition of international incidents in China in recent years is practically caused by the complications of the existence of unequal treaties with foreign powers.

"Unhappily the Shanghai incident of May 30, 1925, has not yet been finally settled. So the root of international peril has by no means been removed.

"In order to clear up the conflicts of the past and warrant peace and tranquility in the future we deem it high time to estimate the Wahnsein blood shed at Wanshien as the price of a final solution of the international controversies in China.

"In putting forward our claim as to the British with regard to the Wanshien bombardment, we should be strong and urge that here should be only one demand, namely the abrogation of the Sino-British treaty which is regarded as unequal and inapplicable, and the substitution for it the negotiating of a new treaty on the basis of absolute equality and reciprocity. Any other minor demands, such as financial compensation, official apologies, etc. should not be included in the claim at all.

"We, the undersigned, sincerely hope that public opinion will be directed in the way of unanimously backing up this simple issue. Remember that such united demonstration will result in a chapter in our history when the old treaties are ended and complete sovereignty restored.

"While being aware of our determination on this question, the British, if still desiring to continue their trade with China and to strengthen the mutual friendship of the two nations, will see their way clear to accede to our justifiable demands."

The letter bears the signature of Wang King-ky as well as that Chu Chai-hsin.

The opinion of some observers here is that Mr. Chu appears to aspire to the role of liberator of his country or as the tool of the Knomintang.

To these persons the message recalls the gossip in certain diplomatic circles, according to which Mr. Chu on last Thursday night was threatened by the Knomingtang if he did not accede to the de-

IRON SECONDS ARE ORGANIZED

Men Who Served With Famous Battalion Form Club.

PRESERVE MEMORIES.

Considerable enthusiasm marked the meeting of the men who served with the Second Battalion during the days of the war, at a meeting held in the Armories last night for the purpose of organizing a battalion club.

For some time past it has been the desire of many of the men that such a club should be formed and thus help to perpetuate the memory of a battalion that gained for itself by reason of its good work the nickname, "The Iron Seconds."

The Club will be known as "The Iron Seconds," and the following officers were elected: President, A. E. White; Vice-President, E. Mesley; Secretary, H. Kelsey; Executive Committee: G. G. Winterbottom, T. Griffin, H. Rogers, W. Simmons and E. Nicholls.

Arrangements were made for a battalion dinner and a celebration on Armistice Day.

Members of the club stated that it was not their intention to interfere with the Canadian Legion in any way as the club was merely for those who had been members of the battalion, and had been formed with the idea of preserving the memories dear to those who had served with it.

The next meeting will be held on October 18, and a hearty invitation is issued to every man who passed through the ranks of the second battalion at any time since it was first formed to be present on that occasion.

PRODUCED IN CANADA EXHIBITION

The young ladies in the bond selling competition for the "Produced in Canada Exhibition" are beginning to obtain wonderful results, and are to be congratulated. The winners so far, are as follows:

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

What "Promised Lands" Lie Before the World Today?

Text: Num. 10:11-13 29-36.

And it came to pass on the twentieth day of the second month, in the second year, that the cloud was taken up from off the tabernacle of the testimony.

And the children of Israel took their journeys out of the wilderness of Sinai; and the cloud rested in the wilderness of Paran.

And they took their journey according to the commandment of the Lord by the hand of Moses.

And Moses said unto Hobab, the son of Raguel the Midianite, Moses' father-in-law, We are journeying unto the place which the Lord said, I will give you: come thou with us, and we will do thee good: for the Lord hath spoken good concerning Israel.

And he said unto him, I will not go; but I will depart to mine own land, and to my kindred.

And he said, Leave us not, I pray thee, for as much as thou knowest how we are to encamp in the wilderness, and thou mayest be to us instead of eyes.

And it shall be, if thou go with us, yea, it shall be, that what goodness the Lord shall do unto us, the same will we do unto thee.

And they departed from the mount of the Lord three days' journey: and the ark of the covenant of the Lord went before them in the three days' journey, to search out a resting place for them.

And the cloud of the Lord was upon them by day, when they went out of the camp.

And it came to pass, when the ark set forward, that Moses said, Rise up, Lord, and let thine enemies be scattered, and let them that hate thee flee before thee.

And when it rested, he said, Return, O Lord, unto the many thousands of Israel.

The International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for Oct. 3: Israel Journeying Toward Canaan.—Num. 10:11-13, 29-36.

BY WM. E. GILROY, D.D.
Editor of The Congregationalist.

The Tabernacle, we have seen, was set outside of the camp, signifying the fact that Israel's abode was not in a settle place but that the nation was on the march to a new home and to a new life. The cloud that rested over the Tabernacle was now taken up and Israel set forward in the journey out of the wilderness.

Every great forward march finds those who are eager for adventure and progress, and those who hold back in what seems settlement and safety. Moses was essentially a man of progress, but we have in our lesson Hobab, the Midianite, a relative of Moses, who refuses to join in the march to Canaan.

Hobab's refusal, however, did not affect Moses, and the lesson does not make it very clear whether or not Hobab did really yield to the further entreaties of Moses or not. At any rate Moses pressed on with the ark as the symbol of God's presence and with the pillar of cloud marking the way of progress.

Symbolism of Progress.

The details of the march are comparatively unimportant. What is important is the symbolism, that for every people there is a Canaan of progress and advancement toward which they may press forward guided even by the cloud.

This seems a commonplace statement, and yet when we realize how few people really find the alluring sense of progress in life, and how few to whom life is a great adventure of faith and glory, we understand that there is something much more than the commonplace in this conception of the journey to the Promised Land.

Would that the Christian church could realize the truth of this and could rouse from its ease and lethargy to see that great Canaans of faith and accomplishment are before us, and that lands of promise are easily within our conquest!

Promised Lands.

What are some of the promised lands that loom before us today as goals worthy of achievement toward which we must progress even though it be through wanderings in the wilderness? Within our own borders these promised lands are no longer material.

The farthest west has already been conquered and the development of our American civilization must henceforth be intensive rather than extensive, but surely there are social, moral and spiritual goals that call for all the energy, courage, vision and determination that have been displayed by the pioneers in their conquest of the frontiers. It is the spirit of pilgrimage, of the glory of the forward march that must still be our incentive and our inspiration.

When one looks beyond our own borders, how magnificent is the prospect of these promised lands! It is true that we seem very far from the goal, but at times we catch visions of a distant glory and for all good men there is no life like that of marching and struggling toward the better land.

On to New Realms.

There is the promised land of world peace, of established righteousness and justice throughout the wide world. This seems the great way of destiny today, but probably in its attainment we shall have to conquer successive frontiers in spiritual and material realms.

Whatever good has developed in our civilization must be spread throughout the world and the problem just now seems to be to give to other lands all that is best in our own progress without giving them, at the same time, the things by which more civilized countries are still cursed.

No tasks today are equal to the tasks that face the man who would be a spiritual Israelite, living in the spirit of Moses, with the conquest of the promised land as his supreme mission in life.

Such a quest enobles even lowly and humble lives. We cannot all be great, but we can all put our lives into the service of great causes and under the leadership of great prophets.

LARGE NUMBER OF EXHIBITS AT CAMPBELLFORD EXHIBITION

Gate Receipts Total Larger Amount Than of Former Years.

WEATHER IDEAL.

Competitions in Dairy Cattle Classes Feature in Today's Programme.

CAMPBELLFORD, Oct. 2. — With a splendid display of cattle, sheep, horses and poultry, a swarming crowd and bulging money bags deposited in the bank before night fell the Campbellford Fair yesterday was a complete realization of its directors' plans and preparations during the last year. The attendance seemed larger than ever, and the gate receipts ran agreeably into four figures, according to the unofficial figures mentioned at the close of the day. The weather was nearly perfect and while several other Fairs sought the district patronage, Campbellford secured a big share. About twenty cars from Peterboro were noticed on the grounds, Norwood, Hastings and Warkworth were large ly represented and of course, the Seymour-Percy country side had practically suspended agricultural operations for the occasion, and not a hitch or accident marred the day's events.

Chief of Police Brown and P. C. Light helped materially in preventing traffic tangles, and the directors kept the programme details moving along without delay. The 40-n Regimental band under the direction of Wm. Pearson was in fine tune and spirit, the races were keenly contested, but were not more interesting than the Campbellford-Hastings ball game which Hastings won by 5-3 in the ninth inning; the booths and other concessions provided various amusements, and in all respects the directors had a thoroughly satisfactory exhibition to their credit for 1926.

There were some eighty exhibitors led by Harry Lush, of Peterboro, with 146 entries in the poultry show; C. H. Curtis, of Warkworth was next with 116 in the poultry, sheep and swine classes, Harry Van Allen of Warkworth, had 58 entries and W. J. Abernethy of town, 37.

Fine Cattle Display.

The competition in the dairy cattle classes was a feature. Not only were there numbers, but high quality to the stock. Among the exhibitors were W. A. Wynn, President of the Fair Board, R. Honey & Sons, of Dartford and H. L. Van Allen, of Warkworth, showing Holsteins; Garnet Kerr and J. F. Ivey, with Jerseys; Alex. Hume & Son, T. R. Kerr, W. Stewart, F. G. Howes, of Harold, showing Ayrshires; and W. Mitchell and W. Zufelt, of Warkworth, competing in the beef class with Herefords.

The sheep breeders also clashed with sharp competition, and the judging of the horses was not concluded until dusk was gathering.

Ben Sharpe, Department judge of poultry, was highly complimentary of this phase of the Fair, especially of the White Wyandottes, which, he said, were qualified to win at the biggest shows in the country.

Wm. Knox of Peterboro had a busy session as judge of the sheep, swine and beef cattle.

The Horse Races

Trotting "fans" from all over the district were provided with a card of three races and many thrills.

Class A

Bell Mahone	1	1	1
Dr. Johnston, Port Hope.
Mr. Haley	3	3	3
S. Blewett, Peterboro.
Rena Hal	2	2	2
W. Fanning, Lindsay.

Time 2.22¼, 2.21½, 2.21¼.

Class B

Five heats were required to decide this race. Only two horses started in the final, the battle being between Charlie Armstrong's Rex Hal and Billy Elmhurst's Bert Abdell, the Havelock entry getting first money. Valley Todd dropped in the fourth heat with what was said to be a minor hemorrhage, and Harry C was drawn in that heat.

Rex Hall	3	2	1	1
C. Armstrong.
Bert Abdell	2	1	2	2
W. Elmhurst.
Valley Todd	1	4	4	x
H. Elmhurst.
Harry C, B. Blake	4	3	3	d

Time—2.30½, 2.29¼, 2.49½, 2.50.

Class C

Bartlett Jr.	4	4	4	d
Dick Winger	2	1	2	2
Clifford D.	3	3	3	3
Mac Oso	1	2	1	1

Time—2.34¼, 2.39¼, 2.39½, 2.35.

The track officials were:
Starter—G. O. Tice Belleville.
Timers—J. R. Battisby and R. T. Dunlop, Frankford.
Judges—J. C. Anderson, D. Teal, Wooler.

The Ball Game

Although Ibey struck out 10 of the Hastings batters in the nine-inning rally, the visitors gradually pulled down the Campbellford lead of three runs, tied it in the eighth, and clouted in two in the ninth to win by 5-3.

Charlie Holmes set Ibey up with three on the board in the second with a circuit clout behind DeCarrol and Maybee.

The teams were:

Hastings—C. Zufelt, 1b; Stevenson, p; Cassidy, 2b; Hill, ss; Scriver, c; Herrington, cf; A. Lemoire, 3b: A. Zufelt, rf; A. Lemoire, lf.

Campbellford—Blakely, lf; Eagleson, ss; Ibey, p; Cowell, c; DeCarrol 3b; Cook, cf; Maybee, 1b; Holmes, 2b; Daniels, rf.

Score by innings:
Hastings ....001 000 112—5 8 2
Campbellford ..030 000 000—3 10 2

In a five-frame softball game the local Clerks trounced Warkworth by 13-2.

Some of the day's prize-winners were:

HEREFORD CATTLE.

But whatever the aspiration behind Mr. Chu's attacks they are none the less embarrassing to the British, and today's cable, copies of which were sent to all foreign journalists in Geneva, indicates that he is determined to continue his campaign to the bitter end.

Need Not Take Their Portion of Capital in Instalments.

Ex-Chief Joseph Whetung, of Curve Lake Reserve was in Ottawa recently to see J. D. McLean, secretary of the Department of Indian Affairs. Mr. Whetung was told that any member of the band who wishes can obtain all his capital share now held by the Department, instead of taking yearly payments.

Mr. McLean who has been in the service 51 years, was pleased to renew his friendship with the old chief who is still as active as when they first met.

FUNDS URGENTLY NEEDED.

The annual tag day of the Children's Aid Society, the effort upon which the society chiefly depends for the funds to meet its operating expenses, will be held a week from today, and the Examiner urges its readers to be prepared to liberally respond to the appeal.

The situation in regard to the society is, briefly, that it has been found necessary during the year to draw upon the small capital account of the organization to finance the society's activities, and as a result a worth-while tag day total is necessary to provide for the next year's work.

What has been done by the Children's Aid Society on behalf of unfortunate youngsters in the city and district is an open book to the community.

The work speaks for itself.

It is necessary work, and it is being done by the Children's Aid Society as economically and efficiently as possible, with results that amply justify an appeal for public support.

The point to remember this year that funds were never more urgently needed, and that in connection with next Saturday's tag day an even more generous contribution than usual will be required if the society's activities are not to be curtailed.

THE SCOUT PLAN.

The plan announced recently by the Peterboro Boy Scouts by which the Scouts will be organized into a toy-repairing agency and thus provide a bountiful supply of playthings for children who will need consideration at Christmas, should commend itself.

Citizens of Peterboro are urged to co-operate with the Scouts.

In the majority of homes there are toys of which the children have tired, perhaps broken or requiring a touch of paint.

Housewives are asked, therefore, when doing their autumn house-cleaning not to throw these broken toys away.

Many of them can be renovated, and the Boy Scouts are undertaking the reconstruction work.

It is hoped to open a down-town depot for this purpose where toys can be received and where the Scouts can carry out their repair operations.

Then at Christmas time the reconstructed toys will be turned over to the Rotary Club, Kiwanis and other local organizations for distribution among under-privileged children.

Those who have broken toys that can be repaired are asked to keep them until an announcement is made of where they can be sent.

This splendid effort should have hearty support from the community generally.

TIME TO CHECK UP.

In connection with Fire Prevention Week there are two features that should be brought home to every householder in Peterboro.

In the first place, a report of the Dominion Fire Commissioner shows that a majority of fires in Canada are due to causes largely avoidable, and secondly, that by far the largest number of fires occurs in residential properties.

Manufacturers and business houses have been paying more attention to fire prevention in recent years with gratifying results.

Executives realize that fire prevention is simply good business, and they are co-operating with the authorities to eliminate fire hazards.

If Fire Prevention Week is to get anywhere the individual householder will have to learn the same lesson.

There were in Canada last year 3,168 fires caused by overheated stoves, furnaces and pipes.

1,975 other fires were due to defective chimneys and flues, 1,963 by carelessness with matches, 1,402 from smoking and 1,845 from electrical defects.

The lesson of Fire Prevention Week is found in these figures.

These causes are all avoidable, and next week would be a good time for Peterboro people to check up the conditions in their homes and eliminate as far as possible fire dangers.

THE LAST CHANCE.

The newly formed Peterboro branch of the Canadian Legion is launching a membership campaign, and the Examiner as its contribution to the drive is glad to call the attention of all ex-service men to the desirability of considering the objects of the Legion and the value of a concerted effort on the part of Canada's returned soldiers.

There is this feature of the situation as the Examiner sees it.

If this campaign to unite the country's ex-service men in a Dominion-wide body on sound lines fails, then the whole dream of a veterans' organization may as well be abandoned.

This is obviously the last chance to get returned soldiers together.

Throw this opportunity away and veterans will have to fight their battles as individuals, not as a hard-hitting, closely-knitted band of comrades.

There has been good work done in the past by the various veterans' associations; there perhaps have been mistakes made, too.

The good work should be remembered as a token of what can be accomplished by the Canadian Legion, and the mistakes used as guides in keeping the new organization away from the pitfalls of the past.

The Legion starts with a clean sheet, capable officers and bright prospects.

Upon the co-operation it receives from the returned men of Canada will depend its capacity for useful service, not only to ex-service men, but to this country generally.

"LEFT WHERE THEY BELONG."

(From The Manitoba Free Press, Lib.)

The late election will be beneficial to the country in respect to a number of men left at home. There was Mr. Cross in Athabaska. Mr. Cross was the late member at Ottawa, but a judical investigation that has been going on for the last few weeks has shown that Mr. Cross was elected last year in an election marked by scandalous conduct on the part of his workers. Mr. Cross must have had the hide of an elephant to stand again for Parliament in view of the revelations. He has been left at home, where he belongs. The Free Press said this about Mr. Cross before the election, and now repeats it. Mr. Cross was a Liberal candidate. He belonged to that school of Canadian political thought that held that it did not much matter how you won an election as long as you won. His rejection in Athabaska might be a warning to any others of his kind that still exist. The people of East Algoma left Mr. G. B. Nicholson, Conservative, at home. Mr. Nicholson was a first-class scandal-monger. His remarks about the civil service at Ottawa, which Mr. Nicholson tried to repudiate but failed, appear to have cost Mr. Nicholson his own seat and have been a factor in losing the two Ottawa seats, which swung from the Conservative to the Liberal columns. Along with Mr. Nicholson went Mr. Doucet, of Kent, N. B., the Conservative who made the famous charges about the steamer Margaret and who was forced to cover by the official finding. Mr. Doucet stays at home, and along with Mr. Nicholson, will have plenty of time to meditate on the wisdom of not talking until you know what you are talking about. In Hants, Nova Scotia, Mr. DeWitt Foster, who was once read out of the Conservative party for his conduct in connection with horse-buying deals for the Government during the war, has been now read out of public life by the electors. Public life can get along without him. So, no doubt, can the Liberal party without Mr. Duff, of Lunenberg, who has been beaten by a Conservative. Mr. Duff will now have plenty of time to devote to his business interests. And there have been other eliminations. These losses are distinct gains to Canadian public life. They may a hint that the public is going to demand at least ordinary standards of conduct and character among its representatives. It is intent on doing some house-cleaning. A fair start was made on Tuesday.

THE "INDEPENDENTS" IN PARLIAMENT.

The increase in the number of members of Parliament outside of the Liberal and Conservative ranks is of some significance. The rise of the third party in Canada was abrupt. For a number of years farmer Governments were in control in several Provinces and the Progressive party, which was the name adopted in the Federal arena, was the second strongest party in the House in the session which lasted from 1921 to 1925. But by the latter year the movement appeared to be on the wane; several of the Provincial elections brought turn-overs, mostly in favor of the Conservatives, and in the 1925 Dominion election the Progressive party was reduced, comparatively speaking, to a remnant, and the strongest group in the House was the Conservatives. The Liberal administration, relying on the support of the third party and independent members, was not quite able to survive the session.

In the new alignment the Liberals take the place of the Conservatives as the strongest group in the House, with a membership just short of half, while the Conservatives have 91 seats, and thirty-five seats are held by members of smaller groups, compared with twenty-six seats held by them last session. But while twenty-three of the twenty-six last year were Progressives, with two Labor members and one independent, they are ranged in an entirely different way this year. There are eleven Liberal-Progressives, endorsed by both parties, only eight Progressives, eleven representatives of the United Farmers of Alberta, three Labor members, and two Independents. In other words, the straight Progressive group has been pretty well shattered.

Of course, a Liberal-Progressive member may legitimately be considered as upholding the Liberal cause, and if the joint endorsement means anything such action may be expected. The eleven of this group will give the Liberals a majority, without calling upon any of the other "Independents." But, short of a permanent fusion of the Progressives with the Liberals, it is not hard to conceive of such a difference of opinion between the two parties as might alienate some of these members. What develops in this direction remains to be seen.

This revival of strength of Independent members (that is the only way in which they can be conveniently termed) shows that the country is not wholly devoted to the two-party system. Nor is it the belief of this journal that the two-party system is the sine qua non of good government. The political problems of this country may be solved by working out, of necessity through a good many sessions, a multiple party system that will represent public opinion better than can any two-party system. In fact, considering the natural sectionalism of Canada, and the growing complexity of government, it is a wonder that the two-party system lasted as long as it has.—Monetary Times.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Sir Thomas White is the latest name mentioned in connection with the Conservative leadership. Anything that would get Sir Thomas back into the public service would not be a bad thing for this country.

After the Radio Club finishes cutting out the interference, will they please see what can be done about getting the radio sopranos off the air.

The Kiwanis Exhibition promises to provide more entertainment than a six-ringed circus. The "We Build" organization is evidently determined to make the good folks of Peterboro sit up and take notice.

Preventing fires is easier and cheaper than fighting them. That is the idea behind Fire Prevention Week, and if it sells itself to the people of Peterboro, the beneficial results should be easily detected during the next year.

Boy Carries Passport Sewn Up In Clothing

NEW YORK, Oct. 2. — (United News). — Seven year old Emmett Henry, an American citizen who has spent the last six years in Europe, has arrived home unaccompanied on the North German Lloyd Liner Bremen.

Immigration inspectors had to cut through the boys clothing with a pair of shears to get at his passoprt and credentials.

His father, Herman, met him promised him a new suit.

RESUME THRESHING ALBERTA DISTRICT

Work Still Held Up in Manitoba and Saskatchewan.

WINNIPEG, Oct. 2. (Canadian Press).—Threshing operations have been resumed in many districts of Alberta but work is at a standstill over a widespread area in Saskatchewan and Manitoba as a result of a general rainfall Thursday, which varied from a light drizzle to a steady downpour. It was still raining in some localities this morning.

Frost was general in Alberta during the night, but was not sufficient to damage the unthreshed grain.

Private reports received by Winnipeg grain dealers minimize the estimated damage to the Western grain crop. These reports claim that yields and grades will be much better than expected despite unfavorable weather conditions this Fal.

The forecast is for clearing skies and moderate temperatures.

CRANKS CAR WHILE IN GEAR

Clifford Lowes Badly Cut When Jammed Against Another Car.

BROKE HEADLIGHTS.

Cranking a car which was in gear last night, about 6.15, at the Corner Service Station, Charlotte Street, Clifford Lowes, of the New Centre Meat Market had his legs badly crushed and is to-day confined to bed suffering from very deep wounds on the limbs which are also very much swollen.

Accepting an offer from D. White, of a ride home in one of the Corner Service Station cars, Mr. Lowes was assisting to start the engine when the accident occurred. The car darted forward, and Mr. Lowes, in the effort to escape injury jumped to the bumper and in his attempt broke off the lights. He was jammed against another car, which was forced backwards until stopped by a fence. Mr. Lowes was pinned tight between the two machines, until assistance was forthcoming and he was released.

A bicycle belonging to Mr. White was parked against the fence and was completely destroyed.

Dr. Moir, who dressed Mr. Lowes injuries, has ordered him to remain in bed for a few days.

Eye witnesses of the event say that Mr. Lowes was very fortunate in escaping with his life, as he might easily have been crushed to death.

CUSTOM CAR CARAVAN.

Passed Through Peterborough Yesterday and Created Considerable Interest.

The first Canadian Custom Caravan of Studebaker automobiles passed through Peterboro yesterday. The caravan was demonstrated at the salesroms of Reid & Sons, 326 Aylmer Street, where many interested admirers surveyed the custom models and gave approval.

Among those most interested in the automobiles was Mr. Seabrook. Mr. Seabrook not only made a thorough inspection of the motors, the bodies, the upholstering, but drove the car.

"It was a delightful experience," said Mr Seabrook. 'Just to sit in that comfortable seat and press the accelerator seemed to me to be rich luxury. I felt that there was more power in the motor than I would ever use and the car rode like a Pullman. We tried a humpy road —and it seemed like a boulevard. "I was delighted."

There are four distinctive cars in the Custom Car Caravan.

The first car of the line is The President, a Big Six Studebaker Custom Sedan that seats seven people and has the power of Niagara and the speed of the wind. It's custom luxury is the development of years of custom car building and it was designed by America's leading custom builders.

The other cars of the caravan are the Big Six Custom Brougham, the Standard Six Custom Victoria and the Standard Six Custom Sedan.

IT is by strictest attention to quality — of material and workmanship — that Chevrolet has achieved, not only the most powerful but also the smoothest, engine in its price class.

Notice how the working parts are fully enclosed—protected from road dust, grit and water. The valve-lifter assembly is completely encased in pressed steel covering to prevent entry of harmful foreign matter and to silence the engine. The Chevrolet Dry Disc Clutch is mounted in the flywheel housing, while the transmission is immediately behind the clutch, and, with the propeller-shaft, is completely enclosed.

A newly-designed camshaft and well-balanced crankshaft with extra large main bearings insure the smoothness which has won for this Chevrolet such unanimous praise.

MAYBEE'S FINAL MAJORITY IS 386

Recount of Northumberland Federal Ballots Completed Friday Night.

CHANGE OF 5 VOTES.

(Examiner Correspondence)

COBOURG, Oct. 2—The recount of the ballots in Northumberland gives the following official and final totals, M. E. Maybee M.P. (Conservative) 8,113, and W. A. Fraser 7727, with Maybee's majority 386, just five less than the majority of 391 declared by the returning officer, R. J. Allan of Campbellford, on the basis of the count made by his deputies on election night.

His Honour Judge McGlade completed the revision of ballots shortly after nine o'clock last night and immediately issued certificates of the result of his work to F. M. Field, K.C., as counsel for Mr. Maybee, who was present, and to T. F. Hall, K.C., chief counsel for Mr. Fraser who did not attend the session.

It was disclosed by the recount that all the ballots at one poll in Hamilton township had been placed in the box with their counterfoils attached to them. Judge McGlade decided hat they were all good ballots. His work was completed with more despatch, it was said, than any other recount in the district, in so far as could be remembered.

QUALITY OF HORSES FEATURES ANNUAL FAIR AT MILLBROOK

Heavy and Light Animals Shown Are of Splendid Type.

FAIR SUCCESSFUL.

Good Exhibits in All Divisions, With Keen Competition.

(By Staff Reporter)

MILLBROOK, Oct. 2—The Millbrook Central Exhibition for 1926 was a very successful affair, and the directors were greatly pleased over the quality of the exhibits, particularly in the live stock section, where the entries were declared to be the best in sixteen years past. The horses on view lived up to the standard of excellence in horseflesh upon which the County of Durham prides itself. The quality of the heavy draught horses, in particular, and in fact of all the horses that appeared in the ring, was of the type seldom encountered at a Fall Fair, and constituted one of the high lights of a very successful Fair. In the heavy draught and general agriculture section, R. J. McKnight, W. H. Armtsrong, A. J. Henderson, George Ward and Alex Fallis had some fine beasts, while J. O. Ball of Springville T. Cowan of Orono, and L. H. Winslow were prominent in the roadster class.

Cattle, sheep and hogs were well represented, nearly every stall and pen in the long rows of enclosures against the fences being filled. In the horse stalls, the big draught animals stood patiently, gay ribbons braided in their tails, which were also ornamented with vertical straw woven pleats. One light grey beast had a tasteful decoration of pink and green ribbons.

T. W. McCamus had Yorkshires and Tomworths on view in the hog section, and H. Snowden of Bowmanville showed Berkshires. Doctor Ellis had Yorkshires and Shropshire sheep and Thomas Beatty of Peterborough showed Berkshires and Tamworths, also Leicester sheep. N. Allin of Newcastle had some fine Leicesters, which were shown also by O. Larmer and A. Matchett. Oxford Downs were exhibited by William Elmhirst of Indian River and I. W. Larmer, and Shropshires by A. Holdsworth of Cobourg and J. C. Swayne of Cavan.

Shorthorns were the ruling type in the cattle sheds, with O. Larmer, Gerald Armstrong, and T. W. McCamus exhibiting in this section. Kennedy Brothers had Polled-Angus, and a few Jerseys were shown by James McMillan, W. Brown, I. Needham and I. Nattrass. A herd of accredited Holsteins were owned by H. Seymour.

Fowls in their own particular building made a good exhibit, with water-fowl especially good. Messrs. Buller and Brown of Peterborough, Chapman and Tamblin of Orono had large exhibits here.

The exhibits in the Main Building attracted a great deal of interest. The flowers, considering the late season were exceptionally good, with some lovely cut blooms, potted plants, and coleus on view. Mrs. J. L. Byam had an odd entry in a lovely red "flame plant."

The Women's Institute had a whole section this year, with a pretty collection of hand-painting, fancy work and baking.

All the sections were well filled with a particularly good showing of fine apples and some enormous vegetables. Grains were displayed in bags, and there was a good assortment of splendid home-made cooking, in cakes, bread and buns, tarts, pies and biscuits, butter and eggs, dressed fowl, and canned fruits and vegetables. An innovation this year was the inclusion with the exhibit of dark cakes of the recipe for their manufacture.

Fancy Work Section.

The display of embroideries and finely-worked linens was as excellent as usual. A black velvet cushion, hand-painted in roses; some dainty card-table covers; a tea-cloth with panels in running blue stitches and yellow centred flowers; a cloth done in fine Mexican drawn work; a lovely spread with large conventionalized flowers in French knots; several knitted silk dressers for children; and a number of finely-wrought quilts, were outstanding pieces in this exhibit.

A novelty in the fruit section was the quart box of Montmorenci cherries, picked by Mrs. F. B. Lovein of Newcastle on September 30th.

In this building, J. W. Stuart, of Peterborough, had a Singer sewing machine exhibit, and Horn Brothers of Lindsay had a fine showing of woollen goods, in cloths and yarns and satin-edged blankets and gaily colored afghans.

Outside, there were plenty of amusement stands and refreshment booths for the fun-lover and the hungry. The ladies of the Presbyterian church had a dining hall, the A.Y.P.A. of St. Thomas' church, a refreshment booth, and the Sunshine Mission Band of the United church had a similar stall.

The R. A. Lister people of Hamilton, were showing separators, the Renfrew Machinery Company stoves, scales and separators, and the Goold-Shaply people of Brantford, an engine for pumping water. Ford cars were shown by T. H. Harkness, Chevrolets by A. Tinney and Overlands and Willys-Knights by H. Tinney, and the Gillespie Garage of Peterborough had Chryslers on view.

A medicine man had the attention of the crowd with a description of his wares and a series of colored charts.

Over in the judges' stand Charles Elliott of Peterborough, was broadcasting the merits of the Kiwanis' Produced-in-Canada Fair, and the Millbrook band supplied music during the afternoon.

Two Races.

The races, with $250 in prize money divided between a green race and a free-for-all, were run off as folows:

Green Race.

1 Eva Patch (Owner, J. S. McMillen of Campcroft) 2 2 1 1 1
2 Sadie K, (Owner, F. Hicks, of Bowmanville) 1 1 2 2 2

SCHOOL FAIR

AT WESTWOOD.

WESTWOOD, Oct. 1.—The annual Westwood School Fair was held on Wednesday afternoon. Although the weather prospects were somewhat threatening at noon, the afternoon was all that could be desired. The attendance was undoubtedly the largest in the history of the fair, and the usual spirit of good fellowship prevailed between the competing schools.

A fine array of exhibits were displayed in the Town Hall, and revealed the hard labour and perseverance of the children. There were the usual roots, vegetables, apples and eggs showing those of an agricultural trend of mind. The bouquets of flowers were beautiful, numerous and varied. The home-made cooking, candy and fancy work showed the girls to be well versed in the domestic arts. The carpenter workshop among the other exhibits also deserved high praise.

The public speaking and singing had many contestants, and were congratulated by the judge on their splendid efforts. The live stock was well represented, including chickens, sheep, calves and horses. Fololwing the judging of these a long list of sports was run off, to a large crowd of interested spectators, the children receiving their prizes in money, which was not long in changing hands at the booth, which was in charge of G. Manley.

MONEY STOLEN FROM CHURCH

$5.60 Missing From Children's Box at Burnbrae.

NO CLUE FOUND.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, Oct. 2. — Although the local churches were unharmed by unknown visitors last Sunday night, the Presbyterian church at Burnbrae, which was presumably invaded about the same time, has reported a theft of $5.60 from the children's birthday box in which small contributions were received. No trace or clue whatever was found by the church authorities and the recent occurrences are a mystery to the police.

"Jay Walked" on Bridge.

Manford Howell, aged 48, Brighton township, while walking across the bridge here at noon Friday thoughtlessly stepped out on to the roadway, and directly in front of Major Bygott's car. Mr. Howell neglected to look and see whether any vehicles were approaching. He was knocked down and at first was thought to be seriously injured. It was later stated by the doctors that he was only slightly hurt.

OBITUARY.

MRS. MARIA FOWLER.

The death occurred in Peterborough this morning of Mrs. Maria Goodliffe, widow of the late James B. Fowler, of New Toronto.

She leaves to mourn her loss two sisters, Mrs. M. Wolstenholm of Toronto and Mrs. E. Walker, of Vancouver; three step-daughters, Mrs. F. W. Gladman, of London, Mrs. W. R. Gearrie, and Mrs. A. F. Passmore, both of Toronto.

The funeral will take place on Monday afternoon at 1 o'clock from the residence of W. J. Henry, 531 Homewood avenue, to the Little Lake cemetery.

APSLEY PERSONALS.

APSLEY, October 1.—The funeral of Harvey Trickey, whose sudden death in a local lumber camp caused a shock to the community, was held on Thursday last, and was very largely attended. The service was held in the Orange Hall, Apsley, and was conducted by the Rev. C. Spence, whose address made a profound impression on his hearers. Interment was made in the cemetery, the last rites being conducted by the members of the Orange Lodge according to the ritual of the Order. Mr. Joseph Foster, Grand Organizer, was present at the ceremony, the funeral arrangements being in charge of Comstock Brothers, Peterborough. Wreaths and floral emblems were sent by the following friends of the deceased: Mr. and Mrs. Jack Buchanan, Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Parks, Mrs. Deyncourt Wilson, Mrs. Stanley Windsor, Mrs. J. Downing, Mr. and Mrs. W. Lean, and the local Orange Lodge.

A great deal of activity in road work prevails on the Burleigh road between Haultain and Apsley. The rock crusher has just finished laying crushed stone from the Twin Hills to the English Church at Haultain, and is now being moved to near McIlmoyle's Schoolhouse to do the same work on the new road which has just been completed near there. This piece of road has been cut through the bush, and is a great improvement. As a result a very dangerous, rough and tortuous quarter of a mile, for long the terror of motorists, has been eliminated. The work necessitated a cement bridge over the creek. Another cement bridge is being built at the Ranch turn, and next week the bridge over Eels Creek at the entrance to the village will be replaced by one made of the same material. Splendid work has also been done on the road to Loon Lake on Tanner's line. The condition of Jack's Lake Road is, however, too bad for language to describe.

Mrs. A. Smith, who is leaving Apsley to live with her son near Ottawa, was the guest of honor at a party of friends held in the Rectory on Tuesday evening, when a very pleasant time was spent in music and singing. During the evening Mrs. Smith was presented with an address and purse of money as a testimonial of affection and regard, the address being read by Rev. C. Spence, Mrs. Stanley Wilson making the presentation.

A wedding of local interest took place on Wednesday last at Bancroft, when Evelina Post became the bride of George Bullied, the ceremony being performed by the Rev. Stoker of the United Church. Mr. and Mrs. Bullied will reside at Lasswade.

The Chandos Township Council will not pay for any more sheep killed by dogs unless the sheep are yarded or shut up in pens at night, according to a resolution recently passed by that body.

Harvest thanksgiving services will be held at St. George's Church on Sunday netx at 10.30 a.m. and 7 p.m., and at St. Stephen's, Chandos, at 3 p.m. the same day.

MILLBROOK NEWS

MILLBROOK, Oct. 1. — Mrs. (Dr.) Herbert N. Young (nee Miss F. Baxter) held her post-nuptial reception at her home, "Ingleside", King street, on Monday afternoon, from 4 to 6 o'clock, about one hundred guests availing themselves of the opportunity to call and extend best wishes to the bride whose home was formerly in Kingston before coming here to reside.

Receiving with Mrs. Young were her mother, Mrs. Baxter, of Kingston and Mrs. (Dr.) D. C. King of Peterboro, while assisting in the tea room were Mrs. (Dr.) T. W. H. Young, of Peterborough, who poured tea, Mrs. (Canon) Allen who cut the ices, with Misses Mamie Boucher of Peterboro, and Muriel Smith, of Millbrook, who looked after serving the guests.

Miss Genevieve McCarthy of Peterboro, attended the door.

Mrs. Young received wearing a French gown of georgette crepe in a dainty shade of pink, with rope of pearls, and silver shoes and stockings; her mother wore a becoming dress of silver grey georgette crepe, and Mrs. King was in black georgette with hat to match.

A bright-burning grate fire in the living-room had a very cosy appearance to the callers coming in from the dull and cold day out of doors, while early fall flowers added to the fragrance and attractiveness to the large rooms.

Quite a number of those who called on Monday motored from Peterboro for the reception.

Among those from St. Thomas' W.A., Millbrook, who attended the Deanery meeting at St. John's church, Ida, on Tuesday were: Mrs. T. H. Harkness, Mrs. C. McNeil, Mrs. H. J. Grassett, Mrs. C. M. Westmacott, Rev. Canon and Mrs. Allen, Rev. P. R. and Mrs. Howard Mrs. Wilkinson, Mrs. A. J. Fallis, Mrs. D. Fallis, Mrs. W. Lowery, Mrs. Attwool, Mrs. J. Allen, Mrs. G. Fowler, Mrs. E. Whyte, Misses R. MacNamara, M. Christie, Muriel Smith, Ada Attwooll, Edna Lowery, A. Armstrong, and K. Fowler.

Miss Helen Armstrong of Fergus, is visiting her cousin, Miss Mamie Collins, and other friends in town. On Tuesday Miss Armstrong motored to Cobourg and is the guest of friends in that town for a short time.

The management of the Millbrook Central Exhibition is offering $3,000 in prize money at the Fair this year, with $250 for the speeding in the ring. Besides the concert in the town hall on Friday, October 1 at 8 p.m., with talent supplied by the Kenny-Wilson entertainers, there will be a dance in the Armouries at 9.30 p.m. H. A. Fallis is president, and J. N. McGill secretary.

Rev. P. R. and Mrs. Howard attended the annual meeting of the Wycliffe College Alumnae, Toronto last week.

The wettest place in the world is generaly conceded to be Cherra Poonjee in Assam, wher rainfall for the year has exceeded 15 inches.

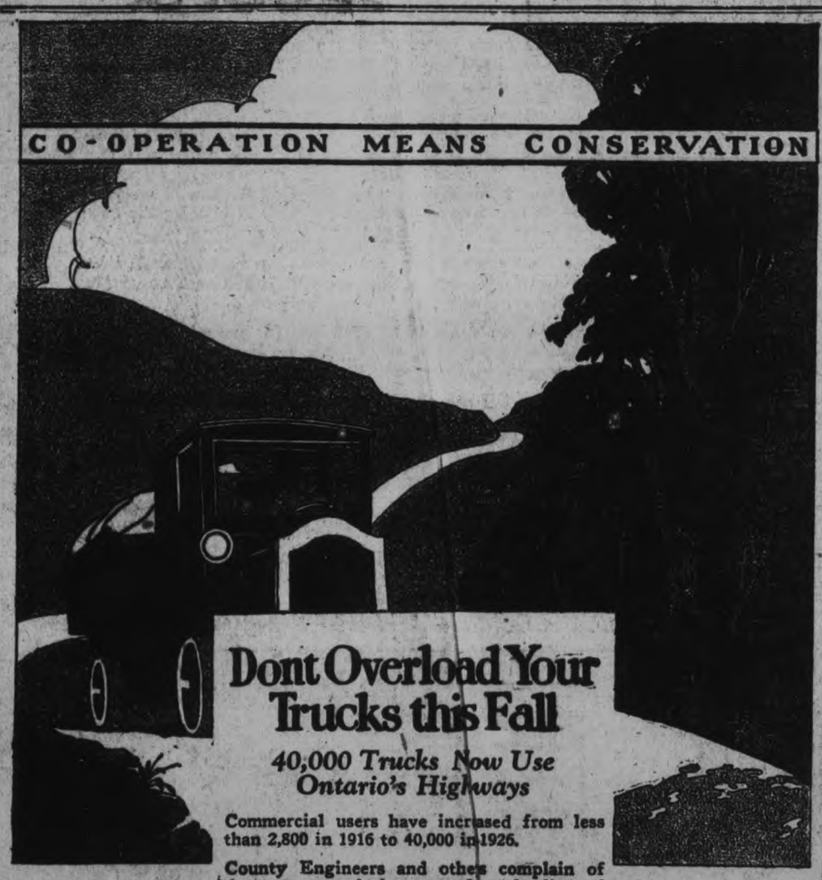
CO-OPERATION MEANS CONSERVATION



Dont Overload Your Trucks this Fall

40,000 Trucks Now Use Ontario's Highways

Commercial users have increased from less than 2,800 in 1916 to 40,000 in 1926.

County Engineers and others complain of damage to roads because of overloading of trucks and speed at which they are driven on highways.

The necessity of limiting loads was recognized by the Government three years ago. Unless you wish more drastic legislation, further limiting of weight and speed, you will co-operate with the Department and obey the law.

All taxpayers must not be penalized because of temporary profit to the few.

Road repair bills should never be burdensome and will not be if you use the highways reasonably.

Penalties are provided for overloading and fast driving. These should be unnecessary, but will be rigidly enforced whenever necessary.

THE HON. GEO. S. HENRY, Minister of Highways

S. L. SQUIRE, Deputy Minister

Issued by the Ontario Department of Highways to secure the co-operation of motorists and truck operators in abating the abuse of the roads of the Province.

JACK FROST

TO the Kiddies in a Sunshine Furnace heated home, Jack Frost is only a mischievous elf who paints wonderful trees and grottoes and flowers on the window panes.

The heated air generated in McClary's Sunshine Furnace is humidified and delivered warm and soft as a summer breeze to all the rooms in the home. Properly installed by McClary's accredited agents the distribution of the heat is uniform.

Burns Any Kind of Fuel

Hard coal, soft coal, coke, all burn equally well in the Sunshine Furnace. The Air Blast Ring makes it a soft coal burner at will. The furnace being entirely constructed of Cast Iron, coke can be burned without any risk of cracking or burning out.

McNABB'S FALL FASHION SHOW.

On Monday night at the Capitol, the ladies of Peterborough will have an opportunity of seeing the "last word" in "Correct Dress" for the coming season, displayed on charming models, and on a scale never before attempted in this city.

With the co-operation of Messrs. Wm. Lech & Sons, Mrs. J. Wilson, Madame Merriam and Comstock's, Mr. McNabb has arranged an exhibition of coats, suits, gowns, furs and millinery which would be worth while in a city twenty times the size of Peterborough. This display will be "topped off" by the newest in "coiffures" by Madame Merriam.

Messrs. Comstock have co-operated with Manager Fletcher in arranging a stage setting worthy of the presentation. This will be enhanced by special stage lighting, which will not only beautify the setting, but will enable those sitting furthest from the stage, to see as clearly as those sitting at the front of the theatre.

The Capitol Orchestra is augmented for the occasion and Mrs. Jessie Hollingsworth Perrin will render suitable numbers between each group display.

One feature which especially appeals to Peterborough people is that all "Mannequins" are local girls and members of Peter Robinson Chapter, I.O.D.E.

THE AUTHOR OF "MANTRAP" TELLS HOW HE CAME TO WRITE STORY.

"Mantrap," Paramount's latest production, which comes to the Capitol on Monday, was written by Sinclair Lewis, author of "Main Street," "Babbitt" and "Arrowsmith." In a recent interview, Mr. Lewis, on returning from Canada, said:

"It struck me up there in what is particularly known as God's country that no person at all literate could stay very long without wanting to write a book.

"While I read a good deal in the Northwest I didn't write a word, nor make any notes; but I returned with every personality I had met etched in my mind, brimming over with the color of what I had seen and lived.

"It's a new departure for me, and one I like—a straight, out-and-out romance of an unspoiled country. For me it is the most captivating love and adventure story I have ever conceived or told.

"I'm willing to let my reputation rest on 'Mantrap'."

Clara Bow, Ernest Torrence and Percy Marmont are featured in "Mantrap." Victor Fleming directed from Adelaide Heilbron's adaptation.

This picture was selected by Director Jack Arthur, as being big enough to open the New Uptown Theatre in Toronto, and proved all he expected of it.

In offering Mantrap in conjunction with McNabb's Annual Fall Fashion Show on Monday, Manager Fletcher is giving more entertainment on one bill than has ever been offered in this city before.

AT THE GRAND.

HAS "THE STUDENT PRINCE" A HAPPY ENDING?

"The Student Prince," which will be the attraction at the Grand Opera House, Wednesday, October 13th, offers the female theatre-goers of Peterboro a problem that is interwoven through its melange of mirth and magnificent melody.

Adapted as it was from "Old Heidelberg," the late Richard Mansfield's starring vehicle, naturally Miss Donnelly, who made the adaptation, had to cling as closely to the story of the play as was possible, but the question has arisen with many theatre-goers, notably among the fair sex, if Karl Franz, the Prince, who came to Heidelberg as a student and while there fell in love with the barmaid Kathie, was right in renouncing his love for the lowly commoner, to marry one of his own estate, the Princess Margaret. Kathie is such a tender, appealing, bewitching mite of womanhood that naturally the sympathy of the audiences goes out to her; while the Princess is, as her title implies, regal and stately.

So again the conjecture comes up after a quarter of a century. When Mansfield was playing the Prince, his mail was deluged with protests against his renouncing the girl of his heart, for the choice of his grandfather, the king. But though the conjecture may never satisfactorily be settled in audiences' minds, perhaps his expression: "I am the King, the path of Destiny lies straight before me . . . no turning aside," will in a small sense explain his attitude in accepting for a life companion someone other than she whom his heart yearned for.

AT THE REGENT

LIVING "RING" AS NEW FILM FEATURE

New York's most Beautiful Models Pose for Unique Spectacle in "Mismates."

Something entirely new in the life of the spectacular in motion pictures will be seen in "Mismates," First National's latest photoplay feature, which comes to the Regent Theatre next Monday, with Doris Kenyon and Warner Baxter in the featured roles.

It is a human engagement ring. A huge diamond was constructed, then the ring was made in proportion. The diamond is in a Tiffany setting. But in place of platinum prongs, Director Brabin has substituted six of the most beautiful artist models that could be found in New York City. The effect is really indescribably beautiful according to those who have already seen the film.

There is also a jewel parade in this picture. Thousands of dollars worth of jewels of every kind are displayed in this scene.

In the unusually brilliant cast of "mismates" are Philo McCollough, Mae Allison, Charles Murray, Nancy Kelley, John Kolb, Cyril Ring and others. It was directed by Charles Brabin.

FIVE MILLION IN 30 DAYS

Northern Ontario Profitable Investment Field.

With production from the metal mines of Northern Ontario alone totalling over $5,000,000 every thirty days, more and more investors are turning their attention to this field and availing themselves of the remarkable opportunities that exist for increasing capital in a short space of time.

Consistent with the growth of the mining industry there is more information available today than ever before on mining methods and conditions so that the public may better understand and benefit by the progress in this industry.

In this connection Stobie, Forlong & Company, Reford Building, Toronto, have just prepared a new bulletin reviewing the latest situation at a number of the most attractive mines. This information has been obtained from the firm's own engineering staff and anyone interested in the subject of mining should obtain a copy.

No One Has Found the Treasure!

(BUT TODAY'S CONTRIBUTION BY THE BLACK PIRATE HELPS)
WHY DON'T YOU JOIN IN?

There was a big scramble for papers last night, a great many people thinking the treasure hunt might end then. But it still goes on, with a few more details added today in the directions.

Around The Examiner office they think the puzzle is absurdedly simple. Maybe they're right, but it doesn't matter to them, because no employee of The Examiner and no relative of any employee of The Examiner may win the prize. That's one of the penalties of belonging in the newspaper game. So while the employees of The Examiner may have all the fun of working out the daily puzzle guides, they cannot have the thrill of winning the $50 gold piece.

As a matter of fact there is only one person in Peterborough who knows the secret of where the key is hidden, although hundreds of people are daily passing within a few—yards—miles—feet—of it.

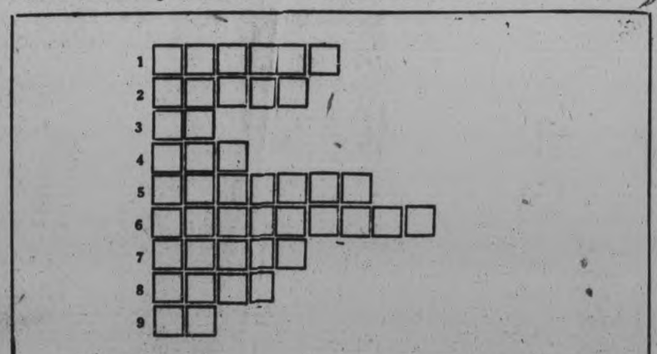
It wouldn't do, at this stage, to tell just how far away folk are, any more than it would do to say what comes after the last word in today's guide—yards—feet—paces—inches—miles. It might be anything.

Don't be discouraged if one of the words today seems doubtful — as though either one of two words would fit the space equally well. It's all in the game, and the Black Pirate assures you that the point will be cleared up without trouble in a day or two. In fact, though this pesky word seems foolish and useless now, one more word later on will put it in its place.

And if you guess it correctly, and guess several other unexplained things corerctly, you may go right now and pick up the key—

But if you can't, well, try again on Monday night, when more particulars will be given.

Here's Today's Guide — Add it to What Went Before



1.—Man's name.
2.—Begin.
3.—Preposition denoting position.
4.—Conjunction.
5.—City thoroughfares.
6.—Woman's name.
7. Point of the compass.
8.—A number.
9.—Proceed.

COLDS THAT DEVELOP INTO PNEUMONIA

Chronic coughs and persistent colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action, it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and kills the germ.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes, and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and destroys the germs that lead to consumption.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of chronic coughs and colds, bronchical asthma, catarrhal bronchitis and other forms of throat and respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or 'flu.

Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

GIRL CRUSHED BY MOTOR CAR

Darts Across Road Into Path of Automobile Near Lindsay.

INJURIES FATAL.

LINDSAY, October 2.—Injuries which will probably prove fatal were sustained by the 12-year-old daughter of Mrs. William Wooldridge, of Oakwood, when she was struck by a car driven by the Rev. Dr. Morrow of that village.

The little girl, with her sister, was on the road between the two bridges east of Oakwood, about five miles west of Lindsay. Dr. Morrow, going east, was passing another car going west, when the little girl darted across the road. She was struck and badly crushed by Dr. Morrow's car. In his efforts to avoid the accident, Dr. Morrow crashed into the bridge, tearing off two guard rails and wrecking the car.

No hope is held for the girl's recovery.

INVITE DOCTORS AS BABY JUDGES

Physicians From Neighboring Towns May Have Important Roles

Several doctors from neighboring towns are being asked to judge the baby contest being held in connection with Peterborough Kiwanis Club Produced in Canada Exhibition. Among them are Dr. Russell of Bailieboro; Dr. Smith of Lakefield; Dr. Walsh of Keene; Dr. Carmichael of Omemee; Dr. Young of Millbrook; Dr. McNeil of Bethany; Dr. Hamilton of Pontypool.

In numbers there is strength and it certainly appears that the babies entered in the contest will be thoroughly judged. The points of perfection will be announced later.

PORK AND BEANS DEMONSTRATED

Canned Milk and Biscuits Also Shown at Turnbull's.

If you are feeling hungry and want something particularly tasty in the way of eats, drop into the Turnbull Company's store next week and have a sample of real oven-baked pork and beans, with a Telfer biscuit and a cup of coffee to accompany it. They are demonstrating these three articles of food there all week, with Mr. W. H. Smith and Mrs. Jackson of Toronto in charge of the demonstration of Borden's St. Charles Brand of evaporated milk and condensed coffee, and Mrs. C. Mason dispensing the pork and beans, which are of the Catelli brand and are the real old-time article, baked in the oven for eight hours, and are companioned on their counter by boxes of Catelli's Macaroni in attractive packages. The biscuits are dainty and toothsome, with various samples on view of the Telfer products, honored by Royal choice during the official visit to this country of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, in 1919.

The Evaporated Milk which is shown in tins goes into cakes and candy and pastry, in fact, it can be used in the making of anything which requires sweet milk, and a little book of recipes goes along with it. A pint of this material placed in a quart milk bottle and completed with water is said to give a fluid which is much richer in quality than the ordinary quart of milk.

EXHIBITION BOARD HOLD MEETING

Informal Reports Read Will Be Completed and Presented To Meeting in Near Future.

A meeting of the directors of the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition was held on Thursday evening for the purpose of running over the affairs of the Exhibition Board during Fair week.

Statements of attendance and receipts from various sources were read, but as they are not quite complete, a further meeting will be held in the near future to close the season's operations for the year.

A great deal of enthusiasm prevailed, and it is confidently expected that the 1927 exhibition, for which work is already under way, will eclipse any exhibition that has yet been held in Peterborough.

The Exhibition Board deeply appreciates the loyalty of the citizens of Peterborough, of the county and of the district in general, in supporting this year's show, under unfavorable conditions, in the manner in which they did.

About forty of the members of the Board were in attendance.

GREAT INTERPRETER OF CHARACTER COMING

Rev. Herbert W. Piercy Will Be at Murray Street Baptist Church Next Friday.

Lovers of the best in literature and who like to hear it well told, have a treat in store for them when Rev. Herbert W. Piercy comes to Murray Street Baptist Church next Friday and renders Irving Bachelier's "Keeping up with Lizzie." Mr. Piercy has delighted large audiences at hundreds of Canadian points, and newspaper comments have been highly complimentary. The Winnipeg Telegram says, "He was a compliment to the city." Charlottetown Guards, P.E.I., says: "He has almost magical power over his hearers."

His visit to Peterborough should be only an introduction to return engagements, as has been the case in dozens of places at which he has entertained.

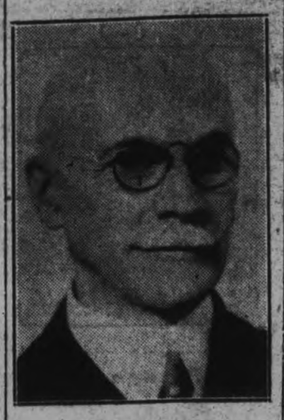
TO OPEN FAIR.



S. R. PARSONS

Of Toronto, who is to open the Produced-In-Canada Fair which commences at the Armouries, Monday, October 11th. The Kiwanis Club has been exceptionally fortunate in securing Mr. Parsons who is not only one of the leading manufacturers in Canada but is also a man of international reputation and has for many years been active in the campaign for the use of Canadian produced articles by the Canadian public. Mr. Parsons is the President of the British American Oil Co., Ltd., Past President, Canadian Manufacturers' Association, Representative of the Employers of Canada at first League of Nations Labour Conference, Washington 1919, and again at Geneva, Switzerland, 1921.

The proceedings will open with a luncheon at noon to which all the leading men of the City will be invited. Mr. Parsons will give an address at this luncheon and will afterwards formally open the Fair.

THANKSGIVING SERVICE HELD

Rev. R. T. C. Dwelly Preaches at St. George's Church.

HARVEST LESSONS.

St. George's Anglican Church was tastefully decorated last night on the occasion of the Harvest Festival service.

The Rev. G. J. Bousfield of St. Luke's Church, read the lessons; the Rev. R. T. C. Dwelly of Young's Point delivered the sermon. The Rev. J. L. Hughes, rector of St. George's, conducted the service.

Taking as his text the words of the fifth chapter of Jeremiah and the twenty-fourth verse, "Neither say they in their heart, let us now fear the Lord our God, that giveth rain, both the former and the latter, in his season; he reserveth unto us the appointed weeks of the harvest," Mr. Dwelly declared that there were many lessons to be derived from celebrating the harvest. Above all things it brings each person face to face with the absolute unchangeableness of the Divine Being. We have our being and take our lives as a matter of course. There is something wonderful about the annual recurrence of a harvest, he declared. It brings to mind God's promise to His people. People can remember times when the harvesters grumbled because of a poor crop, but even if some were bad no person can find a year when there was an absolute total loss. With God there is no variableness; He is the same, yesterday, to-day and forever.

The average person has a garden around his home which he cultivates and looks after. Just as He works on a small scale does God work only on a larger scale. We are His seed; we are gifted with a spark of the Divine Being that makes us want to do those things that are best in life. God expects every one of us to bear fruit, and the fruit He expects is the product of practising a true Christian life.

The call to missionary work is connected with the Harvest Thanksgiving. Many thousands are to-day being lost to the cause of Christianity because of the lack of missionaries. While all are not gifted this way we can do our share; we can assist with money and our prayers.

While we enjoy the earthy harvests year by year there comes a time in life when we face the harvest of God. In the same manner will God separate the chaff from the wheat; this should bring us to the realization that we should live our lives in such a manner that we will be gathered into the garner of God.

In concluding, the preacher said: "It is God's call to you and to me to trust Him, fear Him, and to use Him as a friend when we are in trouble."

FIND CORPSE OF WORKMATE

GUELPH, Oct. 2. — (Canadian Press.)—When the day shift of the International Malleable Works here entered the premises this morning they found the body of Fred Thomason, one of the night shift, with a gunshot wound in his back. Thomason was dead when discovered, but the body was still warm. The police were immediately notified and stated that the case had the appearance of murder.

RALLY BEGINS WINTER WORK

Class Activities For Coming Season Outlined at Meeting in Y.W.C.A. Gym.

MISS PEARCE SPEAKS.

The winter programme of the Y. W. C. A. was inaugurated last night, by a well attended rally which filled all the available space in the gymnasium last night.

The chief speaker of the evening was Miss Pearce, Y. W. C. A., secretary of Toronto who described her experiences while in attendance at a study course held at Sandgate Park, England, under the auspices of the World Committee of the Y. W. C. A. at which she was the sole representative from Canada. Forty ladies were in attendance at the course, representing 21 different nationalities and speaking 13 different languages. The hymn-books in use were printed in three different languages, the version, in the original language in which the hymn was written appearing at the top of the page. The subjects of study were the problems confronting the Y. W. C. A. in many lands each representative outlining the activities of the Association in her own country.

Miss Pearce gave word pictures of representatives present from Continental European countries, praising them for their courage and loyalty in carrying on Y. W. C. A. work, under great difficulties and she urged the Peterborough girls to take the example to heart and to give full suport to the Y. W. C. A. work in the city.

The Rev. David Wren, who was on the platform, read the scripture lesson, and gave a short talk in which he lauded the contribution made by the Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A. towards the solution of problems of preparing the youth of either sex for service.

Miss Leta Brownscombe, in a neat little spech, outlined the activities planned for the coming season, and Miss Caroline F. Littlefield gave an account of the physical training department work.

Two fine solos by Miss Alma Blanchard, added considerably to the enjoyment of the evening.

The programme was concluded by two numbers from the gym classes—a display of Indian club drill by a party composed of Misses Gertie Gimblett, Lily Gregory, Greta Welburn, Violet Perrier, "Midge" Lawrence, Irene Chambers, Myrtle Pradley, Lily Slaughter, Rose Puddick—and the Highland Fling by Miss Olga Gillespie, Verna Huffman, Jean McConnachie, Dolly Sproats, Annie Williams, Miguonne Mayneord.

Miss Margaret Hamilton, President of the Y. W. C. A. occupied the chair.

A cordial invitation was extended to the visitors to inspect the building which was thrown open as the President expressed it "from cellar to garret." Exhibits of the work of the basketry class were shown in the club rooms, and music and singing around the fire were led by the ukelele and outdoor clubs.

Refreshments were served in the Green Room by the Social Committee, assisted by Association girls. The table was prettily decorated with marigolds and candles. Coffee was pounred by Miss E. E. Harvey and Miss H. M. Yelland.

CHRYSLER "60"

proving itself the most sensational value in the history of the motor industry as the direct result of Chrysler's plan of Quality Standardization

Within three weeks of the lighter, lower-priced Chrysler "60" introduction, overwhelming demand required a production in excess of 500 cars a day. But even this has now fallen far short of supplying an insistent and enthusiastic public which has singled out the Chrysler "60" as a six of value far in advance of anything in its field or at its price.

In the lower-priced Chrysler "60" you get the same Chrysler Standardized Quality of scientific engineering and manufacturing precision comprehended in the Chrysler "70" and Imperial "80".

60 miles—and more—per hour; lightning acceleration of 5 to 25 miles in 7¾ seconds; the economy of 26 miles to the gallon; characteristic Chrysler smartness and beauty; phenomenal riding ease; the safety of Chrysler four-wheel hydraulic brakes; oil-filter; air-cleaner; seven-bearing crankshaft; full pressure lubrication; impulse neutralizer; road levelizers front and rear, roomyluxurious bodies; and scores of other features which bespeak dependability and long life.

There isn't a lower-priced six on the market that will begin to give you as much for your money.

See the Chrysler "60" for yourself; drive it; put it to any test. We know the Chrysler "60" will sell itself to you—that you will be satisfied with nothing else at its price.

The Chrysler plan of Quality Standardization differs from, and is superior to, ordinary manufacturing practice and methods, because it demands fixed and inflexible quality standards which enforce the same scrupulously close limits—the same rigid rule of engineering exactness—the same absolute accuracy and precision of alignment and assemblage—in the measurement, the machining and the manufacturing of every part, practice and process in four lines of Chrysler cars—"50", "60", "70" and Imperial "80".

CHRYSLER "60"—Touring Car, $1520; Roadster, $1585; Club Coupe, $1640; Coach, $1735; Sedan, $1870.
Prices are for delivery in Peterborough all taxes fully paid and includefront and rear bumpers, spare tire,cover and lock.

WHY SUFFER FROM RHEUMATISM

"FRUIT-A-TIVES" HAVE HELPED THOUSANDS

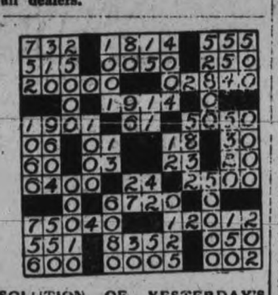
MRS. DAVISON

If you are made miserable by this painful disease, read this encouraging letter from Mrs. Louis Davison of Eau Claire, Ont.

"Some years ago, I had a severe attack of Rheumatism. I tried many remedies but received little benefit. A few months ago, I saw an advertisement of "Fruit-a-tives" and decided to try them. After taking four boxes, I am now able to do all my own work besides putting in a large garden. I take great pleasure in recommending "Fruit-a-tives" to anyone suffering from Rheumatism."

"Fruit-a-tives is a genuine fruit medicine, made from fruit juices intensified and combined with tonics. It frees the system of poisonous waste matters and purifies the blood stream.

Try "Fruit-a-tives" yourself and let them restore you to health and vigor. 25c. and 50c. a box — at all dealers.



SOLUTION OF YESTERDAY'S CROSSWORD PUZZLE.

DEATH LIST AT VERA CRUZ NOW TOTAL FOURTEEN

Four at Jalapa and Ten Lost in the Indian Villages.

OFFICIAL REPORT.

Damage To Root and Fruit Crop Estimated at $5,000,000.

MEXICO CITY, October 2 (Canadian Press).—Although all sorts of exaggerated reports are coming in on Monday's storm in Vera Cruz and the surrounding region, the Government has received apparently reliable information showing that the death list thus far totals fourteen. Four persons were killed at Jalapa and ten lost their lives in the Indian villages between Jalapa and Vera Cruz. About a half dozen of these villages were destroyed by the hurricane, the people for the most part escaping by climbing into the hills and mountains.

Several bridges on the Inter-Oceanic Railway between Jalapa and Vera Cruz were destroyed and communication is still disrupted. This railroad damage and that to cane, banana and coffee crops constitutes the greatest material losses, the total of which is estimated at 10,000,000 pesos ($5,000,000).

The Indian villages reported destroyed were built upon hillsides, bordering mountain streams or at the foot of mountains beside rivers. The structures were principally flimsy huts, light wooden frames covered with straw walls and roofs. The heavy wind and drenching rain combined with the overflowing of the streams destroyed these houses in a short time. The authorities are continuing their investigations, but thus far it appears that most of the inhabitants escaped.

The Vera Cruz State Government has appropriated 50,000 pesos for relief and reconstruction work. The Inter-Oceanic railroad crews are rushing repairs so the service may be resumed. Breweries and factories at Orizaba, Cordova and Jalapa are idle, pending repairs to the transmission lines supplying them with power from Hydro-electric plants.

Refugees from the destroyed villages, averaging several hundred inhabitants each, are being taken care of in other nearby towns and villages.

PETERBOROUGH CHILDREN ARE IN PROGRAMME

Boys and Girls To Present Gymnastics and Music.

LOCAL ARTISTS.

Kiwanis Club Stunt May Also Be Feature of Show.

The splendid programmes arranged for every night at the Produced in Canada Exhibition will rival in variety and entertainment the Grand Stand Performance at Peterborough Industrial Exhibtion.

But instead of professional tumblers and acrobats from another country, or from other parts of Canada, the gymnasts who will entertain visitors during Kiwanis Fair week will be Peterborough boys and girls, and the singers will be pupils from the city schools.

This is in keeping with the general spirit of the Exhibition—and the programmes will be doubly interesting to Peterborough people because they are presented by sons and daughters of Peterborough.

The Y.W.C.A. classes will give an exhibition of club swinging and swedish exercises, and the Y.M.C.A. advanced classes will present parallel bar work and similar intricate and expert gymnastic exercises. The schools will send choruses every night, and the boys and girls will put into practical use the lessons they have learned in school.

It will be a full week of excellent entertainment, centring around the big fashion show. It is planned to present the Kiwanis Club stunt which took second place in Toronto in competition with all clubs in the Ontario-Quebec district.

SYNOPSIS

His father's warning— Take women's love scornfully—and forget"—has made Juan the world's greatest lover. His cynicism is checked by Madonna-like Adriana Varanese; loving her, he reforms, but incurs the enmity of infamous Lucretia Borgia, who loves him, and Donati, her kinsman, who covets Adriana. Circumstances shake Juan's faith in Adriana, but later he realizes he was unjust. He kills Donati, Adriana's father is killed. Juan is imprisoned, refusing Lucretia's offer of freedom if he will love her. He escapes, finds Adriana being tortured and fights to rescue her.

CHAPTER XII.—Continued.

But he fought with the desperation of one who fights, not for his own life, but for that of one he loves. Time and time again, when it seemed that Neri had conquered him, he found new strength with which to go on.

And at last he hurled Neri, vanquished, to the floor, stripped him of the long, dark robe, and donned it. Neri's body was hidden behind a corner of the jutting wall, and Juan was completely disguised by the long robe and the hood, which he drew over his head and about his chin as Neri had worn it.

He went straight to Adriana, who, almost fainting, looked down from the rack. There was anguish in her face, the mark of ghastly suffering, but in her eyes was love of Juan.

A noise at the door, the sound of voices—Juan whirled, to face Lucretia. Would the disguise deceive her? Never before had his heart beat so madly. Had he been the only one whose safety was concerned the affair would have been a lark; he had always felt that in the game of life he had nothing to lose.

But now, when he must protect Adriana, must rescue her, for the first time he knew fear.

Lucretia glanced about the cell, which was but dimly lighted by the moonlight and the single taper which Neri had been using.

"I trust that you are caring for our!—guest, friend Neri," she remarked, mockingly, indicating Adriana with her hand. "You have made her comfortable I see. And lest she be thirsty, no doubt you have prepared the wine for her as I suggested?"

Juan bent his head, pretending to assent. In a few steps he was standing again before Adriana. Signing to her to bend her head still further, he murmured:

"Pretend to drink and to faint."

She moaned. Lucretia was at his heels when he turned.

"You are more skilled than I," she remarked. "A word from you and she moans—while to me she made no response." Bitterly she faced Adriana, laughing at the girl's distress.

"Life is less sweet now, is it not, little one?" she observed. "With your father dead, your lover imprisoned in this very San Angelo that now holds you, and doomed to die within the hour, with death waiting for you in that goblet of wine that Neri has prepared—you are less happy now than when you met Don Juan in the garden by the church, are you not?"

In his surprise at learning that Lucretia knew of that meeting Juan almost betrayed himself. Adriana flinched as Lucretia taunted her, but when she spoke her voice was steady.

"May God forgive you for your sins, Lucretia Borgia," she said, quietly.

Lucretia's scornful laughter rang through the room, but in it there was a note of uneasiness.

"I am not concerned with forgiveness," she told Adriana. "Your death interests me far more than do your prayers for the peace of my soul! Come, Neri, finish this little matter, that I may go to look on at the death of another. The execution of Don Juan should be worth watching."

Obediently Juan went to the small table on which stood a flask of wine and the small vials with which Neri had been working when Juan overpowered him.

Had the wine been poisoned? Would it be safe to give it to Adriana, or would it mean her death?

Juan poured some into the heavily chased goblet that stood ready for the death-giving potion that Neri had been preparing. Picking up one of the vials, he pretended to pour some of its contents into the goblet, although really he let its contents trickle down his wide sleeves. With the contents of the other vial he did the same.

He approached Adriana, Lucretia watching him like a cat as he crossed the cell. He held the goblet to the girl's lips.

"Drink, little one!" exclaimed Lucretia, and again she laughed. "Drink, that you may say farewell at once to this world, and wander through purgatory searching for your lover!"

Juan held the goblet steady, its rim at Adriana's lips.

"Pretend to drink," he whispered to her, and tilted the goblet so that nearly all its contents, like those of the two vials, ran down his sleeve.

If the wine had been poisoned, even if she swallowed but a little of it, she might die. And yet—there was a chance—

She sipped the wine, swallowed a little.

Then suddenly her frail body grew limp. Her head fell forward on her breast. The short, quick breaths ceased. In the moonlight her face seemed to grow paler.

Juan turned to Lucretia, threw the goblet into a corner. He flung one hand out in a gesture that implied that his work was ended.

"Never have I seen death come more quickly," remarked Lucretia, and, but half-satisfied, came close to Adriana again, and stared up at her. She laid one jewelled hand against the girl's body, touched one slender, cold arm.

"I once saw a rose turn yellow instantly and die when one of your potions had been poured over it," she said, and Juan recalled, as she did, the night on her balcony when he had poured poisoned wine over a climbing rose. "She found death as it did, instantly."

Laughter, hard, cruel, followed her words. In that moment Juan longed to kill her. But it would not be safe now to risk doing so. All his energy and thought must be kept for Adriana.

Slowly Lucretia left the cell, pausing an instant at the door to look back at the rack, where Adriana's limp body hung. Then she ordered the door opened, and a moment later Juan heard her footsteps in the corridor, followed by the keeper's.

How long would it be now until she went to his cell and found that he had escaped?

Would she suspect what had happened? Or would she think that in making his way out of the prison by the trap door in the cell adjoining his he had been drowned in the waters of the Tiber as they gushed through the opening?

At any rate, there was no time to lose. Before the sound of Lucretia's footsteps had died away Juan was working frantically to release Adriana from the rack.

At last she sank limply into his arms. So long had she been bound with outstretched arms that her limbs were cramped and stiff; she could not stand.

Juan held her close for an instant, pressing kisses on her forehead and cheeks and lips.

"My darling," he murmured. "Be brave—have courage! It will be only a little time now till we are safe."

Weakly she clung to him. But in her eyes he read the valor of her spirit, and knew that she had faith in him, love for him.

He carried her to the indow, lifted her to the sill. They must climb down t he wall, he told her.

RHEUMATIC SUFFERERS

May Obtain Relief By Enriching the Blood Through the Use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

In the days of our grandfather's rheumatism was thought to be the unavoidable penalty of middle life and old age. Almost every elderly person had rheumatism, as well as many young people. It was thought that rheumatism was due to exposure to cold and dampness, and it was treated with liniments and hot applications which sometimes gave temporary relief but did not remove the trouble. In those days there were many rheumatic cripples. Now medical science understands that rheumatism is a disease of the blood and that with good red blood any man or woman of any age can defy rheumatism. There are now many elderly people who have never felt a twinge of rheumatism, because they have kept their blood in good condition, and there are many who have conquered it by building up their weak, watery blood. The blood-enriching qualities of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills is becoming every year more widely known and the more general use of these pills has robbed rheumatism of its terrors. At the first sign of thin, impure blood protect yourself against the ravages of disease by taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They have helped thousands—if you give them a fair trial they will not disappoint you. Their value in the case of rheumatism is proved by the statement of Mr. Finlay Beaton, Blackstone, N.S., who says:—"I feel it a duty to tell you of the wonderful benefit I derived from the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I suffered untold agony from rheumatism and a run-down condition. The trouble left me incapable of work of any kind, and for a part of the time I was unable to move without the assistance of a cane. I took different medicine from doctors, and also other remedies that were recommended, but did not improve and had about given up hope of getting better when a friend advised me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I did this with the result that within four months I was as well a man as ever I had been. I can say that I was a complete wreck when I began using Dr. Williams Pink Pills and that this medicine completely built up my health. This was some years ago, and I have had no return of the trouble since. I give this statement hoping it will benefit others."

You can get these pills from any medicine dealer or by mail at 50c a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

WITNESS SAYS EVANGELIST WAS GUEST AT HOTEL

Was Accompanied By Lame Man Resembling Ormiston.

OTHER TESTIMONY.

Mrs. McPherson Allowed To Recount Events Over Radio.

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 1.— Testimony of Walter B. Lambert, a haberdasher, that he had seen Aimee Semple McPherson enter a Los Angeles hotel the morning of May 18, the day she disappeared from the Beach, and that she was followed within by a lame man, whom he thought was Kenneth G. Ormiston, was the principal enlivening feature of yesterday's session in the McPherson trial.

This statement contradicted the grand jury statement of Mrs. McPherson that she had not seen the former radio operator of Angelus Temple since some time in January. Lambert declared his identification of Mrs. McPherson was not only from personal observation of the woman, but was verified by a brief case bearing her name.

As soon as court opened yesterdaymorning, it was apparent that the hitherto friendly relations between prosecution and defence attorneys is at an end. Defence attorney W. I. Gilbert asserted that the District Attorney's office, had "clubbed" Mrs. McPherson when she testified before the grand jury.

He charged the District Attorney's office with persecuting his client. Deputy District Attorney Dennison countered with the statement that too much lenieney, and not too rigid prosecution should be charged to the state.

Reading of the grand jury transcript consumed the first hour of the session—a monotonous, but necessary procedure. Upon this testimony given to the Inquisitorial body rests the state's claim of perjury on the part of the evangelist and her mother, and the 176 closely typewritten pages must be read into the court record.

Acted on a Tip.

Following the reading, Wallace Moore, newspaper man of Santa Barbara, Calif., was called to the stand. Moore testified that he had stopped an automobile on the coast highway the day after the State charges Ormiston and Mrs. McPherson left the Carmel cottage, and had questioned the occupants, a man and a woman. Moore was looking for Mrs. McPherson, he testified, and had a 'tip' that she was in this automobile, which bore the license number registered to Ormiston. The driver became somewhat angry at being stopped, Moore said, and drove away before he could identify the woman in the car. Lacking legal authority, he could not hold them. Following Moore, John W. Wilson, proprietor of a hotel at San Luis Obispo, Calif., took the stand. Wilson identified as Ormiston a man who stopped at his hotel the night before Moore halted the unknown automobile, 100 miles farther south. The man registered for himself and his companion, as "Mr. and Mrs. Frank Gibson," Wilson said. He testified that he did not see the woman, but was sure that "Gibson" was Ormiston.

Mrs. McPherson has announced that each night during the trial she will give her version of the day's events over the radio from Angelus Temple. This has brought a storm of protest from the District Attorney's staff, who contend that her talks are colored to influence the listeners in favor of the evangelist. Judge Samuel R. Blake, however, has indicated that so far as he is concerned, Mrs. McPherson can make all the radio speeches she wishes. Crowds again made their appearance in the corridors surrounding the court-room.

During the day, however, few curiosity seekers were in evidence.

CONTEST FOR FARM CLUBS

Unique Competition To Mark Produced in Canada Exhibition.

FOUR EXHIBITS.

A unique competition between young farmer clubs is being staged in connection with the Produced in Canada Exhibition. A silver trophy and other prizes have been secured, through the energy of Charles Elliott, Chairman of the Agricultural Committee. These will be presented to the organization making the best exhibit of farm produce, and it is believed four or five will compete.

The aim of Kiwanis International for better relations between farmer and city man has been well carried out during the past summer by the Peterborough Club, and this competition is an extension of the work.

The maximum recorded temperature "in the shade" is 134 degrees Fahrenheit observed at Greenland Ranch, Cal.

Christ Church Choristers Visit Mr. and Mrs Harry Reddon.

CAMPBELLFORD, Oct. 2. — About twentyfive members of the choir of Christ church motored to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Reddom of Codrington and spent a social evening. During the course of the evening Rev. Mr. Clarke presented Mrs. Reddom with a beautiful prayer book on behalf of Mrs. Clarke and himself as an appreciation of Mrs. Reddom's services with the choir and the work of the church.

Mr. Harry Moore made a short speech and Mr. Stanley Neale, on behalf of the choir, presented Mrs. Redom with silver teaspoons and tablespoons. A nice lunch was served and a social time enjoyed by all.

Mrs. Reddom (Miss Flossie McComb) was a former member of Christ church choir and will be missed from the work of the church.

THOUSANDS OF MOTHERS USE NO OTHER MEDICINE

Baby's Own Tablets Are the Ideal Remedy For Babies and Young Children.

Canadian mothers are noted for the care they give their little ones—the health of the baby is most jealously guarded and the mother is always on the lookout for a remedy which is efficient and at the same time absolutely safe. Thousands of mother's have found such a remedy in Baby's Own Tablets and many of them use nothing else for the ailments of their little ones. Among them is Mrs. Howard King, of Truro, N.S., who says:—"I can strongly recommend Baby's Own Tablets to mothers of young children as I know of nothing to equal them for little ones."

Baby's Own Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, but do not Compel.

(Copyright, McClure Syndicate.)

The Sun in benefic aspect dominates this day, according to astrology, Mercury is adverse.

This is not an important day in planetary government, but it should be stimulating to persons who know how to stand at the helm of affairs.

There is a sign of promise to all who have ambition to improve themselves financially. There may be a leading in the right direction, even on Sunday.

The clergy should benefit under this sway, which makes for power to command attention and to lead other minds.

Religious beliefs are to be the cause of added political concern, and prejudice is to be encouraged through a rule of the stars.

Destructive force should be combated mentally for there is to be much misrepresentation regarding churches and candidates.

For a number of years, the seers point out, truth has been ignored more often than formally, and intrigue has been common, partly due to malign influences of the stars.

All who write letters today should be exceedingly careful, for Mercury is in a place read as threatening. Love missives may be especially dangerous.

There is a sign said to give promise of profit to farmers who may benefit in an unexpected manner.

Many deaths among women who have won fame are foretold. A political leader may pass before midwinter.

There is a sign menacing to the health of all women and their children, astrologers declare, and for that reason unusual care should be taken to prevent illness.

France, Italy and Germany are all to present problems difficult for American diplomats, for there is a menacing aspect to be noted.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the augury of a quiet year of fair fortune. Love affairs may be more or less uncertain.

Children born on this day should be well supplied with brains, but love affairs may be pitfalls.

FOR MONDAY OCOTBER 4 1926.

(Copyright, McClure Syndicate.)

Many kindly stars smile on the earth today, according to astrology. The Moon, Mercury, Mars and Saturn are all in benefic aspect.

It is a day in which to use all one's energies in constructive work, a time to do rather than to dream.

There is a sign read as most profitable for bankers and financiers, who may be more than ordinarily inclined to aid business enterprises.

America is subject to a planetary government making for great commercial growth which will have a lasting effect in Europe where commodities from the United States are to be more and more in demand.

The Moon is in a sign encouraging to purpose that is practical and to action based on careful planning.

Newspapers and all periodicals are subject to the most promising sway, making for tremendous undertakings and many sensational chroniclings.

Authors should benefit at this time when the stars presage much desire to read on the part of the public.

Accoprding to the seers a time is near when men and women, weary of excitement and jazz standards of living, will crave quiet and repose.

Today promises much to surgeons and medical men who are to confer new benefits on humanity. Hospitals should profit greatly from legacies.

Machinery is to be dominant in world interest, owing to extraordinary events which will set factory wheels to whirring.

Famers continue under a sway that is benefic and they should find returns from this season's crops unexpectedly good.

Food is to be much discussed in public prints, for there will be great drains on American markets from foreign sources, astrologers predict.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the augury of a year of progress.

Money should be plentiful and prosperity extraordinary.

Children born on this day should succeed by force of personality and brains of rare quality. These subjects of Libra often are inclined to be exceedingly jealous.

HER OWN WAY by A GIRL of TODAY

THE STORM GATHERS

Joan looked thoroughly mystified, as she knew nothing about Mamie's affairs and couldn't understand what it was all about.

Seeing that Mrs. Tremaine was still fussing about someone at our table, Mamie again partly arose from her chair, but Jerry thrust her back and then we three tried to go on with our dinner as though nothing had happened.

Sally Tremaine sat very still for a few moments although her lips were moving very rapidly. Her eyes were fixed upon Joan, but our hostess, God bless her, did not raise her eyes from her plate, except to speak to Jerry who, having a knowledge of all undercurrents that were flowing around the table, still played the game like the good sport he was.

Finally, Mrs. Tremaine became thoroughly convinced that none of us was going to do anything about her note. She knew that she had to make good her threat. Spasmodically she arose from her seat and although the man started up with her, vainly trying to pull her back into her place, I, who was watching with growing discomfort, saw her walk out of the dining room.

At that I breathed easier, for I thought the danger of a scene in this crowded restaurant was over. But alas, I didn't quite know the venom of the woman's scorn.

Sally Tremaine had had just enough to drink to make her reckless of consequences.

In a few minutes I saw her come back to the door with that terrible manager of the restaurant who had been so unkind to me the first night I had arrived in Chicago.

They looked across at our table and he, seeing me and apparently not seeing Jerry, grinned with triumph. I knew that now he thought he would have a chance to get even with me.

Quietly I bent toward Jerry, whose back was toward Mrs. Tremaine and the manager. "Jerry," I said, "perhaps you had better follow out to the office. Mrs. Tremaine is certainly going to make a fuss. You had better get there as soon as possible, for she has just been at the door pointing us out to your father's manager. I think he only saw me and of course he is determined to make it as hot for me as possible."

Excusing himself, Jerry left the table quietly. He went out of a door close by. I looked up to see if Mrs. Tremaine was still there and found her face contorted with hatred. I was very glad that Mamie did not see her for I knew now that Sally Tremaine intended to make such a scene that Mamie would be forever disgraced.

Mamie had been much excited over the note that had been written to Joan and I did not want her to be further annoyed.

Apparently no one at the table except Mamie and I thought anything more of the incident. Joan was perfectly happy because she had seen Mrs. Tremaine go out of the door. She did not expect her to return.

DRESS By MARY MARSHALL

Little girl's hat, showing the new trend toward height and extension at back. It is made in pink felt and ribbed ribbon.

The mode for little girls usually follows that of their mothers at a rather respectful distance. It hardly seems appropriate for the clothes of little girls to swing along in the vanguard of fashion. We view with a little amazement and alarm small hats or frocks or wraps that first conform to a new fashion. Soon after we get used to the new cut or contour and finally accept it as eminently appropriate for more tender years.

There has really been a big change in the fashion of hats. It has been evident for six or eight months, but it is only recently that millinery for little girls has reflected this change. Now the really smart sort of hat for the little girl has a high crown—often a crown that extends out at the back as well as up at the top. It didn't at first seem demure enough for childhood, but still there is no denying it is becoming. The round-topped cloche-shaped hat that little girls have been wearing seemed more demure, more generally appropriate. But once the eye becomes accustomed to the jauntier lines of the higher crowned hats these will seem more youthful.

KIWANIQUEENS HELP IN WORK

Tea Room, Hot Dog Stand and Fortune Telling Planned.

ALL ACTIVE.

Kiwaniqueens are ably supporting their Kiwanians in the Produced in Canada Exhibition. Up to date they have undertaken the conducting of a tea room, a hot dog stand, a fortune telling booth, and a candy booth.

All projects of Kiwanis Club have always had the energetic and talented support of the ladies, who work indefatigably in the interests of the splendid work being accomplished in Peterborough. It will be recalled that at the Made in Peterborough Fair in the Market hall the ladies managed a charming Japanese Tea Room and a home cooking booth.

The tea room at the Produced in Canada Exhibition will be just as charming as they can make it, and the other attraction will be of the best.

YOUR HOME AND YOU

How much sugar should we use? Most persons—Americans especially—eat too much sugar. So to the question: "How much sugar should we eat?" It is pretty safe to answer: "Less than you do at the present time." The fact that sugar is inexpensive and always available makes it quite easy to over-indulge in it.

Here is what the United States Department of Agriculture says about the use of large quantities of sugar: "Since, as scientific investigators seem agreed, the digestion of sugar is much more rapid than that of starch, assimilation and storage in the liver cannot keep pace with its absorption in the intestines if it is taken in large quantities. In this case, part of the sugar will be excreted unchanged. Not only is this excess of sugar wasted, but such an unnatural tax on the excretory organs would soon end in disease. It is also a matter of common observation that large amounts of sugar and sweetened food are apt to ferment in the stomach and intestines. This prompt refusal of the system to utilize large amounts of sugar at a time is a sign that must be heeded. It shows that the eating of sugar can easily be carried too far."

The same authority on sugar tells us that "most of the bad effects ascribed to sugar are due to its use in larger quantities than the three or four ounces a day which seem to be digested by the healthy adult without difficulty, if not presented in indigestible forms."

Taking the larger figure we would say a pound and three-quarters of sugar a week. This does not mean, however, that you ought to allow that much sugar a week per individual in your household. Fruits, ready-made cakes, wafers, milk and other foods included in the diet contain sugar that should be taken roughly into consideration. Moreover, inactive persons and invalids should have a relatively smaller amount of sugar. On account of their greater activity children may have relatively more sugar than adults, but it should be remembered that children are smaller. Striking a rough sort of estimate, then, you may come to the conclusion that one pound of actual sugar per person is enough. It is a problem that you must work out for yourself, however, as you should be guided by the amount of candy and other sweet foods that are consumed.

"BREAKFAST" in

Baker's Breakfast Cocoa

Means Something

The United States Food Standards define "Breakfast" cocoa as cocoa containing not less than 22 per cent of cocoa butter. Many cheap cocoas (which cannot be labelled "Breakfast" Cocoa) contain not more than 14 per cent or 15 per cent of butter.

Baker's Breakfast Cocoa contains not less than 26 per cent of cocoa butter, almost one-fifth more than Government requirement. The phrase Baker's Breakfast Cocoa means a pure, delicious cocoa of high quality and possessing a considerable amount of nourishment.

ONCE UPON A TIME — THE WINGED HORSE—XX — by W. J. ENRIGHT.

THE BETTER HOME - - By Jeannette

A little buzz of well-bred applause shattered the close silence with which the ladies of the Hazelton Welfare Club had honored the report of their president. As Mrs. J. W. Agnew sat down, a glow of enthusiasm swept over the room and the members broke tradition by clapping loudly. A flush of self-conscious pleasure rose to the honored lady's cheek and she thought proudly that she must have acquitted herself admirably, for the membership of the Welfare Club was the most exclusive of all the small city's many societies, and it was seldom that the ladies signified their approbation so decisively.

"Isn't she wonderful?" murmured Mrs. Featherstonehaugh Browne to her neighbor, Mrs. Rokeby-Williams, as she fastened her fur neckpiece. "Simply marvellous," returned the other. "Did you ever hear a better report of a convention?" "Never," answered her companion, and the two joined the congratulatory group which was showering adjectives on the still flushed president.

It was with the same proud feeling that Mrs. Agnew inserted the latch-key in the front door of her home a half hour later, but her pleasure was dampened slightly by the sudden realization that this was Gertrude's afternoon out, and the consciousness that dinner must be prepared by herself within a short time, if James and the family were to have their meal at the usual hour.

Confronting an empty ice-box, she went to the telephone and ordered some cold meat and the necessary supplies for a salad. "We have a hot dinner every night, anyway," she comforted her conscience, "a cold meal won't hurt them once in a while."

James did not appear to be greatly elated over the prospect as he sat down at the head of the table that evening, but his wife drew his attention from the food by describing in glowing terms her triumph of the afternoon, and the manner in which the ladies had responded to her efforts at leadership.

"Humph," said James, spearing a fragment of tough lettuce with his fork. His wife's consciousness of his lack of response was heightened by the realization that she would probably never be able to teach him to leave the lettuce foundation of his salad untouched. She sighed slightly as she considered the heavy burden resting upon her shoulders in upholding the family prestige.

"What are you doing tonight, Jim?" said Elise, the daughter of the house, addressing her brother, a dark-browed youth of seventeen, who had honored his mother's recital of her afternoon with very close attention. Elise knew from experience that Jim's attitude to his maternal parent presaged a "touch" of some sort, and she was curious to know in just what direction the resultant coin would go.

"I'm going over to Tech with Jerry and Bob," answered her brother, briefly. "Dad," addressing his father, "the classes start tonight and we have to pay the fees in advance."

"How much do you want?" enquired his father.

"The half-term costs twenty dollars," responded the lad, looking at him doubtfully.

"You'll get ten dollars from me, young man, and you can earn the rest yourself."

"But, Dad," remonstrated his son and then hesitated. His mother's toe had reached out and touched his foot under the table. He followed her upstairs after dinner and she gave him the balance of the money. Running downstairs again, he met Elise at the foot of the stairs and showed her the bill.

"Attaboy," she remarked briefly and inelegantly. "I suppose it's the same old game. What'll you do when the end of the term comes and you haven't learned anything?"

"Phunk—as usual," he returned casually, with a sidelong grin from the dark eyes. "I can't turn on the water-spout, like you do, but I'll get by with Mom somehow."

The telephone bell rang. Elise darted to the instrument and, after a few minutes' conversation, turned to her mother. "Helen wants me to go to the movies with her tonight," she said.

"But, Elise, you were out late last night. I really think——" said her mother.

"Aw, Mom, don't be mean. I haven't been out with Helen since Monday night. I'll stay in tomorrow night—honest, I will."

"All right," said her mother, slowly, "but you must be in before midnight."

"Yes, I will. You're a darling, and I don't wonder that all the women in your club adore you," said Elise, giving her mother a swift kiss.

"Applesauce," murmured her brother in her ear as she rushed back to the 'phone.

Turning from the instrument at the other end of the wire, Helen Sanders addressed her own brother. "I've got Elise for you and she said Jim was going to Technical School. That means that he's going to spend the evening playing pool at Bert's barber shop. She says he got twenty dollars for the fees. We'll get him and you buy a quart. How much does it cost?"

"Anywhere from six to ten," said her brother.

"And not gin this time, mind, Elise doesn't like it, and neither do I. Anyway, we'll get a couple more people. Perhaps Martha and Harry——"

"No Martha on any party of mine," said her brother decisively. "She's a little prune. If she saw a bottle, she'd take a fit——."

"Well, then, we'll get Myrtle instead, but she always makes a fool of herself on a party. But we can get her in a hurry and then we'll hire a car and go to Boyce's to dance. You'll have to rush, because Elise said she had to be back by twelve."

"When Jim's along, it won't matter so much," said her brother. "We can stay out until one or two and get away with it all right."

"We can if they are feeling well," said Helen slyly. "You remember what happened to Elise the last time we took her out on a party."

"Well, that was the first time. She's getting used to it now, and anyway, that was rotten stuff I bought that night."

* * *

Mr. Agnew put down his paper with a groan. "That darned telephone has been ringing all evening," he said wrathfully to his wife.

"Never mind, I'll answer it," she said. Turning from a brief conversation over the wire, she asked her husband:

"James, do you mind if I run over to Mrs. Williams' house for a little while. They're arranging all the details for a big bridge we're giving next week, and they want me to help them decide on several things."

"Go wherever you like. You'll do that, anyway," he retorted sourly, settling himself before a cold grate with the evening paper. Presently he fell into a heavy doze, waking some time later with a chilly feeling and a headache.

* * *

"Hurray, Algy's back in print again," said John Simpson, as he opened the evening paper and turned to the "funnies."

"Let's see it, Dad," said Mildred, the sixteen-year old daughter of the house, coming to peer over his shoulder at the printed page. "He's still making love to Miss "Wumpleheim." Isn't she the funny-looking old thing. A regular sheba."

"Mil," called her brother from the head of the stairs. "Come here a minute, will you?"

"Lend me a dollar, will you?" he said, in a stage whisper, as she poked her head out of the door.

"What do you want a dollar for, young man?" asked his father, suddenly, appearing from the living-room with the paper in his hand. "Didn't you get your allowance last week?"

"Yes, but it isn't enough," said the lad, coming slowly down the stairs. "Enough for what?" said his paternal parent, regarding him fixedly. "Now, look here, Sam, tell me what's it all about, anyway. You've been scrimping and saving for a month back and you've been doing all sorts of odd jobs, your mother tells me, to make a little extra. What's the big idea, son?"

"Sh-h, dad, don't let mother hear you," said Mildred, drawing him back into the living room. "Sam wants to buy a dog for Mother's birthday."

"For your Mother?" he answered amazedly. "Does your mother want a dog?"

"No, but Sam does."

"I see," said her father, nodding his head heavily. "Something on the same principle as giving me a vacuum cleaner last year at Christmas, eh?"

"Oh, I suppose so," said Mildred, snickering," but Sam wants the dog, and he has his eye on a collie pup that he can get for twenty-five dollars. He's just crazy about it."

"Well, here's the dollar," said her father. "Give it to him, but tell him if he ever takes a notion to add to the zoo that I would prefer a bird to a monkey, any day."

Presently Sam's eager steps raced down the walk, stopping momentarily to acquaint a visitor with his success in the final stage of a long campaign. The newcomer, a lad of eighteen years, came into the living-room a minute later and spoke to Mildred and her father. Presently, he and the girl went out and down the street to the moving picture theatre.

"What's on to-night?" said Mr. Simpson to his wife, who had come in and sat at the other side of the table, reading a book.

"Oh, one of those romantic affairs with Marion Davies in it," she answered placidly. "Mildred has a real crush on Marion Davies, she says. Anyway, they always go to the movies on Thursday night, and it would take a lot to make Arthur break a habit, I imagine."

"He does seem rather set in his ways, doesn't he?" said her husband, absent-mindedly, and then he laughed suddenly behind his paper.

"What's so funny about that remark?" asked his wife, curiously.

"Oh, it was just something I saw in the funny section," he answered. But he hadn't been looking at "Algy" that time. He was considering his wife's sensations the next day when Sam presented her with the collie pup. But Anne wouldn't say a word, he reflected. She would accept the strange gift with as much enthusiasm as if she had been waiting for a collie pup all her life.

. . . . He settled contentedly to consideration of the European situation and the Western grain crop.

HE LEARNED A LOT.

First City Boarder—"I learned something about farming today."

Second City Boarder—"That so?"

First City Boarder—"Yes; I found out that wireworms do not live on wire fences."

Radio in the Farm Home

A few weeks ago I took a lengthy trip by train in the eastern section of the province. Shortly after leaving Peterboro I noticed, on looking out of the coach window, a farm house in an isolated section with an aerial—pretty good circumstantial evidence that that house at least had entertainment, amusement and instruction by means of that wonderful, newly-discovered invention—the Radio.

I thought I would take note of how many other houses similarly situated had aerials. They were not many. In the villages and towns they were numerous, but in the country districts few were to be seen. It is in the open country, away from power plants, electric light wires, and trolley lines, that reception is at its best, and where the Radio should be the most appreciated. With an inexpensive bit of mechanism, the farmer can hear crop reports, prices of produce, etc., and with hints as to marketing, that would enable him to repay the outlay on a Radio in a very few weeks.

If he desires entertainment he can hear concerts of all kinds—band music, jazz orchestra, pipe organs, or even the lowly mouth organ. If he wishes something lively he can hear a barn dance at Nashville, Tenn., or Chicago, that will unlimber his stiff old legs and make him feel young again, and carry his memory back to other days when he was courting Mary Ann. He will hear songs and popular ballads about six months before they are being whistled and sung by the general populace.

If he would like to hear an epitome of the day's happenings he can tune in to half a dozen different stations and have his wishes supplied. If he is of a church-going disposition and the preacher is unable to keep his appointment on Sunday, he can get a church service to suit his particular (or peculiar) needs—Anglican, United Church, Presbyterian, Roman Catholic, Methodist Episcopal, Mormon, Christian Science, or half a dozen other sects or isms. Perhaps the old clock has run down, and he has had to set it by the sun rising. He can get the correct time to a fraction of a second (not minute) at noon, and also in the evening. He can get weather reports, not only for his own section but for every state of the union. If he likes public speaking he can hear addresses on various topics by some of the best known public men of the day—from the president of the United States and the Premier of Canada down to the more humble layman. For instance, I heard a few nights ago, General Coxey, who was very much in the lime-light some years ago, gave a most interesting address. After giving facts regarding the time he led an army of the unemployed to Washington, he concluded by a short address on what he considered the chief cause of the unrest and discontent of the present day—the octopus Interest—which, he said, would one day destroy our civilization.

If our rural resident is like most men, and has red blood in his veins, he will enjoy a fight, if it is only a dog fight. With a Radio installed he can enjoy all the thrills of a pugilistic encounter four or five hundred miles away.

But why enlarge at greater length? One hundred cents worth of entertainment is furnished for every dollar invested in a Radio.—W.P.

ROSE PLANT PESTS.

Two varieties of the strawberry rootworm have appeared within the last seven years in greenhouses in the commercial rose-growing districts east of the Rocky Mountains and have caused serious injury to the rose plants.

An excellent green feed substitute is fine clover or alfalfa hay. Pour boiling water over a bucketful, cover with an old sack, and let it steam until cold. The hens will devour this quickly.

During the sale of market cattle held at the Royal Winter Fair 1925, 319 head passed through the sales ring, of an average weight of 875 pounds, and selling for an average price of $15.16 per cwt. The 319 head of cattle weighed 279,305 pounds, bringing a total of $42,344.13.

EXTENSION WORK.

Effort in agricultural extension education has brought about the adoption of one or more improved practices on 74 per cent of the farms in a typical area selected for study by extension officials. A total of 9,833 different practices were adopted by the farms reached, or an average of 3.4 practices per farm.

Thousands of dollars' worth of damage is done annually to the apple crop by the depredations of aphis, which suck the juices out of the fruit and foliage. This damage is most extensive during the late spring and early summer, causing the apples to become deformed and knotty and the leaves to become curled and shrunken.

Hay from acid marshes is poor feed for stock, because of the lack of lime. Hay from a marsh was tested along with hay from soil rich in lime, at the Wisconsin Experiment Station last year. The offspring of dairy animals fed on marsh hay were either dead at birth or so weak that the calves died soon after birth.

Dream Castles

By C. J. Beauclerc

"We are such stuff as dreams are made of."

Judging by some of our friends, dreams must be of pretty substantial construction if Mr. Shakespeare's contention can be accepted as true, literally. But then he wrote it in "The Tempest" which is as frothy a yarn as ever poet put on paper, and most of his characters were as insubstantial as any dream that was ever inspired by Welsh rarebit as a bedtime repast.

Prospero, according to Shakespeare, lived on an island, and he had no castle, dream or otherwise, there, although perchance he dreamed of a castle, his rightful property in Naples. But Prospero had at his command a flock of dream-like creatures, led by Ariel, and was able to make others dream.

That Shakespeare was a dreamer is attested in the following, written by one Hedge:

"Dreaming is an act of pure imagination, attesting in all men a creative power, which, if it were available in waking would make every man a Dante or a Shakespeare."

Here, Shakespeare is given credit for the ability to put his dream in substantial form. The most familiar part of the dreaming of Dante, however, would be called a nightmare by any person of this present day whose imagination conjured up such scenes.

Imagination, the power to dream, is one attribute which separates man from the animals. Nowhere is it so apparent as in youth. Boys and girls play with realism based on actually thinking themselves into the parts they enact, and the bundle of rags becomes a living, breathing baby or the broom stick a bucking cayuse. "When I'm a man;" "When I grow up;" these are the prefaces of glowing descriptions of the great works to be performed and the fine houses and other possessions to be acquired.

The school boy or girl, training for his or her life work, builds rosy structures of future greatness. The embryo lawyer imagines himself a learned judge delivering weighty decisions on involved questions from his seat on the Supreme Court bench, or swaying juries as he masterfully sets forth his clients case in a trial on which the eyes of the whole world are focussed.

And his fair classmate, with her eyes fixed on a nurse's self-sacrificing career, sees herself rendering great service in an epidemic or working day and night to restore to health a patient sorely afflicted. The commendations of great doctors are already, in imagination, hers.

What junior, when he enters an office, financial or commercial, does not see himself seated inside one of that row of private offices along the side, with his name on the door and a row of buttons at the desk to summon other juniors, even as his dreams are interrupted now by one of those same buzzers.

Your future merchant prince is he who, wrapt in dreams, fails to respond when you enter to buy goods from the merchant of to-day, whose emporium he graces, and the steps to his eminence are already clearly defined.

So, through all the walks of life. Each of us has his goal and ambition waxes strong within our breasts as we set foot on the first rungs of our chosen careers. Fame, as a teacher or leader, as an orator or for wisdom for one; wealth for another; power and authority for this one; and the hope to die with a good work well done for that one; these are the stars to which we aim in youth, however far we fall below our marks.

"Love's young dream," is an expression often used most scornfully; yet, after all, who can compare with a lover as a dreamer. His imagination clothes the humble farm dwelling or the tiny city flat to which he must take his bride, with all the qualities of a fine mansion, and he resolves that nothing will be undone that may enable his beloved to inhabit such a mansion. Even though the summit of their dreams, as they sit happily together, is a rose embowered cottage, just big enough for two, their minds conjure up prosperity driven to them by the impetus of love, each craving success and affluence for the other and for the little ones whose happiness and health will be the sole end of their efforts in days to come.

So, as they sit happily discussing their future and planning for the small beginnings in which love shall cover all that is lacking, each resolves mentally to stint and economize in personal expenditure, so that there shall be money for giving the children a better start or for seizing an opportunity where ready cash opens the door to greater financial returns.

For what young man does not envision his wife sitting at the head of the table or in her easy chair, with leisure for all her interests and hobbies made possible by the success of his efforts in the business world. She, in her turn, thinks of the successes awaiting him and offers wise counsel and timely encouragement to help him reach the pinnacle to which, in her mind, he is entitled.

Perhaps, after all, Shakespeare meant that our lives are "of such stuff as dreams are made of" for all the successes and attainments of human kind come from the dreams and visions which precede all actions.

The dearest time in life—when two in love plan the home that is to house their dream-of-love-come-true.

The hopes, the dear dreams, the love that goes into the planning of the love-nest—all these bring the hearts closer and closer together and firmly knit their faith and trust.

The foundation is solidly laid by Love, and where Love is, there will you ever find happiness.

And as the home rises into the clouds, so rise the hopes of the architects—the hope of a life of Peace and Contentment and Happiness.

INTERIOR ARRANGEMENT AVOIDS WASTED SPACE

Improvement in ventilation ideas have enabled modern architects to reduce the height of ceilings without impairing health. The saving in building costs and in heating expense, on this account, is well worth calculating.

The most marked advancement is interior arrangement, however, in the growing utilization of space that otherwise might be wasted for built-in features, such as buffets, china closets, kitchen cabinets, book-cases, cosy-corners, etc. All of these things save time and steps in the housekeeper's scheme of things. They do not as a rule collect as much dust and dirt as the ordinary portable furniture, nor do they have to be moved about in order to sweep and clean behind them. Less tiresome to the housekeeper, they are also less expensive than the individual portable items which they replace.

Greater satisfaction will be assured if, before building operations are commenced, you have a preliminary set of plans made. You can then study each room, put the plans aside for a while, and then pick them up again; thus, over a period of time, familiarizing yourself with what the various rooms will be like, almost as though you were actually living in them. By so doing you will doubtless be struck from time to time with improvements that might be made, and after thinking these over, a revised set of plans can be made from which the home finally will be built.

A vacation is most exciting when you return home and find half the furniture stolen.

The wonder of the age is how a baby manages to holler so loud without using a megaphone.

A Consideration of Autumn Home Decoration

by Marjorie Howe Dixon

In the realm of good taste where decoration is concerned, all through the prevailing styles of home treatments now in vogue, one is impressed with the element of simplicity, of reserve. If a home is done in the Italian manner, which is one of the severer period styles, there are certain rigid demands to be carried out. The Spanish rooms now also popular are essentially simple in treatment. And as faor Early American homes, in these, surely, all excess ornamentation is done away with.

Decorations Are Sophisticated.

And with them all, there comes about quite naturally a sort of childish note. It is perhaps a paradox, to say that the present sophisticated home decoration is really childish in character but such is actually the case. One finds a room with a background of naive prints against gay paper, almost foolish in design, with a tiled floor in checkered pattern. Delightful built-in shelves lined with small patterend paper, chintz chair coverings, the use of Toby jugs and ruffled curtains primly tied back, all suggest things that appeal to children. There can be no argument about the fact that in the rush, the excitement, the tremendous activities of present living, these things are easier to live with, than the over-decorated, muchly be-ribboned styles of the eighteen-nineties, or the terrible objects created during the black walnut, hair cloth, and red plush era that preceded it.

Among the suggestions for an Early American treatment of a bed room is a pleasant arrangement centered about a tester in Toile de Jouy over a field bed. Under the arched drape of the tested two square pictures hung on the wall, each with a prim little embroidered flower, to greet one on awakening. Toile de Jouy was repeated in the rose window drapes edged with a pleated ruffle and tied back.

Fireplace Is Unusual.

With its unusual fireplace and convenient secretary desk one would want to spend more than the usual sleeping hours in this room. The fireplace was most attractive with a decorative map of Belgium, set in a square panel above it. A horizontal panel above the fireplace opening, containing two oval portrait silhouettes seemed exactly right above Colonial brass andirons.

Close to the narrow secretary stood a comfortable wing chair and a lamp, with, just a bit beyond, a low table with an old chocolate set of gold and white ready for one's breakfast.

Since "She" who would use this room would want a bit of a glass, a vanity table, waited in another corner. The center leaf of this, raised, disclosed a set of boxes for trinkets and powder with the lid containing an old mirror.

If one used these suggestions for a bed room, in an apartment, a dining room of the same period would be equally effective. Let us imagine this one, fitted out with maple. Cane seated Hitchcock chairs might group themselves about an oval gatelegged table. A large square of rose linen would make a good cover for this table with a border of wool stitching in bright colors. A similar mat of rose linen might lie on the serving table.

Row of Rose Glasses.

On this latter a row of rose glasses might stand along the back with a pair of pewter sconces above. Flat tallow candles could sit in the sconces, the backs of which should be circular and highly polished to act as reflectors.

Curtains of rose sprigged chintz might be tied back at the windows, with a scallop of pink, binding each of these. The combined effect would produce a direct simplicity and cheerfulness that would reflect the Colonial spirit sincerely.

In a country house one can imagine an Italian living room with its massiveness and severity. A heavy oval topped table in oak would make a centerpiece, with arm chair upholstered in leather and studded with brass nails. Light for this room would be arranged with sconces and tall wrought iron torcheres. Monks cloth would lend itself to drapes, and panels of embroidery would make appropriate wall hangings. Small tables, three legged chairs with carved backs, could be scattered about where convenience suggested.

Italian Dining Room.

An Italian dining room can be a colorful spot in spite of its native severity. Red cushions in a window niche, brass panels on the wall, a tooled leather screen with brass nails, decorated in gilt and red lacquer, these will provide color, not to mention a portrait print with much red, and a red background to the carving on the buffet, the tall china cabinet and the side table. Above the buffet a round framed map of tinted gessow would supply more color.

In a Spanish dining room with its low arched doors, the tones of brass and dull red were the leading color notes. Chairs of red tapestry with gilt fringe stood about a long refectory table. A Gothic window made a background for a tall iron fern stand. Wrought iron was repeated in the fire place equipment standing in an interesting Spanish fireplace with its overhang built out from the corner. Carved walnut was used for a ches- and china cabinet. Over the buffet hung a portrait with a pair of twisted brass torcheres below.

If one cares not for the period rooms, one may choose from many modern pieces or sets, and produce a most successful arrangement.

Fixing Up the Bed Room.

A bed room with a swan motive carried out in each piece, comes to mind. It was modern and of no definite period. A huge rag doll dressed as Pierrot, lounging in a love seat, did suggest a French influence, but then so did a few modern French prints. Twin beds with a swan at each corner of the foot board, covered themselves with mauve spreads. At the foot of each a small stool was placed, covered with green needlepoint. On the dresser a glass shelf stood either side a mirror supported at each corner by a swan carved in walnut. A similar pair of glass shelves stood on the vanity case, each holding a lamp.

At any season it is difficult to generalize about style tendencies whether in clothing or home decoration. One thing however seems noticeable this year and that is the prevalence of cushions, especially small ones. There are gingham, chintz, embroidered or quilted cushions scattered about—each chair with one or two. Small round or heart shaped pink cushions, all frilled with lace like valentines, are lying on the beds. Bits of old patchwork quilts are centers for others. One may devise almost any shape or use any material and find it is correct, just so it is small. Here again is the childish note repeated, as was mentioned before.

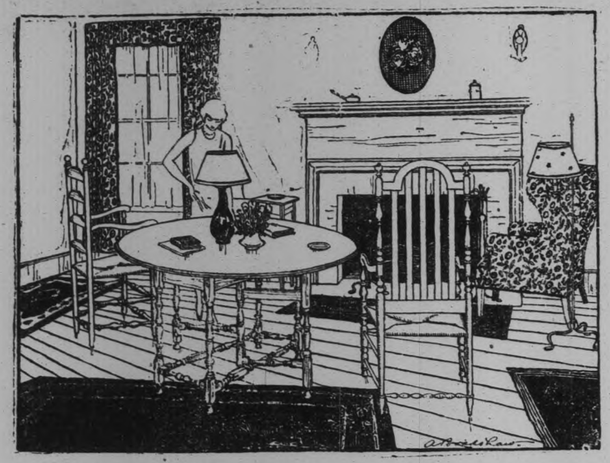
If you go a step further, and make a delightful squirrel of gingham, or a fat cat, or a frisky bunny, it will find many uses. Dad can fall over it, and mother can use it for an elbow rest. And small brother will find it excellent for emphasis in an argument, being just the right size to throw at any one "when words fail you."

Weeds are killed easiest before they are sown. In other words, sow clean seed. Home-grown seed should be run through a seed-cleaner to take out weed seeds. You can take most of 'em out of the seed grain that way.

Alfalfa hay is one of the best and cheapest feeds for brood sows in winter. Let the sows eat right from the stack if that is the handiest way. Another good way is to feed it in a rack.

The Family Circle

By Annette Bradshaw



In every real home there is one particular spot where the family gathers in the evenings for an hour or so of conversation, relaxation and solid comfort.

And for some reason—which probably had its inception back in the pioneer days of our forefathers—this corner of the house is simply furnished. Only such articles of furniture as add to the restfulness and ease of the occupants should be admitted.

Perhaps the most essential factor in the appeal of this room is the old-fashioned fire place. If two brass andirons and two or three small logs of wood are to be had, then the success of the assembly hour is assured.

The mantel-piece is of simple design and suggests a logical resting place for an old briar pipe or other homey comforts that more elaborate mantels forbid.

And next in importance are the chairs. Note the simple beauty of the chairs shown in the illustration. Especially popular are the woven cane or cord bottoms. The idea of the "occasional chair" which has been in vogue for some time permits each member of the household to recline according to his personal preference without any offense to Fashion's decrees.

The upholstered chair that sits in the corner, near the fire and within the glow of the pretty reading lamp is undoubtedly the seat of honor. Note the fact that the draperies which adorn the big casement window are of the same pattern and material as that of the upholstered chair. Cretonne may be used for this purpose. For this is a day of gorgeous colors and flaming designs in the world of cretonne. And women with artistic taste and some skill as a cedorator can take a bolt of cretonne and convert an unattractive little room into a haven of beauty and comfort.

The rugs on the floor harmonize with the hangings and with the color of the walls and wood-work. In this case delft blue predominates, while many touches of bizarre color-combinations creep into the scheme. The floor for the most part is bare, and has the delight of a natural finish.

The shades for the bridge lamp near the chair, as well as the one upon the table were made at home by the skilful hands of the housewife. So much has been written during the past eighteen months on the making of lovely lamp shades that every housewife who possesses that sort of talent knows how to add this charming bit of decoration to her rooms.

And the table—the table where father, mother, brother, sister and all the little folks come with their writing, their reading, their work or their games—must surely be a substantial, reliable sort of article. In the first place it is properly supported.

And in the second place it is constructed of good dependable hard wood—Maple, walnut or oak. And its pleasing tone fits in so completely with that of the room, that the table actually radiates a glow of satisfaction and friendliness.

An Attractive Dining Room

A total absence of massive furniture, heavy rugs and bric-a-brac characterizes this delightful dining room.

Most inviting, it is in its simplicity, its absolute cleanliness and its suggestion of coolness.

The table and chairs shown here are of the early American period. Apple wood or hickory can be used to wonderfully good advantage and the natural wood finish adds to the beauty of the design.

The gate-leg table that has come into such universal favor may be of exquisite wood that is beautifully carved, or it may be of soft pine or other popular inexpensive material that is painted to suit the taste of the possessor.

The advantage of the gate-leg table lies in its manifold uses. At meal time, it is the board around which the family gathers. In the evening it is used as a reading table or as a sewing table or as a study table for the children.

Note the substantial, yet graceful chairs, with their cord seats and the back that curves just enough to make one wish to sit awhile and enjoy its comfort. The chair bottoms may be made of woven cane, as many of the present day dining room chairs show.

Since the table and the chairs comprise the furniture in this pretty dining room, the housewife has an opportunity to expend her love of the beautiful and all of her artistic taste in securing or producing the most appealing and effective ones.

The bare polished floor with its small rugs at pleasing intervals adds its note of coolness and cheerfulness; while the casement window opens wide to let in the breath of the great outdoors. Not the least of the room's attractions are the growing plants in the window and on the table.

And perchance the mornings or evenings are cool there is the open fire to make the cool days happy ones.

WHAT'S IN A NAME?

DEBORAH

The quaintest of Puritan names is Deborah. The quiet efficiency which seems to represent puritanical standards is best represented in the bee, and Deborah is the feminine personification of that busy little gatherer of honey, since the name comes from a verb meaning to hum or buzz.

A perfect aroma of sanctity surrounds Deborah from her Biblical source also, for the Deborah who is best recorded in history was the faithful nurse of Rebekah, wife of Isaac the Patriarch. So lamented was Deborah when she died, that the tree beneath which she was buried was known as the oak of weeping.

Since Deborah is derived from a word meaning to hum or buzz, the name came, in later times, to signify eloquent. For that reason, it is believed that a child christened Deborah will be gifted with exceptional fluency and persuasiveness.

Unfortunately, Deborah's association with the English Puritans and their unpopular doctrine, caused the name to be much ridiculed by the literary lights of the times, and brought it into usage more by the peasantry than by the higher classes. Its appearance in this country with the advent of the Puritans, however, brought it speedily into permanent vogue.

Amber is Deborah's talismanic jewel. It will ward off ill luck and disease, and is said to promote bodily strength. Saturday is Deborah's lucky day and 1 her lucky number.

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK?

By Edson R. Waite Shawnee Okla.

THAT the grocery advertisements carry a wealth of suggestions for the housewife.

THAT they should be read carefully. Suggestions for your table needs await you there.

THAT they are money savers; they tell you what is on the market.

THAT the up-to-date grocer is enterprising. If it is on the market he keeps it in stock and quotes prices in his advertisements.

THAT why worry about what to select for the next meal? Let the grocery advertisements help you; they will make it easy for you.

THAT they always carry a wide selection of quotations on good eats.

THAT the grocer who advertises takes much pride in the quality of the articles of food he buys and he is as careful in his buying as the most painstaking housewife.

The modern grocer knows that quality variety, service and price is the paved road to success. He travels that road.

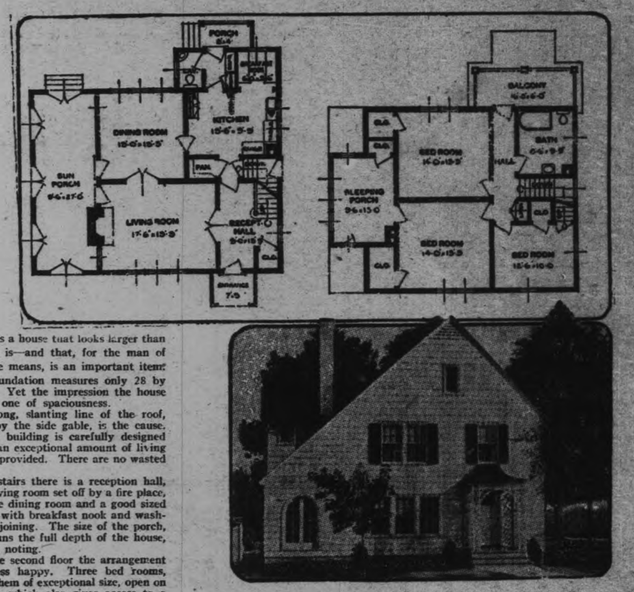
A Small House That Looks Big



Here is a house that looks larger than it really is—and that, for the man of moderate means, is an important item.

Its foundation measures only 28 by 28 feet. Yet the impression the house gives is one of spaciousness.

The long, slanting line of the roof, set off by the side gable, is the cause. And the building is carefully designed so that an exceptional amount of living space is provided. There are no wasted corners.

Downstairs there is a reception hall, a long living room set off by a fire place, an ample dining room and a good sized kitchen, with breakfast nook and washroom adjoining. The size of the porch, which runs the full depth of the house, is worth noting.

On the second floor the arrangement is no less happy. Three bed rooms, two of them of exceptional size, open on the hall, which also gives access to a small balcony. In addition there is a commodious sleeping porch, which can be reached from two of the bedrooms.

GOLD!

While the average housewife is still, in many ways, a jack of all trades (and a master of not a few of them)the modern home with its many up-to-date devices clearly reflects the fact that we are living in an age of specialization and division of labor. This division of labor has brought in its train, the exchange of goods between those who undertake the separate acts of production.

Early in the process of the division of labor, media for exchanging products came into use. Barter —the direct exchange of goods— was the first method used, but was discarded as soon as the most primitive stages were passed. Recourse was then had to the use of any commodies in general use,—which served possably for the exchange of products. Hence in various stages of civilization the most diverse commodities have been used to obviate the inconveniences of barter. In Homeric times, the value of things was often stated in terms of oxen or of female slaves. For a considerable time in the history of the colony of Virginia, tobacco served the purpose. Wampum among the Indian tribes and early settlers fulfilled the uses of money and in certain African tribes, tiny axes (called biker) still serve as a medium of exchange. Furs, salt, tea, cocoa, have at different times been used similarly among other peoples.

But throughout most of the period over which the historical record extends gold and silver have been the main constituents of the circulating medium. Historically, the chief reason why gold and silver became the money metals, was that they satisfied the craving for adornment. The glitter of the bauble is the origin of the monetary use of the precious metals; precisely as glass beads and scarlet cloth are even now serviceable for barter by explorers, who venture into those regions where savagery is still unaffected by the conventional ways of civilized man.

Other qualities contributed greatly to making gold and silver the money metals. They are singularly free from liability to deterioration. Rust does not affect them. They retain their lustre with unusual constancy. Most important of all, they have proved to be sufficiently abundant for money use, without being found in such great quantities as would cause them to be no longer prized. Any metal that is fairly scarce might be selected for monetary use. Iron was used in the early days of Rome. Copper was employed to a considerable extent in later times; and indeed, is still in use, although under conditions that deprive it of much significance. In the course of time, iron and copper have both been produced in such great quantities, that they have ceased to have any special value for their rarity. Gold and silver remain comparatively scarce. Though common and very widely distributed, they are rarely to be found in large amounts, or under conditions that enable great quantities to be secured at small cost. While as a result of modern, improved methods, they are now produced in quantities that are enormous compared with those of other centuries, their annual production is still very small in comparison with that of iron or other metals. On the whole, therefore their scarcity and high cost have continued, and their usefulness for exchange unchallenged by lesser metals.

For long centuries the two metals were coined freely and were used interchangeably. This was known as the double standard. But with the vast development of industry and finance during the nineteenth century, difficulties experienced under the double standard caused resort to another mode of using the two metals. Gold was made the only freely coined metal and the only one having complete legal tender quality, and silver, though still in use is not coined freely, but in limited quantities and solely for use as a minor coin. This method was first systematically followed by Great Britain, which country adopted the single gold standard in 1816. It has since been adopted by all the civilzed countries and today, although little gold actually passes from hand to hand, the paper money which we use as a substitute, is nevertheless part of the system which is based on gold. Paper money is a promise to pay in specie; but in the case of government paper that promise is more often broken than kept. It is this failure to pay in gold, the sum written on the face of the note, that is the root cause of the depreciation in the currency of so many of the Continental European countries.

The relationship of the housewife and the world's supply of gold was well illustrated by the sudden increase in the annual output of gold that followed the Australian and Californian discoveries of 1850. With this increase in the world's stock of gold came a sudden jump in the prices of foodstuffs and necessities.

A sudden rise in prices also marked the phenomenal increase in gold production in the closing years of the nineteenth century. In the period 1886-99 the annual production had been on the average something like $100,000,000. Production doubled before the close of the century; it quadrupled within five years, thereafter. The total production of gold was greater during the twenty years, 1891-1910, than it was during the forty years 1850-90; and during each of these periods, it was much greater than it had been during the centuries that elapsed between 1493 and 1850. This vast increase in the stock of gold was the foundation of the rise in prices which took place in the Western nations, and indeed the world over, during the first decade of the present century.

FASHIONS

By HEDDA HOYT

(Written for the United Press)

NEW YORK, Oct. 1 .—(United Press).—The modern girl is disgustingly aware of her half-formed charms at all times. She goes upon the streets shirtless and brasierless with nothing between her and the wind except the thin layer of frock which is fitted to display her figure.

Girls of today may be less vain than their ancestors who spent hours in placing a spit curl or a court plaster. They may be less flirtations. And they lack the flase ties and one is forced to think that fashioned girl less companionable than the modern flapper. But—some of the so-called nice girls feel no more shame in displaying their figures than does the common woman who inhabits the darker corners of the town.

Flat-chested females of all ages seem to be proud of their deformity each one believes that her own particular brand of legs and bust are of unusual interest to the world. Of course, the leg is of no more interest than an arm nowadays and there is no real reason to differentiate between these appendages. But when women insist upon draping a half-yard of material over a three-quarter-yard of rear hip-line and upon going without even the confining element of an undershirt one is forced to admit that their charms are repugnant to refined people.

Obscene styles merely make one grotesque and they are never beautiful. Despite the part that women are taking in athletics and outdoor sports it seems that we are becoming a race of mal-formed females unfit for the duties of wifehood or motherhood—females who are proud of displaying our own deficiencies.

The girl or woman who is built as nature intended her to be built is perhaps the only one who dresses within the limitations of modesty. She can't compete with the figure of a twelve-year-old girl, and this seems to be the most desired figure today, so she wears clothing that does not outline her well-formed body. She actually is forced to become ashamed of her perfection.

Venus de Milo would be out of luck amid the butless, hipless girls of today who run to out-of-porportioned legs, ankles, and necks, devoid of all marks of womanhood. She wouldn't be able to get a dress to fit her and would be forced to wear a brassiere in order to cope with the boyish figures of her contemporaries. It isn't the well-developed woman who is disgusting these days. It's the puny underdevolped spindle-shanks who seem tofeel so thankful that they have any claims at all to womanhood that they schemingly strut their bodies without underwear leaving nothing to the imagination.

MISS HOUSEKEEPER SAYS

Quickest way to make your old furniture look terrible is to buy a new chair.

SHORT STORY

It was a glorious, crisp, winter morning and Lorna thought she had never seen the trees sparkle so brilliantly with ice diamonds nor the unbroken pathways through the woods more exquisite.

She had crossed the ferry from Manhattan to the Jersey side with her paints and brushes and lunch and was happily engaged in sketching the snowbound bit of forest to which her well-shod feet had led her.

So deep was Lorna in her exquisite bit of painting that it drew near noon hour before she realized it. Then she put down her brushes, rubbed the paint from her fingers and sought, among her extensive paraphernalia for the thermos of hot coffee and generous chicken sandwiches she had brought.

She gasped and grew positively famished—in fact, she probably turned pale. "My lunch! My beautiful lunch—I've left it on the ferry or somewhere. Oh—what shall I do? I'm so hungry I could eat steak and onions and pudding."

Her common sense came to the rescue and she reasoned with herself, "Now if I lived in that little house over there and some poor, starved artist asked me for a bite of lunch I wouldn't think it a bit strange and would be glad she had had the sense to ask for it."

A moment later Lorna had followed up her impulse. In passing she had seen a white-haired lady sitting beside the window in the house beside the forest and Lorna felt she would appreciate her plight and give her a cup of coffee.

She rang the bell and a second later a big man stood in the doorway. Lorna shrank back and blushed even above the glorious color that was already in her cheeks.

"Oh—I'm sorry—"

"What's the idea?" laughed the man. "What are you sorry about?"

Lorna smiled. "Well—I saw that little lady in the window and thought she might—might let me have a bite of lunch. I have been painting in the woods since early morning and I left my lunch on the ferry boat—I'm positively starved."

"The Mater will be only too happy," said the big man, "she gets a bit lonely—come on right in." He led the way into the sunny living-room where the little lady sat knitting. "Mother —here is a really sensible and human young lady," and he told his mother the tale of the lost lunch.

Mrs. Woodward laughed softly,— "Come here, my dear, and let me have a look at you. I can't walk just now as I turned my ankle. My poor son has had to wait on me—"

"And I've bothered you more," Lorna answered.

"On the contrary," put in Jack, "I am going to bother you—I can't for the life of me make a drinkable cup of coffee. Perhaps——"

"I can make heavenly coffee," laughed Lorna, "and my name is Lorna McWade and I'm out studying art and my home is in Nebraska."

"Our name is Woodward," the mother said quickly smiling, "and now that we are all acquainted, take off your coat and hat and you two skip off and forage for lunch—I'm getting hungry myself now that I think of it."

When the three of them were sitting together at a well-laden lunch table Lorna entirely forgot her lost shoe box except to feel a bit glad she had left it somewhere.

"My son is looking for a companion for me while I have to be a bit of a cripple—he has had to remain away from the office for a day or two, and, while he's been a perfect angel about it, I know he frets a bit."

"Not a scrap," retorted Jack, "only I can't say I'd ever make a perfect lady's maid."

"I'd simply love to stay with you —if you would like to have me," ventured Lorna shyly. "I live in a boarding house in New York and it gets so tiresome. I wanted so badly anyway to finish my sketch while this lovely snow lasts and make a sunset from the same spot."

"You're a dear child," said Mrs. Woodward, "but it wouldn't seem fair to let you companion an old lady like me and do all the work."

"I should simply love it. Sometimes I feel as if I could plunge into most anybody's kitchen and get all mixed up with flour and sugar and butter and just have a grand time cooking—I miss it terribly—boarding houses are nightmares to one who loves a home. May I stay—here?" She smiled so winningly that Mrs. Woodward agreed without another thought.

"Is there some way I can let the people know you will not be back to night? We don't want a search party getting us up out of our beds this cold night," Jack laughed. And getting the telephone number from Lorna he went whistling out into the hall.

And when Lorna snuggled down in a great comfortable bed that night with sweet smelling lavender lingering on the sheets and wrapped in one of Mrs. Woodward's warm flannel night gowns, she thought she had never had a happier experience. The pink handled toothbrush that Jack had bought her made her laugh softly, and she went off into smiling dreams. In the morning she would pop out of bed, rush down to the big kitchen and make some waffles and coffee and the three of them would laugh and chat. Lorna's very dreams were disturbed by the longing for that hour.

In the next room Jack slept soundly but ever and anon a slip of a girl seemed to stand on the threshold of his life and in her hands were paint brushes and in her lovely eyes a great love for him.

JACOB'S LADDER

(By Matilda Stapley.)

Everly was a business man and not in the least temperamental but the artistic side of his nature would burst out now and again in spite of him.

It had been bursting forth of late in the form of interior decorating. His own three bachelor rooms were having a regular overhauling as regards color scheme. Saturday afternoons and Sundays Everly spent on a small ladder he had purchased from an impoverished artist, stencilling birds and beasts and what not above the molding of his library.

He was having a happy time until he nearly broke up his anatomy as well as the ladder on which he was perched. They came down together in a heap. Everly fortunately unbroken but the ladder faring much worse. It was a light, steel and wood affair daintily built for the use of artists.

He was frightfully annoyed for he must now cease painting and he was in a delightfully artistic mood. He had just put a very colorful tail on a pheasant and finished a grand leathery looking elephant.

He sat down in a peeve. It was early on the Saturday afternoon and the day and to-morrow would be wasted. Everly was no good at mending things—even a broken heart that he supposed he was carrying about within him. In his early and very tender years he had loved a maiden who had thrown him down to marry a richer man and since that time he had left girls strictly alone.

He picked up the paper idly, thinking more of his loss than what he was reading, but suddenly he saw an advertisement that caught and held his interest. It read: "Jacobs ladders mended, invisible and good as new. N. Carter."

Everly popped out of his chair, took down the address, which was not far away, folded up his ladder and began to whistle.

The day had brightened. He hoped Carter would be in on Saturday and could mend the ladder while he waited.

Everly realized that he had never heard of a ladder known as Jacobs' but he supposed that anyone who could mend ladders could assuredly mend this one.

Everly went by taxi to a side street where he supposed Carter's shop would be, taking the ladder with him.

The taxi drew into the curb but not in front of a shop. It was one of the lesser apartment buildings.

"Well," supposed Everly, "Carter evidently does a little home work." He got out with his ladder and collided in the dark hall with a young lady about to ascend the stairway.

Everly drew back to let her go up ahead of him but she turned a too pale face toward him and asked that he go first.

"I'm very tired," she said, "and want to take my time going up."

So Everly went on with his ladder but was vividly conscious all the way of the lovely girl toiling up behind him. He wanted to wait and give her an arm up the stairs.

However, he arrived at the fourth floor and saw the name "Carter" on the doorplate. The girl was just behind and stood on the same landing while he put down his ladder and rang the bell. "Are you wanting N. Carter?" asked she.

"Well, yes— I want to get this ladder mended. I read his advertisement in the paper and——"

Nan Carter grasped the stair rail lest she lose her balance.

"Oh!" she said, and then repeated the bright remark. "Oh." Then she smiled at him. "If you let me—I will open the door for you. I live here."

Everly and his supposed Jacob's ladder followed her in to a cheery apartment. His thoughts now worked upon the supposition that the girl had an indigent husband who worked at home mending ladders while she toiled in the city. He felt that he would dislike the husband. He waited a moment or two while Nan divested herself of a small hat, thereby releasing a glorious riot of titian hair.

She was more at home and felt she could handle this delicate situation without wounding him, now that she had him safely within the apartment. She had dreaded turning him and his ladder away in the hall.

"Will you be frightfully hurt at me if I laugh at you?" she asked.

"By Jove," said Everly swiftly, "I don't think I care what you do to me." And he quite meant what he said because he knew without the slightest doubt that this girl was one day going to be Mrs. Everly and come to live where the frieze of birds and elephants reveled.

"Then come here and let me show you a Jacob's ladder."

Everly drew nearer the girl and also to her sewing basket heaped high with silk stockings. She picked one up and, running her hand down it, showed him a real Jacob's ladder.

"That's the kind I mend," she laughed softly.

Everly burst into a regular guffaw that must have been heard in the next apartment, and after a moment of very happy laughter they found each other's eyes and their glances lingered.

"It only shows you," said Everly breathlessly, "how more than guileless I am where womenfolks are concerned."

The girl looked up at him with great tenderness in her eyes.

"Some 'womenfolks' long to know just such men as you," she said.

"I'll manage that, in this case," Everly told her.

FOR AUTUMN COMFORT - By Annette Bradshaw

For Autumn Comfort and Ease Supreme This Cheerful Corner of a Modern Home Is Herewith Commented.

Naturally the open fireplace where old-fashioned andirons hold the crackling, burning wood is the center of attraction. For city dwellers perhaps the gas-log will be substituted for the real wood fire. But either may have the background which this cleverly designed chimney back supplies.

The tiled hearth is particularly pleasing, and corresponds in tone with the general color scheme of the room. Nothing is more essential to the dignity and comfort of a room than the harmony which can only be secured by maintaining the color motif in walls, floor finishing and furnishings.

The floor fashioned of wide boards and stained in the natiural color calls for the rug of plain design and brilliant color. The woven rag rug of former days is also most attractive for this kind of cosy corner.

Note the built-in cupboard, which instantly appeals to the housewifely instincts. Picture the score of small conveniences that may be hidden snugly away within the generous space of that cupboard in the wall.

Worthy of especial note are the adornments on the wall that give the room a touch of hominess and cheerfulness.

The home-maker of artistic ability can design her own pictures for the wall. Or lacking the time or the talent, she may find in the art stores of today decorations of unusual charm and beauty.

When the first Fall frost appears that is the time when members of the family begin thinking most about home; and that is when the words "Autumn comfort" sound like music to the ear. A fire, a light, an easy chair, a book upon the table there. And near at hand a couch for rest—and home's the place we love the best.

The Letter Of The Contract - by Basil King

CHAPTER XXXI.
"By Accident."

Edith still looked bewildered. "I don't know what you're talking about, either of you. What is it? Why are we here? Am I one of the two women to be saved?"

"The suggestion is," Chip said, dryly, "that Mr. Lacon wouldn't oppose your divorcing him, while my—my present wife might divorce me; after which you and I could marry again. Isn't that it, sir?"

The older man nodded assent. "It's well to use plain English when we can."

Chip measured the Wetterhorn with his eye. "Rather comic the whole thing would be, wouldn't it?"

"Possibly," Lacon replied, imperturbably. "But we've accepted them comic in the institution of marriage, we Americans. It's too late for us to attempt to take it without its possibilities of opera bouffe."

"But aren't there laws?" Edith asked.

Again Lacon's lips glimmered with the ghost of a smile. "Yes; but they're very complacent laws. They reduce marriage to the legal permission for two persons to live together as man and wife as long as mutually agreeable; but the license is easily rescinded—and renewed."

"But surely marriage is more than that!" she protested.

Lacon's ghost of a smile persisted. "Haven't we proved that it isn't?—for us, at any rate. Hesitation to use our freedom in the future would only stultify our action in the past. If we go in for an institution with qualities of opera bouffe isn't it well to do it light-heartedly?—or as light-heartedly as we can."

Edith looked at him reproachfully. "Should you be doing it light-heartedly?"

"I said as light-heartedly as we can."

"What makes you think that Chip and I—I mean," she corrected, with some confusion, "Mr. Walker and I —want to do it at all?"

"Isn't that rather evident?"

"I didn't know it was."

Chip glanced at them over his shoulder. It seemed to him that Lacon's look was one of pity.

"You met in England," the latter said, displaying a hesitation unusual in him, "why, something—something more than pleasure, as I judge; and—and Mr. Walker is here."

"Yes, by accident," she declared, hurriedly. "It was by accident in England, too."

CHAPTER XXXII.
Happiness Refused.

He lifted his fine white hand in protest. "Oh, I'm not blaming you. On the contrary, nothing could be more natural than that you should both feel as I—I imagine you do. You're the wife of his youth—he's the husband of yours. The best things you've ever had in your two lives are those you've had in common. That you should want to bridge over the past, and, if possible, go back—"

"We've burned our bridges," she interrupted, quickly.

"Even burned bridges can be rebuilt if there's the will to do it. The whole question turns on the will. If you have that I want you to understand that I shall not be—be an obstacle to the—to the reconstruction."

"Don't you care?"

"That's not the question. We've already assumed the fact that my caring—as well as that of a certain other person whom Mr. Walker would have to consider—is secondary. It's too late to do any thing for us—assuming that she understands, or may come to understand, the position as I do. Your refusing happiness for yourselves in order to stand by us, or even to stand by the children—the younger children, I mean—wouldn't do us any good. On the contrary, as far as I'm concerned, if there could be any such thing as mitigation—"

He broke off. Seeing the immobile features swept as by convulsion, Chkp took up the sentence: "It would be that Edith should feel free."

"Precisely."

"And her not feeling free would involve the continuance of—the penalty."

"In its extreme form." He regained control of himself. "That the penalty should be abrogated altogether is out of the question. Some of us must go on paying it—all four of us, indeed, to some degree. And yet, any relief for one would be some relief for all. Do you see what I mean?"

The question was addressed to Edith specially.

"I'm not sure that I do," she replied, looking at him wistfully. "Is it this?—that, assuming what you do assume, it would be easier for you if I—I went away?"

"I shouldn't put it in just those words. I only mean that what's hardest for you is hardest for me. I couldn't hold you to the letter of one contract if you were keeping the spirit of another. Do you see now?"

CHAPTER XXXIII.
"The Letter Killeth."

She didn't answer at once, so that Chip intervened: "Hasn't some one said—Shakespeare or some one—that the letter killeth? It seems to me I've heard that."

"You probably have. Some one has said it. But He also added, as a balancing clause, 'The Spirit giveth life.' That's the vital part of it. To find out where the spirit is in our present situation is the question now."

She looked at him tearfully. "Well, where is it?"

He rose quietly. "That's for you and Mr. Walker to discover for yourselves. I've gone as far as I dare."

"You're not going away?" she asked, hastily.

He smiled at them both. For the first time in Chip's acquaintance with him it was a positive smile. "I think you'll most easily find your way home!"

"Oh, no! Wait!" she begged; but he had already lifted his hat in his stately way and begun to walk back toward the hotel.

Then came the bliss of being alone together. In spite of everything, they felt that.

Edith leaned across the rude table, her hands clasped upon it.

She spoke rapidly, as if to make full use of the time.

"Oh, Chip, what are we to do?"

He too leaned across the table, his arms folded upon it, the extinct cigar still between his fingers.

He gazed deep into her eyes. "It's a chance. It will never come again. Shall we take it?—or let it go?"

"Could you take it, if I did?"

"Could you—if I did?"

She tried to reflect. "It's a spirit," she said, haltingly, after ?—minute. "Oughtn't we to get at that he just as he said. We've had so much of—of the letter."

"Ah, but what is the spirit? How do you get at it? That's the point."

She tried to reflect further—further and harder and faster. "Wouldn't it be—what we feel?"

"What we feel is that—that we love each other, isn't it?—that we love each other as much as we did years ago—more!—more! Isn't that it?"

She nodded. "Yes, more—oh, much more! And yet—"

CHAPTER XXXIV.
The Question of Lily.

"Yes?" Walker said, eagerly.

"Yes? And what, then?"

"And yet—oh, Chip, I feel something else!" She leaned still further toward him, as if to annihilate the slight distance between them. "Don't you?"

"Something else—how?"

"Something else—higher—as if our loving each other wasn't the thing of most importance. I thought it was. All these years—I mean latterly—I've thought it was. When we met in England I was sure it was. Since we've been back with him I've felt that I would have died gladly just to have one more day with you, like those at Maidenhead. But now—oh, Chip, I don't know what to say!"

"Is it because he's been so generous?"

She shook her head. "Not altogether. No; I don't think it's that at all. He's more than generous; he's tender. You can't think how tender he is—and always has been—with me and with the children—That's why I married him—why I thought I could find a sort of rest with him. You see that, don't you?—without judging me too harshly. He's that kind. I'm used to it with him. He can't help being generous. I knew he would be when I told him we'd met in England. I told him because I couldn't do anything else. It was a way of talking about you—even if it was only that way. But, oh, Chip, if I left him now and went back to you—"

"Yes, darling? What?" He spoke huskily, covering both her hands with one of his and crushing them. "If you left him now and came back to me—what?"

She hurried on. "And then there's —there's the other woman. We mustn't forget her. What's her name, Chip?"

"Lily. She was Lily Bland."

"Yes, yes; of course. I knew that. And she loves you? But how could she help loving you? I'd hate her if she didn't. Curiously enough I don't hate her now. I wonder why? I suppose it's because I'm so sorry for her. She's as noble in her way as—as this man is in his."

"That's just what I thought. I used to see her when she came to our house to call for the children. It never occurred to me that you'd marry her! If it had I don't know what I should have— But—it's no use going back to that now. What would you do about her, Chip, if we decided to—take the chance that's opened up—?"

"I don't know. I've never thought about it. I—I suppose she'd let me go—just as he's letting you go—if I put it to her in the right way."

"And what would be the right way?"

"Oh, Lord, Edith, don't ask me. How do I know? I should have to tell her—the truth."

"And what would happen then?—to her I mean."

"I've no idea. She'd bear up against it. She's that sort of person. But then, inwardly, she'd very likely break her heart."

"Oh, Chip, is it worth while? Think!"

"I am thinking."

"Is it the spirit? That's the thing to find out."

He shook his head sadly. "I don't know how to tell."

"But suppose I do? Would you trust to me? Would you believe that the thing I felt to be right for me was the right thing for us both?"

"I think I should."

CHAPTER XXXV.
"The Spirit Giveth Life."

"Well, then, listen. It's this way. You know, Chip, I love you."

She had his hand now in both of hers, twisting her fingers nervously in and out between his. "I don't have to tell you, do I? I love you! Oh, how I love you!

"It's as if the very heart had gone out of my body into yours.

"And yet, Chip—oh, don't be angry! —it seems to me that if I left him now and went back to you I should become something vile. It isn't because he's so noble and good. No, it isn't that. And it isn't just the idea of passing from one man to another and back again.

"We have turned marriage into opera mouffe, we Americans, and we might as well take it as we've made it. It isn't that at all. It's—it's exactly what you said just now; it's like a man swimming away from a sinking ship, and leaving his wife and children to drown, because he can't rescue them.

"Better a thousand times to go down with them, isn't it? You may call it waste of human material, if you like, and yet—well, you know what I mean. I should be leaving him to drown. and you'd be leaving her to drown. And, even though we can't give them happiness by standing by, yet it's some satisfaction just to stand by. Isn't that it? Isn't that the spirit?"

He withdrew his hand from hers to cover his eyes with it. He spoke hoarsely: "It may be. I—I think it is."

"But, if it is, then the spirit of the contract is different now from what it would have been—well, you know when. Then it meant that I should have stood by you—forgiven you, if that's the word—and shown myself truly your wife, for 'better or for worse.'

"I didn't understand that. I only knew about the 'better.' I didn't see that a man and a woman might take each other for 'worse'—and still be true! If I had seen it—oh, what a happy woman I should have been today, and in all these years in which I haven't been happy at all!

"That was the spirit of the contract then, I suppose—but now it's different. It confuses me a little. Doesn't it confuse you?"

"Perhaps."

"Let me take your hand again; I can talk to you better like that. Now —now we undertaken new responsibilities. We've involved others. We've let them involve themselves. We can't turn our back upon them, can we? No. I thought that's what you'd say. We can't. The contract we've made with them must come before the one we made with each other. We're bound, not only in law, but in honor. Aren't we?"

He made some inarticulate sign of assent.

"And I suppose that's what he meant by the 'penalty—the penalty in its extreme form' that we've put ourselves where we can't keep the higher contract, the complete one, we made together—because we're bound by one lower and incomplete, to which we've got to be faithful. Isn't that the spirit now, don't you think?"

Again he muttered something inarticulately assenting.

"Well, then, Chip, I'm going." She rose with the words.

IMPROVED METHODS MARKS ALTITUDES

Bench Marks Being Erected in Public Parks.

No treasure is buried under the brass bolts placed by the Geodetic Survey of Canada to indicate elevations above sea level, technically called bench marks; nothing is to be found under them and the bolts themselves are of practically no commercial value. Notwithstanding this there are people who do not consider these facts and curiosity has been responsible for many of these bolts being dug out and destroyed. Yet a mark of some sort which can be found when wanted by surveyors and engineers must be established; otherwise all the careful work of the levelling engineer would be lost. Therefore, the endeavour of the geodetic engineers of Canada and other countries is to improve the permanence of their bench mark monuments.

The causes which destroy bench marks may be classified as (a) mechanical, such as injuries from man and animals, frost, etc., (b) chemical, such as weathering, vegtation and decay, etc., (c) physiographical changes, such as movement of rivers, drifting sand and encroachment of the sea. By far the most destructive agency is man. In addition to pure curiosity and vandalism, there are many other deeds of man which result in bench marks being sacrificed. Roads are widened, railways are double-tracked, buildings are altered.

The precise leveller has been incessantly on the alert trying to solve the problems of placing bench marks where the chances of destruction would be minimized. In the early days of the Geodetic Survey of Canada experience taught him that the best safeguard against vandalism was an inconspicuous bench mark. Thus for years the standard bench mark of this Survey was a small bronze bolt three-quarters of an inch in diameter and three inches long, set vertically or horizontally in a permanent structure. Such a mark set flush with the surface of a stone foundation is certainly not conspicuous and, if left alone, should be permanent for the life of the building. Indeed after the weathering of a season or two it is often impossible to find, unless the seeker is in possession of the exact description. However, this inconspicuous bench mark, while it did secure a longer life, yet by its inconspicuousness was in a fair way of defeating the main object of this survey, namely, service. To overcome this objection the use of this type of bolt was discontinued some years ago, and was replaced by a bronze tablet, 3 inches in diameter, with the following words in bold type, "B. M. Geodetic Survey of Canada, Ottawa."

This was a step forward, but it was found necessary to go further in making bench marks more permanent. For many reasons precise levels in Canada, with very few exceptions, have been run along railways. Experience of the older surveys has shown that the passing of trains produces an incessant state of vibration, and this in the course of years results in a progressive vertical movement of an adjacent bench mark. In other words, railway routes, while being the most suitable for precise levelling, are not the most suitable lines for bench marks.

Last season the Geodetic Survey inaugurated the erection of a new class of bench mark of the very first order. These monuments by their location and conspicuousness have proved more useful to the public and through their permanency will increase the life of the Canadian precise level system. It is not intended that these fundamental bench marks will replace the standard bench marks, which are placed every three or four miles along every line of levels. It is anticipated, however, that ultimately one of the fundamental monuments will be found in every city and in most of the larger towns of the Dominion.

Unusual care is exercised in the selection of location, and whenever possible these fundamental bench marks are located in public parks. The Survey of India, which has been in operation for well over a century, reports that their most permanent ground points have proven to be those on memorial monuments. When erected in a public park, permission is first obtained from the proper local authorities, and the municipal engineer is requested to maintain a general supervision over the bench mark for its future welfare. One regulation regarding its location is that it shall not be built within a half mile of a railway.

The monument is made of concrete reinforced with steel rods. From a massive circular base six feet in diameter and a foot thick, a pier rises until it projects a foot above ground level. The top of the pier is 18 inches square. The base of the monument is placed six feet below the surface, except when resting on bed rock, in which case this depth may be less. Each fundamental bench mark has a surface mark which is the standard tablet placed in the top of the pier, and also a subsurface mark, being a tablet placed in the top of the base and accessible from the surface by means of a tile pipe. The top of this tile is, however, not exposed at the surface. If, for any reason, the surface bench mark is injured, the elevation is not lost, but can be restored by means of the subsurface mark. To render these conspicuous bench marks more useful to the public, and to avoid delay in writing to Ottawa, their elevations above mean sea level will be stamped in legible figures on the tablet.

AN IMPROVISED FUSE.

If a fuse is burned out and no spare ones on hand, wrap a piece of tinfoil around the old fuse and replace it. Be sure, however, that there is no short circuit to drain the batter or do other serious damage.

SHORT STORY

BY WAY OF EXPERIMENT

(By P. J. Young.)

At the age of forty-five Raymond Crawford had "made his pile" in Wall Street—and was a nervous wreck. The doctors told him that unless he forswore stock tickers, read the sporting page instead of the financial news in the papers, and went to live in the country where he could hoe in a garden and delve in a flower-bed, his days were numbered —and the numbers did not run very high. Raymond was scared; and being a bachelor with no wife to consult, betook himself to the quiet—and rather aristocratic—village of Evansdale, and began raising dahlias and green peas.

In a year's time his doctor told him that it was safe for him to "snap into the game again." But Raymond had acquired a taste for country life and stayed on in Evandale. Then came Mrs. C. Nicholson Parsons. When she leased Rosebank Place it was taken for granted that she was a widow—and a rich one, too—for it took money to live in Rosebank Place. But Mrs. Matteson Childers, who was the first to call, broadcasted the information that Mrs. Parsons had a husband absent in Hong Kong on business and a fifteen-year-old daughter at boarding school. Of the previous life of Mrs. Parsons all that Mrs. Childers had elicited was the fact that she had lived in New York.

"She has a picture of her daughter in the morning-room," reported Mrs. Childers, "a beautiful girl—very like her mother." Everybody followed the lead of Mrs. Childers and called. Mrs. Parsons gave dinners and teas in a manner which showed that she was a mistress of the social arts.

The men all pronounced her, "a most attractive woman." As for Raymond Crawford he was always dangling about her. At first the women said: "What a pity Mrs. Parsons is already married—what a suitable husband Mr. Crawford would make her!" Then they began to say that "he ought to be ashamed of himself"; and then that, "he ought to be ashamed of herself—a married woman!"

The summer began to wane and Mrs. Parsons' boarding-school daughter did not appear in Evandale on a visit to her mother; the explanation that she was "visiting friends in Maine" was not satisfactory. Mrs. Addison Calkins, who had a second cousin who was a missionary in Hong Kong, wrote to him asking if he knew anything of one C Nicholson Parsons; and got a letter back saying he had never heard of such a person. Mrs. Daniel Warburton, calling at Rosebank Place one day, picked up from the floor, while awaiting the appearance of Mrs. Parsons, a birthday card on which was written: "To Clara on her thirty-first birthday"—and put in her pocket for evidence. This did not agree very well with a fifteen-year-old daughter. Mrs. Lathrop was sure that Mrs. Parsons had given "Mildred" as the name of her daughter, while Mrs. Higginson was equally positive that she had spoken of her as "Genevieve." In short, from an admired ornament of Evandale society, Mrs. Parsons became a dark and sinful mystery.

People invited to her dinners now sent "regrets"—or nothing at all. With the men Mrs. Parsons suffered no diminution of popularity—but their manner toward her, somehow, seemed to have suffered some subtle change. Only Raymond Crawford remained the same.

"Clara," said he one day when he came upon her sitting alone in a little summer house on the Rosebank grounds crying softly, "don't you think you have carried this little adventure of yours far enough?"

"Oh," she gasped, "so you knew me all along! I knew you, of course; but thought you had forgotten me."

"Forgotten you?" he replied. "Not much! If I had that picture of yourself at fifteen—just as you used to look when I was in your father's office and came out of week-ends to his Long Island place—it would have recalled Clara Liscombe to me."

"Oh, I thought it was going to be such fun," sighed Clara. "I was tired of playing the part of an heiress of mature age; a single woman hemmed around with conventionalities. I imagined that a married woman would be allowed a larger liberty. So, by way of experiment, I came down here under an assumed name and—and everybody was splendid at first and then, for some reason, I can't imagine what, they all turned perfectly horrid—all except you."

"Let me see," mused Raymond, "when I used to see you out on Long Island you were fifteen and I was thirty: quite a difference in our ages! But now you are thirty-one and I am forty-six. Why! we are, practically of the same age. So you wanted to see how it would seem to be a married woman? Well, suppose you try it in reality—no make-believe, this time." And he took her unresisting hand.

"What shall we tell Mrs. Childers and her crowd?" asked Clara half an hour later.

"Tell 'em the truth," replied Raymond, "that we have loved each other since you were a little girl. The joke's on them."

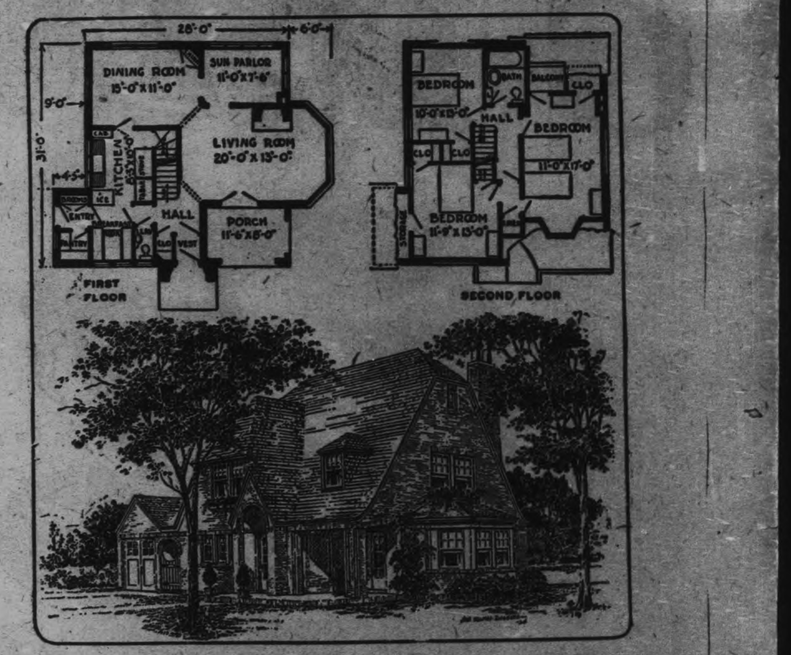
SLOPING LINES LEND CHARM TO COTTAGE



It is easy to make a small home of the cottage type very attractive to look at; but it is hard to make it comfortable and convenient to live in at the same time.

It has been done in this case, however, as a glance at the illustration and floor plans prove.

The living room extends all across the front and opens through French doors into the sun parlor at the side —an extremely spacious arrangement that provides ample living space and gives an effect of even greater openness. The fireplace is where it should be, in the center of the side wall.

The attached garage is a feature that is sure to be popular. No need here for wading through mud or snow to get at the car; no need for tracking dirt and slush into the house when you return from a drive. Note how handy the clothes-closet is in relation to the garage entrance.

The dining room is airy and roomy, opening into the living room through an archway and into the kitchen via a swinging door. There is plenty of space in the kitchen but not too much.

Upstairs there are three bedrooms, a bath and a sleeping porch. Sleeping accommodations are ample for a good-sized family, but the house is not so big that the housewife will be forever busy in caring for it.

All in all, this cottage leaves very little to be desired.

UNCLE WIGGILY

Today's Bedtime Story

By Howard R. Garis

(Copyright, McClure Syndicate.)

UNCLE WIGGILY'S BUNCH OF BEETS

"Do you know what you are going to do today, Uncle Wiggily?" asked his lady rabbit wife one morning.

"Why, yes, I think so," replied the bunny, playfully twinkling his pink nose upside down to show how jolly he felt. "I am going to look for adventures, as I always do."

"And you are also, if you will be so kind, going to get me a bunch of beets," said the rabbit lady, slyly giving her husband a dig in the ribs so he could laugh out loud. "I need a bunch of beets, as we are going to have company for tea."

"I shall get the beets after I finish looking for an adventure," replied Mr. Longears, and so he hopped out of his hollow stump bungalow and was soon traveling over the fields and through the woods.

All of a sudden Uncle Wiggily heard from the bushes a cry of surprise and a voice shouted:

"Help! Help! O, please stop it! You are shooting my house all to pieces!"

"Ah! I think I am on the track of an adventure," whispered the rabbit uncle. "Some of the bad chaps are shooting a friend of mine. I will arrest them."

But when he looked through the bushes he saw only a spider lady, clinging to her cobweb, which was shaped round, something like a cart wheel. And, standing on a log, not far away, were two little Squiggle bugs, shooting with arrows from their bows at the spider lady's web.

"Ho, little Squiggles! You shouldn't do that!" chided Mr. Longears.

"O, but please, Uncle Wiggily," buzzed the small Squiggler, "the cobweb makes such a dandy bullseye target to shoot at!"

"We just can't help whizzing arrows at it," buzzed the big Squiggler.

"No matter!" said Uncle Wiggily, serious-like. "A house is a home, even if it is only a cobweb for a spider lady. Here, I'll set up for you another target at which you may shoot." With his pencil Uncle Wiggily made a black circle on a piece of white birch bark, and then he drew rings around the circle, making a regular bullseye, and the Squiggle bugs shot their arrows at that.

"Thank goodness you came along in time!" sighed Mrs. Spider, as she set to work to spin new strings of filmy thread to mend her web where the bugs' arrows had gone through. "Thank you, Uncle Wiggily."

"Pray do not mention it," begged the bunny, though he hopped on, not a little pleased with himself, and soon he went to a farm and bought a bunch of beets for his wife to cook and serve to the company.

But on his way home with the bunch of beets, Uncle Wiggily saw Jollie Longtail, the mouse boy, with Squeakie Reckie, the cousin mouse, looking very sad.

"What's the matter?" asked the rabbit gentleman.

"We want to play football but we have none to play with," said Jollie, nibbling a hard piece of cheese he took from his pocket.

"Ha! Ha!" laughed Uncle Wiggily. "I think one of my beets will make a good football for mice." So the bunny chewed the green tops of his bunch of beets, and gave one of them to Jollie, stuffing the green leaves back into his pocket. "My wife will use those for greens," said Uncle Wiggily, as the mice kicked the beet football.

Then he hopped on and pretty soon he saw Mrs. Moo, the cow lady, and she was looking very sad. She said she was hungry.

"Here, take the rest of my beets!" offered the bunny and he gave them to Mrs. Moo, hopping away before she could thank him.

Next Uncle Wiggily met Aunt Lettie, the goat, and she bleated.

9-29

Uncle Wiggily met Aunt Lettie.

"Oh, where can I get some greens for Uncle Butter? He is ill and Dr. Possum says he must have some greens."

"Here you are!" cried Uncle Wiggily, and he gave the lady goat the green beet tops from his pocket, hopping on before she could thank him. And when Uncle Wiggily reached his bungalow, he had no bunch of beets for his wife. He started to tell what had happened but she laughed and said:

"Ha! Ha! made a mistake! I didn't mean beets at all! I meant carrots! Oh Uncle Wiggily hopped back to the farm and got a bunch of carrots. And nothing happened to them, so the company had something to eat.

So this teaches us that sometimes mistakes turn out happily. And if the gold fish doesn't splash water in the rag doll's eye and make her think it is snowing, I'll tell you next about Uncle Wiggily's tail light.

THINGS TO KNOW IN BUILDING AND OPERATING A RECEIVER.

For practically all sets an aerial of 100 feet, including the lead-in, is best. The wires can be strung between a tree and the house, between garage or fence and house, from chimney to chimney, from clothes pole to clothes pole or roof, between two houses, from roof to window, from top floor to ground floor, in the attic or in a room.

Poor contacts in a jack cause noise. See that the spring makes firm contact and that the contact point is not corroded. If so, brighten it with fine emery cloth.

If you hear a continuous whistle in your set, try placing a .001 mfd. fixed condenser across the plate and grid terminals of the first AFT.

GREASE THE HEADLIGHT RIMS.

Quite often a headlight lens is broken, or a color chisel and hammer become necessary to remove the rusted headlight rim, when necessary to replace a lamp or clean a reflector. This can be avoided easily if a little grease is rubbed on the rims the next time they are removed.

BERLIN TAXI RULES.

New taxicab regulations in Berlin admit to traffic large motor cabs, small motor cars and motorcycle cabs. All of the cabs must carry the same type of taximeters, but while drivers of large motor cabs can demand the full indicated charge, those of small cabs can ask only 75 per cent and drivers of motorcycle cabs only 50 per cent.

New York Yankees Favorites To Win World Series

FANS TO SEE WORLD SERIES FILL HOTELS OF NEW YORK

Crowd of 65,000 Expected To Throng the Yankee Stadium To-day.

YANKS FAVORITES.

Pennock and Herdel Slated For Pitching Staff in Opener.

NEW YORK, October 2 (Canadian Press).—The New York Yankees and St. Louis Cardinals, victors in two of the most desperately fought campaigns in major league history, come to grips to-day in the opening conflict of their battle for baseball's world's championship.

Seldom have two more brilliant or closely matched contenders faced each other in the season's climax, and few, if any, have had a setting as spectacular as that in prospect for this struggle of intersectional rivals.

With fair weather promised, the Yankee stadium, baseball's greatest amphitheatre, is expected to hold a record shattering crowd of close to 65,000 fans for the first act of the 1926 diamond drama.

All reserved seat tickets for the opening game, as well as for the second contest on Sunday, were sold out two days ago, and an unprecedented rush was anticipated early this morning for the gates leading to the unreserved sections of the stand that accommodate some 36,000 spectators.

With the pre-battle spirit aroused by an unusual influx of fans from all parts of the country, ticket speculators reaped a rich harvest with the supplies they were able to obtain. Prices were quoted as high as $25 for single opening game seats and from $50 to $100 for three-game strips covering the first, second and sixth contests scheduled here.

New York's enthusiasm has been sharpened to an unusual degree, accustomed as the metropolis has become to having a hand in the world's series, but the main detonation of excitement is anticipated in St. Louis, where the thrill of participation in the modern classic for the first time will accompany the continuation of hostilities there on Tuesday.

The Yankees, starting the series on familiar grounds and before a home town crowd, have been installed slight favorites, with odds of 6 to 5 figuring in most of the wagers reported last night, but among critical observers the outcome is regarded as a toss-up. Close to $1,000,000, it was estimated, already has been wagered on the series with neither contender lacking for support.

The two southpaw stars of the rival contenders, Herb Pennock of the Yankees and Willie Sherdel of the Cardinals, are slated for the opening game's test of pitching skill. Miller Huggins, diminutive bench pilot of the Yanks, made known his choice definitely after a final workout at the stadium yesterday. Rogers Hornsby, brilliant young playing manager of the National Leaguers, did not commit himself finally, but virtually conceded that Sherdel would draw the initial assignment.

Both teams have come to the decisive barrier after campaigns that found them alternately mediocre and brilliant, but always possessing the winning punch at critical moments. Both boast fine twirling corps and attacks that have frequently reached terrific proportions, stimulated on the one hand by Babe Ruth's mighty mauling and on the other by a clouting cast headed by Hornsby and Jim Bottomley. Defensively, the Cardinals have displayed more consistency, but to offset this the Yanks have the benefit of greater experience in the first of world's series conflict.

Behind the bat the National Leaguers have an advantage, however, that may prove a vital factor. Their burden is placed upon the shoulders of one man, Bob O'Farrell, but his work throughout the pennant campaign stamped him a star of such magnitude that his manager singled him out as the team's most valuable performer.

The Yankees are handicapped by the loss of their leading backstop, Benny Bengough, who suffered a broken arm in one of the season's closing games. His absence has put the chief burden upon Hank Severeid, veteran of many years, who will take up the opening game assignment and share the rest of the catching responsibility with Pat Collins.

Hornsby and Huggins both have a capable corps of hurlers to back up the expected opening sharpshooting of their southpaw stars. Provided Sherdel and Pennock go the route in the first game, the next game is expected to find Urban Shocker, spitball ace of the Yankees, opposed to the veteran Grover Cleveland Alexander in a tussle of right-handers.

Dutch Ruether, veteran portsider, and Waite Hoyt, crack right-hander, are the Yankees' other chief pitching assets, while Jesse Haines and Flint Rhem, both right-handers, are relied on by the Cardinals for front line duty.

In Hornsby and Ruth, dynamic and outstanding personalities of the rival teams, the series will bring together two of the greatest performers the game has ever known. Ruth has had one of his best all-around years, and if he is able to strike his stride, Yankee chances will be boosted.

Hornsby, leading his team to a pennant in his first full year as manager, has been handicapped in his individual exploits by illness and injury. The death of his mother a few days ago also has increased the burden of the Cardinal Chieftain. He is playing through the series because of her dying wish.

Line-Ups.

The probable line-ups for to-day's opening world's series game:

St. Louis—Douthit cf; Southworth rf; Hornsby 2b; Bottomley 1b; Bell 3b; Hafey lf; O'Farrell c; Thevenow ss; Sherdel p.

New York—Combs cf; Koenig ss; Ruth rf; Meusel lf; Gehrig 1b; Lazzeri ss; Dugan 3b; Severeid c; Pennock p.

Time of game: 1.30 p.m. eastern standard time.

Umpires—George Hildebrand and William Dineen, American League; Wm. Klem and Henry O'Day, National League.

RIVAL PILOTS AND YANKEE STADIUM WHERE FIRST TWO WORLD SERIES WILL BE HELD

Here's the Yankee stadium, where the 1926 world series opens to-day. The first and second tilts will be played at the American League stronghold and the sixth and seventh if that many are necessary. Inset shows the two rival managers, Miller Huggins of the Yankees and Rogers Hornsby, Cardinals.

MIDLAND YOUTH DEFEATS MUNRO IN HIGH JUMP

Potts Is Also Bested By Donald in the Pole Vault.

SPRINTS ARE FAST.

Large Crowd Attend Ontario Athletic School Boy Field Day.

MAPLE LEAF STADIUM, Oct. 2—After enjoyable weather in the morning, gathering clouds and a cool wind off the lake made the weather conditions for the afternoon's sports anything but pleasant at the Onatio Athletic Commission school boy field day meet. But the bad weather did not dampen the enthusiasm of the multitude of contestants or affect the competition which was very keen in all events, especially in the sprint and jumps. One of the big features of the meet is the excellent showing made by all the athletes proving that the time spent on them by Coach Walter Knox and his assistaants has not been wasted.

In the high jump the performance of Harry Shanacy, Midland, who defeated Alex Munro of Oakwood Collegiate, Canadian champion, stood out. He went over the bar at 6¾ inches, an even inch below Munro's mark made in the Canadian championships at Port Arthur. In the intermediate pole vault Donald of Ottawa defeated Bolts of Toronto, last year's winner. The height was 5 feet 7 inches.

In the sprints W. Finlayson of Midland won the senior 100 yards with the excellent time of 10.2 seconds. Wakeford of Toronto won the intermediate. Rosa Grosse, Florence Bell and Jean Hales won the sprints of girls.

The work of the Midland contingent has been outstanding, and their two sterling men, Shanacy and Finlayson, have been placed in all events they have competed in.

RUGBY OPENS WITH PROMISE OF REAL COMPETING TEAMS

New Players in Training For Places of Retiring Veterans.

SOME COMING STARS

Students, Big Four and Provincial Leagues Out For Busy Season.

TORONTO, Ont., Oct. 2.—(By Canadian Press).— Rugby football has again claimed its place on the sporting calendar in Eastern Canada and hundreds of players are now battling for positions on their teams. Gridders in the Interprovincial, Intercollegiate and Ontario Rugby Football unions have been training intensively for the past few weeks and all is in readiness for the opening of the season prope today, save in some cases for the final selection of teams. No game are scheduled on this date in the Intercollegiate, the students schedule getting under way a week later, but in the Interprovincial, Hamilton will meet Montreal in the latter City. Camp Borden and Hamilton and University of Toronto and Balmy Beach will clash in the Ontario Union.

Interest has always been high in the popular Fall pastime but a fillip has been given the game this year by the fact that Queen's University no longer has a monopoly on the Dominion championship title. Ottawa Senators, starting last year as a rather poorly thought of aggregation, swept through the interprovincial schedule, gave Queen's their first beating in 27 starts in the Dominion semi-final and a week later vaniquished Winnipeg Tigers in the final. Senators' success in developing a team good enough to whip the mighty Queen's has imparted encouragement to the others and each is out this year to emulate the champions' splendid accomplishment.

Ottawa Against Tigers.

When Ottawa meet Hamilton Tigers in their opening game on Oct. 9, they will field practically the same team that swept them to victory last Fall. There were rumors at the opening of the season of wholesale desertion from the Ottawa ranks but this has not materializedand only two of the regulars—Jerry Timmis and Vincent Manahan, both middle wings—will be absent from the line up in the opener. Timmis is now residing in the United States and Monahan has gone to the Queen's University team in the Intercollegiate. Joe Miller, Harold Starr and Charlie Lynch, all of whom were at different times reported as having decided not to turn out with Senators, have all reported for practice and will continue with the champions through the season.

Joe Tubman, the sensational kicking half, who won renown when he out-booted "Pep" Leadley of Queen's in the semi-final last year, will be in his regular position, teaming up with Connell and Miller on the half line. Emerson will probably get the flying wing assignment. Lynch is a certainty for quarterback and Bruce will be at snap. Humphrey and Curry are likely looking candidates for the inside wing positions. Pritchard and Kirby seem to have clinched the middle and Starr and Young are almost sure of being placed at outsides.

Argos Rounding Out.

The Argonauts were rated rather highly last Fall but finished in the cellar. This year they have Harry Batstone, formerly of Queen's, to strengthen their backfield and are rapidly rounding into a good team. The Double Blue have big gaps in their wing line and it is a major task filling the vacancies left by the departure of Jimmie Douglas from middle and "Cap" Fear and Gordie Thom from outsides.

Hamilton Tigers are well supplied with players this year and hope to develop a championship outfit from the wealth of material available for their two teams—one in the Interprovincial and one in the Ontario Union. The senior teams opens the season on October 2, in an engagement with Montreal while the O.R.F.U. aggregation start off against Camp Borden at home on the same date.

Montreal Enthusiastic.

After several years of disheartening failures, the Montreal Amateur Athletic Association hope this year to have a good team to contest the Big Four. Montreal are without the services of the late Jeff Russell who was a mainstay of their team in former years. But the candidates are enthusiastic and it is hoped to field a team which although possibly without outstanding stars will excel in team play and develop capable new players.

Queen's University it seems, will be as strong as ever this year. Several smart players have registered at the Kingston Institution and Coach Hughes is rapidly rounding his charges into form.

Wright, the clever Hamilton Rowing Club backfield and Harvey Reist, of Galt, are recent acquisitions of his calculated to improve the outfit and most of last year's players, with the notable exception of Batstone and Thomas, will again play with the Intercollegiate champions.

Toronto and McGill.

University of Toronto have plenty of seasoned material for their teams in the Intercollegiate and O.R.F.U. and as a result the student supporters are confident the Blue and White will go far this Fall. There is an excellent morale in the Varsity camp and the griders are rapidly developing that cohesion so necessary for machine-like precision in the execution of plays.

Featuring McGill's training has been the turnout of a number of United States college players. Coach Frank Shaughnessy has been a long time seeking a championship team for the Montreal University and his chances this year look no better than usual. It is doubtful whether Ralph St. Germain, of Ottawa, McGill's stellar kicking half, will return to University this year. He may play with Ottawa.

Balmy Beach, the O.R.F.U. champions are prepared to field a good team this season but in addition to the opposition provided by Varsity Seconds and Hamilton Tigers seconds they will face a strong twelve in Dave Harding's Camp Borden Airmen. The Camp Borden team are working hard at their training, practicing morning and night for some weeks. Besides Harding they have Gibbs of Hamilton and Carr-Harris of Kingston to help them along. Rugby experts are inclined to think that Harding will field one of the strongest teams in the senior ranks this Fall.

Balmy Beach have many of their championship team of last year and are developing a number of new youngsters. Despite the strong opposition they will face they are confident they can overcome it and are headed for the championship.

Inside Sporting Dope

By A WiseCracker

Mister Sporting Editor:

They ain't a heavy budget of sporting dope for me to discuss this week, though I'm glad to write to you to thank all the customers for the fine way they come through to help the Royals go to Merritton Sat. The kids deserve it, and I'm sure tickled to see the fans show their appreciation of the youngsters' fine work by making it possible for the Royals to do their stuff up at Merritton.

The little world serious has been about the only sporting event of interest in these parts, and while evidently the Toronto fans refuses to be coaxed along to pay the higher prices for this set of games, the Maple Leafs and them Louisville Colonels certainly has been dishing out a real classy brand of ball. Every contest so far has been tighter than a beach beauty's bathing suit, and the pitchers has sure been stingy with their hits. The 1st 3 battles went overtime, with Mister Howley's talent coming from behind each time, so that the customers surely got their money's worth even if they did halfta dig up something extra to see the fracases. Mister Howley's pitchers is a tough gang of gunners for any man's team to run up against, and with the flying start they has got them Leaves should win on the bit.

I ain't exactly picking St. Louis to win the big serious, but they carry all the good wishes of the Wise Cracker connexion in their clash with the Yanks. I for 1 would like to see them cop. It should anyway be a real serious, and owners of radio sets is likely to find themselves very much popular the next few days.

Well, Mac, I'll slip along.

Sportfully yours.

A. WISE CRACKER.

Hornsby's Former Managers To Watch Him Play To-day

NEW YORK, Oct. 2 (United Press) — Rogers Hornsby, star second baseman and manager of the first National league pennant winning team St. Louis ever has had, will be under the observing eyes of two of his former managers in the world series against the New York Yankees starting today.

Miller Huggins, manager of the Yankees, who discovered him will watch him in the role of a teacher and a rival manager, and Jack Hendricks, who managed him in 1918, will look on him and write about him for the United Press.

Hendricks, manager of the Cincinnati Reds, who chased the Cardinals right up to the wire, acted as a special correspondent for the United Press on the world series last year and his analytical articles were some of the best features that were written on the series.

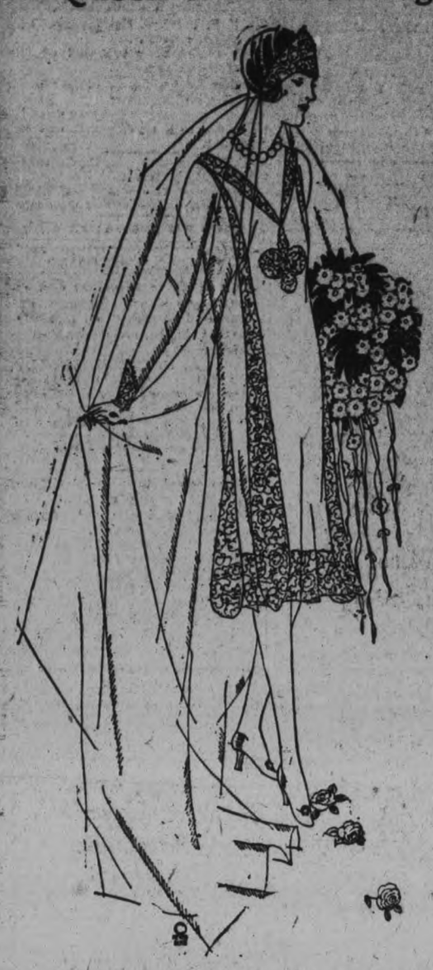
Queen of Peterborough



To be Queen for a Day! To have a fairy wave her magic wand and bring for our use automobiles and servants, beautiful dresses and a Queen's gown, the homage of the town and a sparkling crown—have we not all dreamed of it? Day dreams, and dreams in the stillness of night when we have release from the affairs of the day's business.

And now Kiwanis Club, usually so practical in its work, is to turn Good Fairy and wave its magic wand over some lucky girl in Peterborough. Just as we are sure all good fairies must, Kiwanis Club has planned ahead for its work, and already there has been arranged a wonderful day for the Queen of Peterborough. She will have all the thrill of shopping to her heart's content, she will be the centre of a pageantry that will mark her coronation as something unique in her life; she will be filmed, and her picture will be broadcast all over Canada and United States.

If there is any girl you would like to see holding this wonderful prize, support her and assure her coronation by buying her tickets for the Produced-in-Canada Exhibition now. They cost $1 for seven tickets, and represent a substantial saving over purchase at the door.

And you are helping some girl's dream come true.

Better comfort. Better prizes. Admission only 25c. Net proceeds for relief only. 2d-80-3288.

GREATER SERVICE.

Pastor of Murray Street Church Extends an Invitation.

He desires to double the attendance at the evening Sunday Services and also to steadily increase the morning congregation during October and much longer. He wishes to do this by securing the attendance of people who are without a church home. Since there are several thousand in this class in our City there should be a good response with out interference with any other church. If you are in the class named, you are specially invited. We want you to have a church home and the help that regular attendance and active interest will give. All our seats are free. If you purpose coming regularly we shall be glad to assign sittings.

He does not promise you the greatest sermons in the City or even as good as you can hear in other places. He can assure you, however, that the sermons will be an honest effort to proclaim and interpret the abiding facts of the gosel. He cannot say that the brightest services in the city will be in Murray Street, or the best singing or anything along that line. He believes that every church in the City is seeking honestly to serve the higher interests of the people.

If this invitation, which everyone will recognize as the common desire of every minister, leads anyone to attend any church in the City and to become actively interested in its work, something worth while will be accomplished.

Murray Street is planning a forward movement in church attendance that she may be of greater service.

MANY ITEMS FOR ECONOMIC SIDE OF CONFERENCE

Schemes For Development of Settlement and Trade on Agenda.

ONE CONFERENCE.

At Last Meeting There Were Two Sections Meeting at Once.

(By George Hambleton, Staff Correspondent, Canadian Press).

OTTAWA, Oct. 4.—Schemes for the development of overseas settlement, schemes for the development of inter-Empire trade, proposals varying from the standardization of social insurances to research into the growing of cotton—it is a varied bill of fare which awaits the representatives at the Imperial Conference when they turn from politics to economy. Under the former head they have to consider not only the part which the Dominions are to play in foreign policy but they have to consider inter-Imperial relations, the bearing of League of Nations membership on such relations, representation of the Empire at International conferences, communication and consultation—such and similar matters.

Among inter-Imperial questions may also arise the position of Governors-General. Members of the Irish Free State Government have announced their intention of raising the question. The point they raise is one whether or not the Governor General is entitled to change the nature of a despatch he is transmitting to the British Government.

The constitutional issue resulting from the refusal of dissolution to Premier King may likewise be brought up, but present indications are that this is unlikely to be pressed. The last conference was divided into two distinct sections. There was the Imperial economic conference meeting separately. This year there will be one conference.

ANTI-RED TROOPS PILLAGE NANCHANG

Foreigners Wounded By Troops of General Sun.

HANKOW, October 4 (Canadian Press).—Telegrams from authentic sources in Nanchang, dated September 26, say that Sun Chuan Fang, overlord of the five eastern provinces, and ruler of Kiangai, who is fighting the Cantonese, is completely in control of the city of Nanchang and that his soldiers are murdering and pillaging with casual lies running into the thousands.

Supplementary messages carry an appeal of the Methodist Mission in Nanchang for volunteers to assist in caring for wounded foreigners. Among the wounded foreigners are John S. Littell, Edward M. Littell, Rev. Lloyd Creaighill, his wife and child, all of the American Church Mission, and the Rev. W. R. Johnson and Mrs. Johnson and Dr. W. R. Libby, of the Methodist Mission.

Real Lions Are Hazards For the African Golfers

CAPE TOWN, Oct. 4.—Wild animals from the jungles have been hindering golf in Rhodesia in South Africa. Sharpshooters have been posted on some of the links with the view of shooting away the beasts.

At the Winkie course a rhinoceros has been appearing as a natural hazard, much to the discouragement of the players, while two lions have been seen frequently sauntering about the links at Beira. One of these was afterward shot by the men on outpost duty.

Between Beira and Dondo two grown elephants and a baby elephant tramped onto the main railway line and nearly wrecked a train. One of the animals was killed and the "elephant" catcher of the locomotive was smashed.

OLD TOMBSTONE IS DISCOVERED ON RIVER BANK

Slab Commemorating Stafford McComb Found Near Sewage Disposal Plant.

PETERBOROUGH MAN.

Had Grave Dug and Coffin Prepared Years Before Death.

A grim find, consisting of a small tombstone slab, picked up on the banks of the Otonabee, by one of the men employed in cleaning up the land around the new sewage disposal plant, is at present in the Pump House, in the care of ex-Alderman Joseph Crowe.

The stone, which is oval in shape, measuring 18 inches by fifteen, bears the inscription, "Here lies the body of Stafford McComb." It is believed the stone was removed by mischievous boys sailing on the river, and thrown it away when the novelty of possessing such an unusual trophy wore off.

Stafford McComb was a well-known and extremely eccentric Peterborough citizen who died more than forty years ago. He was a man who had a morbid interest in death and burial, and for many years previous to his demise, he had his own grave dug, and had his coffin, draped with crepe, kept in the old dead house of the Little Lake Cemetery, ready for the day when it would receive his corpse. The stone is rudely carved, and the lettering appears as though cut by a not very skilful hand. The belief is entertained that McComb himself executed the work, which thus became, nearly half a century after his remains had been consigned to the grave so long awaiting him, the sport of thoughtless boys, and the plaything of the caprice of fate.

JUDGE SCOUTS SECESSION TALK

Fails To See Advantage of Such a Course.

LORD DARLING.

OTTAWA, Oct. 4.—In reply to a question here on Saturday as to whether he had found in his dominion wide trip any wish in Canada to resign her position as one of the constituent parts of the British Empire, Lord Darling eminent British judge replied. "I have heard that there are a few people so foolish but I have not met one. No one has explained to me what advantage Canada would derive from such a course. English people who saw Canada come to the assistance of the Empire at the moment it was threatened, I am sure are not prepared to imagine such a sudden change of feeling on their part."

DAYLIGHT SAVING ENDS IN BRITAIN

Clocks Turned Back an Hour Yesterday—France Goes Back.

LONDON, October 4. — Canadian Press. — John Bull at home yesterday morning said good bye to daylight saving for this year, when Big Bens hands and the hands of all the little Bens throughout England, Scotland and Ireland were turned back an hour. Proposals to continue daylight saving for a month or two becau of the coal shortage made no impression on the government officials.

Daylight saving, time also came to an end in France this morning.

His Wife Was Too Clean Detroit Man Gets Divorce

DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 4.—Cleanliness may become cruelty if carried far enough, Judge Jayne ruled yesterday when he granted a divorce to Clarence Hunt from his wife, May, after Hunt told the court his wife was "to darn clean." When Hunt came home from work, he testified, he had to pass inspection in the hallway, and before he could enter the living room of his home, his wife made him spend several minutes under a shower-bath. At night, Hunt declared, his wife insisted that the windows of the sleeping room should be tightly shut to keep out germs.

TWO ELDERS ARE ORDAINED

Rev. William Allan Conducts Service at Buckhorn Church.

GOOD ATTENDANCE.

Six car loads, carrying thirty members of St. Paul's Church, yesterday afternoon journeyed to Buckhorn, where, in the Presbyterian Church, at the first ordination service held there since Church Union was consummated last year, Rev. William Allan ordained two elders. New members were received into the Church, several infants were christened, and the ordinance of the Lord's Supper was observed. Rev. Mr. Bray, minister of the church, welcomed Mr. Allan and the visitors from Peterborough, and took part in the opening exercises. In the large congregation were members of the other churches in the circuit, Lakehurst and Hall's Bridge.

At the evening service in Lakehurst, Rev. W. S. Edgar of Peterborough preached a sermon on the Scottish Covenanters to a good-sized congregation.

TICKET STRIP SHOWS SAVING

Produced-in-Canada Exhibition Plans Help Purchasers.

PRIZES GIVEN.

At a meeting of the committees responsible for arranging the Produced-in-Canada Exhibition, it was decided to set the figure for admission at the gates at 25 cents. This means that the purchase of strips of tickets, besides helping the young ladies in their contest, means a saving of ten cents on evry admission. The tickets are sold in strips at seven for a dollar.

The young lady selling most strips of tickets will win a valuable money prize besides being crowned Queen of Peterborough. Other prizes are given for the leader from day to day.

Relics Are Secured Of An Ancient Race

PLYMOUTH, England, Oct. 4—Lady Richmond Brown and Frederick A. Mitchell-Hedges explorers, landed here on Sunday from Central America, bringing what they claim is the only collection in the world of relics of the Chibchas Indians, ancient inhabitants of Colombia.

The Chibchas believed in a supreme being, but worshipped the sun, stars and other natural objects. They were quickly conquered in 1537 when the Spaniards reached their country. Their descendants, mixed with European blood, form a large part of the present population of Colombia.

EXHIBITION IS NOT TO BE TOO SERIOUS

Plenty of Amusement Planned For Next Week at Armories.

The Produced-in-Canada Exhibition will not be all serious. The Kiwanis Club has arranged for amusement in the form of games and dances. There will be a Wheel of Fortune, a "Bingo" game, and a dart game, at which valuable prizes will be given. A good orchestra has been engaged for the dancing which will take place in the prettily decorated band room upstairs. The Kiwaniqueens are doing their share by providing a fortune-telling booth, a hot dog booth, and a tea room. It is also probable that there will be several raffles under the direction of the Kiwaniqueens.

Son "Natural Born" Thief Asks Right To Shoot Him

OMAHA, Oct. 4 (Associated Press).—Sam Cosentino, Omaha watch repairer, asked police yesterday for the right to "shoot my son on sight," to stop him from "dragging down my family by his stealing."

Cosentino said his son, Mike, who is 17 years old, was "a natural born thief," whose activities "only death can stop."

Assistant Detective Chief Franks cooled Cosentino down somewhat, convinced him he was taking the wrong attitude, and Cosentina promised he would call the police as soon as he found his son.

"But it will require a lot of will power for me not to shoot," Cosentino warned.

TWO KILLED AND FIVE INJURED IN CROSSING WRECK

C.P.R. Steel Train and Gasoline Truck Crash Near Belleville.

GAS IGNITED.

Authorities Unable To Reveal Identity of Two Rail Victims.

BELLEVILLE, Oct. 4 (Canadian Press). — Thirty hours after the most sensational level crossing tragedy in the history of railroading in this country the authorities were unable to say positively last night who are the two men, one of them obviously old and the other a certainly quite young man, who were the victims of the crash between a Canadian Pacific steel train and McColl Brothers gasoline truck conveying over six hundred gallons of the liquid to Trenton.

Of the five injured men, Marshall McNabb, driver of the truck, is in Belleville General Hospital with one foot amputated but in a favorable condition and will likely recover. Engineer W. W. Bunnett and Fireman Leonard Ferguson, both of Smith's Falls, have gone on home. M. Fraser, whose small coupe was near the crossing and was burned is also in hospital with serious burns, and J. Franz of Montreal, passenger in the first coach of the train, who jumped when he saw the train alight has a broken arm. All will recover.

After constant investigation police authorities here have run down several blind clues as to the identity of the men whose mangled remains were picked off the cowcatcher of the engine. One is now believed to be Archie Reavie, aged about 75, a former out-patient No. 92762, of the Toronto General Hospital, but as to who the boy is, still remains a mystery.

People have informed the police of having seen them, the old man walking with a limp. McNabb has said he picked them up not far from the crossing and had intended taking them as far as Trenton.

Thousands of people visited the scene of the tragedy yesterday. Imagination fails to grasp completely the awfulness of the scene with a blazing train of ten coaches rushing at nearly sixty miles an hour, the flames mounting fifty feet in the air. Fences and telegraph and telephone poles and grass and everything inflammable near the crossing was almost instantly alight, the burning gasoline being sprayed in all directions.

The truck was utterly demolished and the wonder in the minds of people here is that the train itself was not wrecked since the truck loaded as it was, is said to have weighed six and a half tons.

Already there are indications that a strong demand will be presented to the railway commission and the railways—for the tracks of both the C.P.C. and the C.N.R. cross side by side there—for gates.

There is a wig-wag there now, but some time ago the watchman was taken off after a legal battle, with the railways holding out for the wig-wag as all that was necessary to protect the crossing. It is on the main highway, Toronto to Montreal, and many days over 1,000 cars pass over it.

POST OFFICE LOOTED.

Robbers Make Clean Get-Away With $7,000 From Gallivan, Sask.

SASKATOON, Sask., Oct. 4.—(Canadian Press).—Blowing a safe in the Post Office of Gallivan, Sask., on Saturday night, yeggmen decamped with a loot estimated at $7,000 in cheques and a large number of grain tickets. A merchant store operated by Alex. Lippe was also rifled and about $700 stolen. The robbers made a clean get-away.

The safe had been blown to fragments and pieces of bills were scattered on the floor by the force of the explosion.

Mr Lippe acted as paymaster for the United Grain Growers, which accounts for the large amount of cash in the safe.

RELATIONSHIP BETWEEN BRITAIN AND DOMINIONS TO BE DEFINED AT COMING EMPIRE CONFERENCE

COMPLETES FLIGHT.

Capt. Alan Cobham, British airman, modern Sir Francis Drake, who last Friday completed a 28,000-mile flight from England to Melbourne, Australia, and return. The feat has added impetus to the idea of an empire air service.

Australian Delegation Fears Other Dominions Seek Independence.

DANGER IN SYSTEM.

Dominions Have Little Part in Foreign Policies Empire.

LONDON, October 4 (Canadian Press).—Constitutional issues of the greatest importance, involving the whole relations of the Dominions with the Mother Country, will be raised at the Imperial Conference, opening here on October 19, according to despatches received here from Marseilles, where Premier S. M. Bruce, heading the Australian delegation, landed on Sunday.

For the first time in British history an attempt will be made to define these relations, which hitherto have been only loosely understood. A showdown, it is understood, will be forced by the Australian delegation, which plans to clear the air of hints emanating from certain other Dominions of a desire for an independent status.

Australia's concern for her sister Dominion's susceptibilities, no less than the latter's possible demand for an independent status, is likely to prove the vital factor in bringing this issue to a head at the conference. Australia, it is understood, will maintain that an internationally independent Dominion, having its own diplomatic relations with other countries, is incompatible with membership in the British Empire.

On the other hand, it is recognized that there is ever present danger in the present system, which gives Dominions so little weight in framing the Empire's foreign policy, that in the event of a war which one Dominion was not in sympathy, it might fail to give support. The almost certain consequences would be the loss of such a Dominion to the Empire.

MOTORS TAKE SEVERE TOLL

Three Killed and Eight Hurt Over the Week End in Hamilton.

THREE ARRESTED.

HAMILTON, Ont., Oct. 4.—Autos took a toll of three lives during the week-end and eight citizens were injured, two of them possibly fatally. The casualty list is the largest in the history of the city. In addition to the mishaps in which injuries were sustained, there were many in which the drivers and passengers escaped, but the autos were damaged. The auto casualty list for the week-end was as follows:

Dead.

Caleb DuVall, 9 Minto Avenue.
Mrs. Caleb DuVall, 9 Minto Avenue.
James Davies, 179 Sanford Avenue North.

Injured.

John Ratz, 49 Simcoe Street East; A. Zamysionaga, 364 Hughson Street North; Mrs. Forster, 187 Emerald Street North; Miss Florence Hardy, 197 Kenilworth Street, Toronto; Mrs. J. L. Hendershott, Concession Street, Mount Hamilton; John Phillips, 109 Wentworth Street South; Roy Bartlett, 264 Roxborough Avenue; Wm. Mattio, 178 Emerald Street South.

Under arrest charged with criminal negligence: Geo. Swick, 288 Ottawa Street North; Dennis McAuley, 18 Milton Avenue; M. Heffernon, 189 Emerald Street North.

Caleb and Mrs. DuVall, 9 Minto Avenue, were both killed Saturday night at 7 o'clock when the auto of Dennis McAuley, 18 Milton Avenue, swept over the sidewalk at Barton and Emerald Streets. McAuley alleged that a truck driven by Marathon Heffernon, 189 Emerald Street North, cut him off. McAuley and Heffernon were arrested on a charge of criminal negligence.

Mr. and Mrs. DuVall were walking west on Barton Street at the time. The auto was proceeding east on Barton Street and the truck was coming west on Barton Street and was about to turn south on Emerald Street. McAuley, in his statement, declared that he was cut off and swerved his car. In doing so the machine made for the curb and when it crashed into it the steering gear broke and he was practically helpless at the wheel. He tried his best to hit the two telegraph poles to avoid going onto the sidewalk, but the machine went between them and Caleb and Mrs. DuVall were directly in the path of the car. They were struck when it mounted the sidewalk. Mrs. DuVall suffered a fracture of the skull and died almost instantly. Mr. DuVall's legs were broken and he, too, had a fractured skull. He was rushed to the hospital by the east-end ambulance and died just as he was admitted. The auto finally came to a stop when it crashed into a house on

DOMINIONS STAND FIRM BY EMPIRE

Premier Bruce Says He Knows Nothing of a Separatist Movement.

MARSEILLES, Oct. 4.—(Canadian Press).—Premier Stanley M. Bruce of Australia, who is on his way to London to attend the Imperial Conference, in an interview here Saturday declared that he knew nothing of any separatist movement in any part of Empire. All dominion and colonies were deeply attached to Empire he said but the traditional attachment did not prevent dominions from claiming a larger degree of autonomy within framework of Empire.

Premier Bruce said the Australians, like the Canadians, desired and asked for increasing freedom, without however departing from loyalty to Empire.

Coming conference, Premier Bruce said, would discuss important question of Empire relations and probably also would discuss naval and military matters.

STATUE OF WOMAN IS WORTH $3,500

One of Exhibits Coming To Produced-in-Canada Exhibition.

A valuable and unique exhibit in the booth of the Government Department of Mines at the Produced-in-Canada Exhibition will be the statue of a woman made in silver. This is worth $3500.

The entire exhibition is designed to show the wonderful resources in Canada and the possibilities of development through manufacture.

Friendly Greeting Causes Drowning

ALEXANDRIA BAY, N.Y., Oct. 4 — Orrin Evans was thrown into the St. Lawrence River and drowned yesterday as the result of a presumably friendly slap on the back by Arthur Lefebre. The latter was arrested and taken to Jefferson County Jail on an open charge.

Harry Hunniwell, a witness, declared he and Evans were standing near the end of a dock when Lefebre approached and slapped Evans between the shoulders, saying "This is a great night for a swim, boys."

Evans staggered and fell into the stream, Hunniwell said, and efforts to reach him were unsuccessful.

Produced In Canada Exhibition

The young ladies who are working so hard in the Bond Selling Contest appreciate very much the courteous response and ready purchase of the bonds for the "Produced in Canada Exhibition." Their friends realize that the work being done by the Kiwanis Club in Peterboro, for the under-privileged child and other relief work, is well worthy of their support.

Principal John A. McKone of the Peterboro Business College has very generously offered a two months' business tuition, to one person from each village, in the contest. This is transferable to any other girl in the village, providing the girl who is the leader in the village, does not want to use same herself.

Mr. Fletcher, manager of the Capitol Theatre, has donated twelve single passes, for one month each, for the City girls who sell $100.00 of bonds or over. This is certainly very nice, and the Kiwanis Club and the girls appreciate it very much. The managers o the Regent Theatre, Mr. Miller and Mr. Davern, have also donated four single passes for one month each, to the four leading girls in the country. This is very generous and the girls wish to thank them. Mr. Fletcher has also offered four single passes, for one month each, to the four leading girls in the country.

The prizes for tomorrow will be awarded to the girls turning in the most bonds by 10 A.M. to Mr. John I. Allen, Superintendent Prudential Insurance Company, Royal Bank Bldg., and they are as follows:

(1) 'Ladies' Leather Hat Box—donated by Robert Neill Company. This is certainly a beautiful hat box and is very much appreciated.

(2) Silk Parasol—donated by Richard Hall and Sons. This is very beautiful and is considered quite valuable.

The girls thank the Richard Hall Company as well as the Robert Neill Company.

The winners for today are as follows:

(1)	Miss Loretta Sedgwick	55,000
(2)	No country report received.

The eight leading girls are as follows:

(1)	Marion McCannon	112,000
(2)	Bregetta Conroy	95,000
(3)	Alice Johnson	68,000
(4)	Loretta Sedgwick	65,000
(5)	Marjorie Laing	38,000
(6)	Edna Thompson	31,000
(7)	Hazel Jackson	26,000
(8)	Annie Logan	22,000

A full list of all girls selling Bonds will be published on Thursday.

JOHN I. ALLEN,
Chairman, Bond Selling Contest.

REV. W. H. YOUNG GIVES SERMON AT NEW SERVICE

Choir and Congregation Take More Intimate Part in Worship.

IS SEMI-LITURGICAL.

Attempt Made To Increase Spirit of Reverence in Sanctuary.

In St. Paul's United Church, Toronto, of which Rev. W. Harold Young, formerly of George Street Church here, is minister, a new form of service was yesterday introduced with the object in view of creating a more worshipful spirit. For some time past the congregation has had under consideration the problem of increasing the spirit of reverence, so necessary in church services and, as expressed by the pastor, to get away from the idea that the sermon was the chief consideration. The paramount idea, it was agreed, should be attending church that "together we may join in the worship of God."

A committee was appointed by the board to formulate an order of service and, after receiving suggestions from members of the congregation, an order of service was drafted and carried into effect yesterday morning. From the moment that the congregation rose to its feet on the entrance of the choir, until the concluding moment of silent prayer, the atmosphere of reverence was evidentt, reaching a climax in a powerful sermon by Rev. Mr. Young on the subject, "The Church is the Body of Christ."

The order of the service might be termed "semi-liturgical" and involves the choir and congregation taking a more intimate part. The numbers of the hymns and announcements from the pulpit were omitted. The following order of service was adopted: Praise, invocation, hymn, prayer of confession, responsive reading, Gloria, Scripture reading, choral response, pastoral prayer, offering, hymn, sermon, hymn, benediction, choral amen, silent prayer.

For the present the change will be confined to the morning service only. There has prevailed for some time a feeling among the congregations and ministers of the United Church, that such a step was necessary and St. Paul's United has been the first to arrange a new form of service, which will offer greater opportunity for the congregation to participate.

SALVATION ARMY TEMPLE.

The rally day exercises at the Salvation Army Temple brought out large congregations to each service during the day.

The morning service was directed by Assistant Sergt.-Major Wilfred Boorman and his address was a most appropriate one for the occasion.

In the afternoon a well arranged programme was given by the different sections of the Young People's Corps and included a descriptive dialogue by several of the young people, depicting the various phases of Salvation Army work amongst the young. Mr. George Collins gave a helpful talk on the "Relation of the parent to the Sunday school." Mrs. Bennett vividly described by objects the work of the Sand Tray Class. The Young Peoples' Band, under the direction of the young peoples' band leader, Mr. Joseph Halcrow, played twice. Other equally interesting items, made a most enjoyable afternoon.

A large delegation from the Brown ton Temple. under Sergt.-Major Lashbrook, was present and took part in the programme.

At night an exceptionally large congregation was present. Junior Anna Rose recited and Life Saving Guards Margaret and Ivy Ham sang a duet. Young People's Sergt-Major R. C. Braund gave a short but instructive address on the work among the young people, throwing out a challenge to all to be personally identified with the training of the young people of the city, and to be linked up with some endeavor for the betterment of mankind.

To-night (Monday) the annual Y. P. Harvest Festival Sale will be held. A large crowd is expected.

ST. PAUL'S PRESBYTERIAN

(Contributed.)

Four questions being widely asked today were asked and answered from the pulpit of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church last evening before a congregation which showed signs of soon being as large as those which filled the church last winter and spring. That those present were keenly interested was shown by the intense manner in which they followed the address throughout, including the earnest appeal that sinners should accept Christ, which always marks Rev. Mr. Allan's addresses. In view of the fact that the old organ has been removed, preparatory to the installation of the new organ, a small organ with a piano accompaniment is being used with excellent effect. It is understood that the new organ will be ready for use by December 10.

Masonry and the Church

The first question asked by Rev. Allan was, "Is it true that if every Mason lived up to the standards of that Order, there would be no need for the Church?" The speaker admitted that he was not a Mason, but said he was intimately acquainted with many Masons in different countries and knew them to be a fine body of men. The teachings of their Order also and their standards and rules, he knew to be of the highest character. He had however, never met a Mason who would make any such claims for the Masonic Order as are made for the Church. The Church was supernatural in its origin. It was clearly predicted in the Scriptures centuries before it was established at Penatcost. It was established through the Gift of the Holy Spirit which indwells all true believers. Members of the Church are described in the Scriptures as being members of the Body of Christ. No Mason makes such claims for the Masonic Order. The Church claims Jesus Christ as its supreme head. The Masonic Order can scarcely do this, in view of the fact that it has Unitarians and Jews as members of some of its lodges. The order is a splendid one and doing a great work, but does not itself claim it could replace the Church of Christ.

Swimming the Channel

The second question was, "Of what possible use is the swimming of the English Channel?" Stating that all had been thrilled by the successful efforts, as well as by the various attempts to swim the English Channel during the past summer, and expressing the highest appreciation of the value of knowing how to swim, Rev. Mr. Allan stated that there is a danger that we are laying too much emphasis on what is not of first rate importance, and intimated that he felt this was being done in the matter of the swimming of the Channel.

Prize Fighters versus Professors

The third question was "Is it right that two prize fighters should make more money in one night than two university professors can earn in a lifetime?" Stating that few University professors are able to earn salaries of as high as $10,000.00 a year, the speaker showed that it was virtually impossible for two such professors to earn as much as Dempsey and Tunney did in the recent fight, when one received $700,000.00 and the other $200,000.00 to say nothing of what Tunney's earnings will be during the next few years. Admitting that there must be a powerful appeal in such spectacles, as shown by the fact that 130,000 people attended the recent fight on a rainy night, the speaker stated that after all the chief appeal is to the animal nature. Comparing the usefulness of the work of professors with that of prize fighters, and asking if the salvation of one heathen in darkest Africa, possibly converted under the teachings of a missionary earning between $500.00and $1,000.00 a year, could be compared in importance with the results of the recent fight, the speaker intimated that, like Channel swimming, too much emphasis was being placed in the wrong place.

The Best Kind of Home

Following a special selection by the choir, Rev. Mr. Allan asked the fourth question, "Why is it that the most desirable kind of a house is not to be had in Peterborough?" associated with which was the question, "Suppose there was no God, No Church, no Bible, what then?" The text was chosen from Prov. 13, 15: "The way of the transgressor is hard." Mentioning that Jesus was in the habit of entering different homes, the speaker showed that every home is under a shadow. The shadow may take different forms. It may be actual, spiritual, moral, or material dearth, or the fear of these things. Ever since the fall of man sin has been in the world and until it has been removed all our home rest under a shadow. Space does not permit of a full development of this theme, which was admirably and forcefully presented. It was shown that mankind has always been seeking to throw off all restraints, especially those imposed by God. Such people include too many ministers of the Gospel who tell us that the Scriptures are full of error, and who must be classed among those who are seeking to cast off the restraints of the Bible. In asking the question, what conditions would be like if there were no God and no Bible, as well as no Church, the speaker called attention to conditions that existed following the French Revolution and the recent revolution in Russia, where the leaders sought to accomplish this very condition — far as these countries were concerned.

God, the Scriptures and the Church are a constant rebuke to sin. They spoil the enjoyment of many who desire to live lives of sinners, but did none of them exist, the fact of sin would still exist and also the fact that the way of the transgressor is hard. But God does exist and has provided a way of escape for sinners from judgment to come through the Cross of Christ. The judgment of God upon sin fell upon Christ as He hung on the Cross. Guilty sinners who recognize that Christ paid that penalty in order that they through faith might be saved, should accept the pardon so freely offered.

REV. DAVID WREN GIVES ADDRESS TO ROTARIANS

New Pastor of Trinity Church Speaker at Luncheon.

PRESENTATION MADE.

Club's Pianist Is Thanked For His Valuable Services

An eloquent address by Rev. David Wren, pastor of Trinity United Church, featured the regular weekly luncheon of the Peterborough Rotary Club today, the speaker taking as his subject, "Working Capital."

In the absence through illness of President C. H. Rogers, Past President J. H. Seels occupied the chair.

An interesting feature was a presentation to Charles Sedgewick, the club's pianist, as a tribute from the music committee of his splendid service. The presentation was made by Rotarian Doug. Fletcher on behalf of the committee.

Rotarian W. R. Morris stated that several members were contemplating attending the convention of Rotary International at Ostend next summer, and advised others considering the matter to make their applications before November 15th.

Chairman Seels reminded the members of the Kiwanis Produced-in-Canada Exhibition next week and urged every member of the Rotary Club to get behind the Exhibition and help make it a huge success.

The speaker of the day was introduced by Rotarian Dr. M. A. Morrison.

Rev. Mr. Wren's address was both eloquent and inspirational. He deprecated the tendency on the part of some people to believe that the world had entered upon evil days. On the other hand, he believed that never before had there been such opportunities for service, and he proceeded to examine the working capital that should be utilized in meeting the challenge of the times. Money power, brain power, energy and character were some of the tools with which the speaker mentioned as essential, particularly stressing the importance of character.

A hearty vote of thanks was tendered Mr. Wren at the conclusion of his address.

FIRE LOSS FALLS ON EVERY PERSON

High Insurance Premiums Make Costs of Necessities Greater.

Fire Prevention Week is the anniversary date of the great Chicago fire, for it was on October 9th, 1871, that Mrs. O'Leary's cow kicked over a lantern in a barn and thus started the big fire. Since then this time of year has been set aside for the teaching of fire prevention principles, and the cow has become the symbol for everyday carelessness which must be curbed if the country's disgraceful fire waste is to be restricted.

Fire Prevention Week is a week of education; it is a period in which an effort is made to focus the attention of every man, woman and child on the dangers to life and property which lurk in fires and the method by which most fires can be prevented.

Last year over 610 million dollars worth of property was destroyed in Canada and the United States. This is a fact that should interest everyone, for every fire loss affects either their freedom or their pocket-book. People are taxed to cover the loss and the portion of it which everyone pays is the part of the cost of a loaf of bread, or a pair of shoes, or a suit of clothes. When they buy these articles they pay the tax for they cannot avoid it. They are taxed through insurance companies to which they pay the premiums, for it is these companies that distribute their money among the careless ones who have fires. If the carelessness of these people could be curbed, less money to insurance companies would be paid, and the baker, the clothier, and the shoemaker would not have to add the little extra to what they have to sell.

Thus from the financial standpoint people should co-operate to prevent fires and to help to control the carelessness amongst their fellow-citizens.

PLAN BABY SHOW FOR WEDNESDAY

Entries May Be Made Immediately—Doctors Accept Invitation.

The baby show in connection with the Produced-in-Canada Exhibition will be held on Wednesday afternoon, October 13, and entries will be received immediately at Le Brun's store and at Bond's Drug Store. The classes will be announced in a day or two, but in the meantime the babies should be entered.

Three doctors have already accepted the invitation of Kiwanis Club to act as judges.

This competition between the babies for valuable prizes promises to be one of the outstanding features of the exhibition.

Y.W.C.A. HOLDS JUNIOR RALLY

Over 300 Children Assemble on Saturday For Opening.

SWIMMING MEET.

The Junior Rally held at the Young Women's Christian Association on Saturday afternoon was one of the most successful in the history of the institution. Over three hundred juniors were present, also many parents, and the big gymnasium was taxed to its utmost capacity, as were the lower rooms when refreshments were served the children, it being necessary to serve them in relays. The youngsters appeared to have a thoroughly good time, and enjoyed themselves immensely with an impromptu programme of games and massed 'gym' exercises. The Babies' Class, with some of the Intermediates, gave the "Peter Pan" dance, a number of girls gave a Highland Fling dance, and a Rose dance was demonstrated by Mrs. Willison and Myrtle Bradley. The children were welcomed by the new president, Miss M. Hamilton, and Miss C. Littlefield also outlined briefly the schedule of different classes for the coming season. Ladies of the Physical committee, mothers of children, and several of the seniors assisted in the service of refreshments, which concluded the programme of the afternoon.

On Friday evening, in connection with the senior rally, an impromptu swimming exhibition was given by the following young ladies: Viola Harvey, Mary Dunlop, Margaret Dunlop, Ina Terrace, Mary Comstock, Arleigh Comstock, Jean Harvey, Muriel Wilson and Sadie Levine.

CLOSE ACCORD ON NEGOTIATIONS

France and Britain Agree on Franco-German Understanding.

CONFERENCE HELD.

PARIS, Oct. 4 (Canadian Press) —France and Great Britain are in accord concerning negotiations for a closer Franco-German understanding, it was announced after a talk yesterday between Foreign Minister Briand and Sir Austen Chamberlain.

The British Foreign Secretary stopped off to see M. Briand, returning to London from Italy.

The two statesmen went over the whole gamut of international problems according to a communique issued after the meeting and agreed on a common policy.

FIVE DAY WEEK NEXT ADVANCE

Annual Convention of A. F. L. Meets To Consider Many Matters.

INSURANCE COMPANY

DETROIT, Mich., October 4. — (Canadian Press).—Committed to the five-day week as the next major forward step for "the highest paid worker in the world," the executive officers of the American Federation of Labor turned to-day in the opening sessions of the Federation's 46th annual convention, to the multitude of problems centred on the welfare of American labor.

Eleventh hour agreements between groups widely separated on several vexatious questions, opened a fair prospect for the two weeks' assemblage bringing forth the prediction of prominent leaders that the entire time probably would be devoted to deliberations upon constructive policies bearing directly upon the immediate programme of the convention.

The successful culmination of the two years' endeavor to launch a national life insurance organization controlled by members of the Federation was announced to-day by Matthew Woll, vice-president of the National Labor body, and president of the recently incorporated Union Labor Life Insurance Company.

With an initial capital of $600,000 almost entirely paid in by members of affiliated Labor organizations and anticipating formal approval of the enterprise by the convention this week.

Directors of the insurance company, all of whom are officers of the Federation, are now planning to launch a standard insurance organization during the next year.

CHORISTERS HOLD ANNUAL MEETING

W. H. Kidd Re-elected President of Murray Street Choir.

(Contributed.)

The annual business meeting of the Murray Street Baptist Choir was held on Thursday evening, Sept. 3, and gave abundant evidence that this organization is a live and going concern, the members of which not only possess musical ability, but an abundance of wit and humor and an appreciation of clever nonsense, as well.

A slate of twelve candidates was presented for the six offices to be filled.

Prior to the balloting, the various candidates were called upon to give their reasons why they should, or should not be elected.

These speeches provoked much mirth, by their humor and originality.

Some of the candidates had evidently followed the recent election closely and made use of the politicians' methods to secure votes, as when one candidate for convenor of the social committee rose to her feet and immediately launched her attack upon the male element by presenting to their view artistically mounted, colored illustrations of toothsome delicacies, dear to the male heart (or stomach). From the immediate and enthusiastic response of the "sterner sex," it was evident she had her opponent beaten before she started, and, when she proceeded to describe, in glowing language, the "ambrosia and nectar" which she proposed, if elected, to furnish, for all choir banquets, during her regime, her audience became so enthusiastic and the clamor for ballots so incessant, that proceedings were in imminent danger of being halted until order could be restored.

One candidate for the office of treasurer informed the gathering that he had prepared a fine speech, which would doubtless have assured his election, but just before rising to his feet, had decided not to deliver it, as the following telegram had been handed him:

"Miami,
Florida, Sept. 30.

"To the Murray St. Choir,
"Peterborough, Ont., Canada.

"Be sure and elect A. J. Radden treasurer Murray Street Choir, in order to avoid another cyclone in Florida, another general election in Canada, another coal strike in Britain and another fire sale on George Street.

"Signed; Mugzy Leno."

This telegram, coupled with the brilliant scheme to raise funds, outlined by the other candidate, resulted in the election of the latter.

The various flights of oratory were frequently interruped by the pungent and witty interrogations of one of the city's leading legal lights, who sat in a dark corner and occupied himself with heckling the candidates.

The balloting resulted in an overwhelming majority for W. H. Kidd for president for a second term, testifying in no uncertain manner to the choir's appreciation of his tact, geniality and untiring efforts on its behalf.

The other officers elected were Vice President, Mrs. E. Sage; Secretary, Miss E. Smith; Treasurer, Mr. A. J. Raddon; Convenor of Social Committee, Miss M. Montgomery; Representative to the Music Committee of the Church, Mr. H. H. Graham.

CROWN PRINCE ENGAGED.

Women's Danger

Of offending under the oldest hygienic handicap is ended this way

WITH the old-time "sanitary pad" women realize their constant danger of offense. And thus spend unhappy days.

"KOTEX," a new and remarkable way, is now used by 8 in 10 better class women.

It's five times as absorbent as ordinary cotton pads!

You dine, dance, motor for hours in sheerest frocks without a second's doubt or fear.

It deodorizes, too. And thus stops ALL danger of offending.

Discards as easily as a piece of tissue. No laundry. No embarrassment.

You ask for it at any drug or department store, without hesitancy, simply by saying "KOTEX."

Do as millions are doing. End old, insecure ways. Enjoy life every day. Package of twelve costs only a few cents.

No laundry—discard like tissue

RUSSIANS REMOVE FLAGS FROM ISLAND

Haul Down British and U. S. Flags on Wrangel.

TOKIO, October 4. — Canadian Press. — A despatch to the newspaper Nichi from Hakdotate, Japan, says the Russian volunteer fleet association's ship Stavropol has arrived from Wrangel Island, where it removed the British and United States flags and raised the red banner.

THE IRON SECONDS.

The organization by former local members of the famous unit of a 2nd Battalion club is a step upon which they are to be congratulated.

No unit in the Canadian Expeditionary Force has a more glorious heritage of traditions to preserve or a finer record to keep green in memory.

To Peterboro people the Iron Seconds have a peculiar appeal.

It was with that battalion that the city's first infantry quota saw active service, and with the 2nd, too, that many well-known Peterboro men made the supreme sacrifice.

Numbered among those who have associated themselves with the new club are men who were with the 2nd Battalion from its organization; some indeed who served with the Iron Seconds throughout all the years of its glorious service.

They will have an especial interest in keeping alive the spirit of the battalion, and of maintaining the feeling of comradeship, the esprit de corps that existed during the war years.

The 2nd Battalion Club should have a successful career, for it starts out enriched with memories of a glorious war record and bulwarked with members who experienced the acid test and triumphed.

THE NEW GOVERNOR-GENERAL.

Le roi est mort;; vive le roi.

Canada welcomes her new Governor-General, Lord Willingdon, none the less warm-heartedly because of the regret with which the departure of Lord Byng was received.

Even with those who believed that the hero of Vimy erred in judgment in his handling of the recent political crisis, there is a feeling akin to sorrow that his term of office has ended.

Lord Byng came to this country with an illustrious record as a soldier, and he has left it with the reputation of having at all times and everywhere during his term of office preached the doctrine of Canadian unity.

His every address stressed this need; he was quick to realize that the outstanding problem in this country was to get its people to think on national lines, in terms of Canada, and to the credit of Lord Byng may it be remembered long after the constitutional argument has passed into the limbo of forgotten things, that no other man has so emphatically and earnestly urged Canadians to act as one.

His successor brings with him a record as brilliant as an administrator and diplomatic as was Lord Byng's as a soldier.

He declares his sincere belief that his term as Governor-General will be a happy one—and The Examiner sincerely echoes that hope, happy for himself and his consort and happy for this country.

IMMIGRATION POLICIES.

Hon. Robert Forke, new Minister of Immigration, in a newspaper interview, has intimated that his idea of a sound immigration policy is to make sure there is a place for the newcomers before bringing them into this country.

That sounds reasonable, although there are some newspapers which argue that Canada can absorb immigrants as fast as they can be obtained, and that the crying need of the country is more people.

The Examiner is inclined to agree with Mr. Forke.

An immigration policy that merely concerns itself with bringing people in and does not do anything for them after they have been brought in is not good business.

We have been doing too much of that kind of thing; too much spending of good Canadian money to secure new citizens who merely tarry here until they can slip across the border.

Too much, too, in bringing in alleged farm labourers who drift away from the farms and help glut the labour market in industrial centres.

Let Canada get into full swing, create if possible conditions where there are more jobs than men, and it will be time to talk of unlimited immigration.

In the meantime, Mr. Forke's contention is sound—bring immigrants in as they can be absorbed, and the results will be happier for them and for the country.

TO IMPROVE RECEPTION.

The attention of all radio set-owners in Peterboro is called to the meeting which is to be held in the Chamber of Commerce on Wednesday night for the purpose of organizing an association to help eliminate local interference and improve radio conditions in Peterboro.

These objects should commend themselves to the hundreds of set-owners in the city.

As The Examiner pointed out a few days ago, local reception is more or less marred by interference much of which is avoidable.

The conditions that cause listeners-in annoyance and difficulty can for the most part be improved; but their happy result cannot be brought about by individual effort.

Co-operation on the part of radio enthusiasts is the only course that offers a chance for success; a strong and enthusiastic association here can confidently look forward to improved reception conditions.

The radio season opens with the advent of autumn, and great broadcasting stations are announcing programmes of unusual merit and magnitude.

The coming months will bring on the air the most wonderful entertainment and instruction features in history, and it is therefore of the greatest importance that local conditions should be so dealt with as to ensure worth-while reception.

Wednesday's meeting should thus be marked by a representative and enthusiastic attendance.

FORESTS AND FISH.

That Master of Ignorance, Arthur Brisbane, is not alone in talking nonsense about the Maharajah of Alwar, an Indian potentate who was rented some fishing in Ireland and a moor in Scotland for shooting deer. Ignorant American correspondents play into Mr. Brisbane's hands by talking of a "river" in Ireland, and a deer "forest" in Scotland. It may not interest them and the proprietors of papers who encourage the publication of nonsense, but it can be said that there are at least a thousand such "rivers" rented in the British Islands every year, for fishing; and that a deer "forest" in Scotland does not contain much except stones, fresh air and heather, while the things it does contain do not include trees. Mr. Brisbane, who is distressed about the Maharajah's "half-starved Indian subjects," says that "the Scotch will shoot no deer, although they take care of the deer forests." It will soothe his feeling heart to be told that the deer forest will take care of itself as completely as Mount McKinley or Mount Everest.

A "river" for fishing in Great Britain is merely that part of a stream with the same land owner on both banks, holding therefore the complete fishing rights of the stream so long as it is on his property. Obviously no one can fish his river without trespassing on his land. To read the Brisbane method of presentation, the Indian Prince might have been supposed to have hired something like the Hudson, from its source to its mouth, instead of two or three miles of a stream which, almost automatically, preserves its own sporting rights. A Scottish "deer forest" is merely a stretch of moorland on which the grazing is too thin to support sheep profitably, to say nothing of cattle. For the most part, it is not even enclosed, and the deer can subsist there only because of the large area and their active habits. The only cultivation near it is in the small crofts which lie in the secluded valleys where there happens to be a stream and Nature has made a patch of meadowland. Shooting the deer is no disservice to the crofter, for if a stag breaks through the fence he can destroy half an acre of turnips in a night. He takes from each turnip a single bite and tosses the remainder over his shoulder. Paying heavy taxes and receiving no income, except when they find someone willing to rent them, the owners of these deer "forests" preserve both the deer and the crofter.—Barron's.

THE RESCUE AT IRONWOOD.

The rescue of the 43 entombed miners at Ironwood, Michigan, sends a thrill through all the newspaper-reading world. It is a story at once so pitiful and so ominous, and the efforts at rescue so great and so resolute, that the successful termination of the effort to save the men conveys an almost continental gratification. Hundreds of workers labored for five days in various directions, 10,000 people greeted the success of their unselfish and anxious work—all humanity near by was desperately interested, and humanity everywhere avid for success of the effort of salvation.

What was the stake? The lives of 43 men, hard-working and not too well paid men, whose lives now that they are saved will simply return to a severe daily grind, enjoying little either of this world's goods or pleasures. At the threatened loss of these poor lives, there was intense widespread sympathy and solicitude felt, not merely in the little town of Ironwood, Michigan, but far and wide on the continent. How much of the solicitude will remain alive for the sake of the welfare of these poor lives? Is it not after all rather a curious thing that all of us should get so excited about the mere saving and prolongation of hard lives, when the same sort of sympathy and solicitude, if it could be called forth in some effective way, could do a tremendous lot to improve and brighten the lives that are everywhere with us?

The hundreds who worked to save the lives of the poor chaps entombed far below the surface of the earth and the tens of thousands, yes, the hundreds of thousands of us who watched with deep interest and pity the efforts at rescue, will now turn back to our daily doing pretty much indifferent to the hardness and bareness of the lives of hundreds of thousands of other people who are in just as poor circumstances and as hard-driven as the 43 men whose lives were saved at Ironwood.

Human nature is indeed a curious thing. It is everywhere so prompt and keen in vigor to come to the rescue in some immediate disaster which has taken life or threatened life, and is then so willing to slump back into comparative indifference to conditions of society which mean hardship, or at least absence of most of the fine things of life, to vast numbers of our neighbors.

However, it is true to say, we think, that all the time humanity is making progress, that things in general are improving slowly but surely for the mass of mankind, and that in time the world in general and the lives of the mass of humanity will come to something a great deal better than is the case at present. —Ottawa Journal.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Youth must be served, yet Grover Cleveland Alexander showed yesterday that the old fellows sometimes have their inning.

An ounce of fire prevention is worth a pound of fire fighting. A good thing to remember in connection with Fire Prevention Week.

The City Council evidently regards the advertising secured by the Peterboro Hockey Club for the city as good publicity—so long as it doesn't have to be paid for.

Who is going to be Queen of Peterboro promises to be a live question among the city's fair sex for the next few days.

Apparently Ontario is going to have to struggle along without a great deal of Alberta coal this winter. The Ferguson-Bennett scheme was only one among many things that went down with the Meighen Government on September 14th.

Yesterday's weather was the kind the Peterboro Industrial Exhibition directors hoped to have had. And if their wishes had borne fruit, the attendance record would have been completely distanced.

CATTLE, GRAIN AND PRODUCE

Peterboro—Toronto—Montreal Winnipeg

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Oct. 4 (Canadian Press).—Prospects that the Canadian wheat visible supply total today will be enlarged as much as 8,000,000 bushels, did a good deal Saturday to send wheat values lower. Closing quotations on wheat heavy, at 3-4 to 1 1-4c net decline, whereas corn showed 1 1-8 to 1 3-8c advance, with oats unchanged to 3-8c up. Provisions finished unchanged to 30c down.

Wheat prices gave way rapidly at the last, demand proving limited, when traders who earlier had been buyers attempted to realize profits. Some of the earlier purchasing of wheat was due to reports that rain was again threatening in Canada, but aggressive corn buying on the part of speculators was more largely responsible for temporary strength which at one stage developed in the wheat market. On the whole, however, weather conditions in Canada appeared to have become a good deal improved and this circumstance, together with likelihood of a big increase in the Canadian visible supply figures, dominated the market at the finish.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Oct. 4 (Canadian Press).—The export trade in Canadian grain on the Montreal market Saturday was again exceedingly slow. Local exporters attribute the dullness to the fact that other countries are offering oats and barley at much lower prices than they can compete with and until these supplies cease to be offered, little improvement in the situation can be looked for here. Some bids were received from the United Kingdom on Saturday for barley which were four cents per bushel below cost.

There was some demand from domestic buyers for Ontario malting barley and sales were made at 79c to 80c per bushel, ex-track, and car lots of Ontario No. 3 white oats changed hands at 58c to 59c, and No. 4 at 57c to 58c per bushel.

The demand for Canadian Western grades was steady and prices were firm. The local and country demand for Spring wheat flour was good and a moderate amount of business was done. The export trade was quiet. Values were firm. The undertone to the winter wheat situation was firm and a fair business was transacted.

Prices for all grades of millfeed were well maintained under a good demand. A stronger feeling developed in rolled oats and prices were marked up another 10 cents per bag. The demand is steadily increasing.

Egg receipts 676 cases. Stocks of fresh eggs have accumulated tending to create an easier feeling in the market. There was no actual change in prices, except for seconds which were shaded 1 cent to 2 cents per dozen in order to move them. The volume of business in storage eggs was fair and the tone of the market was steady. Improved demand from English importers has brightened up the export situation in storage eggs.

Butter prices through the week ruled fairly steady at a decline of 1-2c to 3-4c per lb. The market has been quiet and the bulk of the trading was confined to small lots. Saturday's receipts were 1,479 packages.

The undertone of the cheese market was weaker and prices closed 1-4 cents per pound lower than a week ago. Receipts on Saturday were 9,627 boxes.

STERLING EXCHANGE

MONTREAL, Oct. 4 (Canadian Press). — Sterling exchange rates were quoted here Saturday as follows:

Sterling demand $4.84 1-8.
Sterling cables $4.84 3-4.

KLANSMEN AND ENEMIES FIGHT

More Than 500 Take Part in Revolver Battle in Grotton, Mass.

WOUNDED MISSING.

GROTTON, Mass. October 4. — (Canadian Press).—A revolver and rifle battle between Klan and anti-Klan forces, numbering more than 500 persons, in which more than 100 shots were fired, shortly after midnight Saturday, was under investigation to-day by town and state police.

The disturbance, the latest of a long series which have occurred in various parts of the State in the past two years, was without apparent casualty, although the police leaned to the theory that the injured, if any, probably were carried off in the machines of friends.

BAND STAND FOR EXHIBITION GROUND

Suggested That the Band at Campbellford Could Be Heard Better.

CAMPBELLFORD, October 4—A visitor at the Fair on Friday suggests that a band stand in the centre of the grounds would be an improvement over present conditions, as the music of the band does not sound to the best advantage under the sloping roof and boarded front.

The band is a good one and deserves the best playing conditions.

Another angle is that the grand stand would be used to a greater extent because of the larger seating capacity afforded, and at present it is possible a number of people would not like to take a seat so close to the band, and if they did the music could not be appreciated.

This suggestion might be acceptably considered by the Agricultural Society, who have given evidence in the past that they are desirous of making any advantageous improvement.

PENNY POSTAGE CUTS REVENUE

Drop in Three Months Is Nearly Million Dollars.

FEWER STAMPS OUT.

OTTAWA, Ont., Oct. 4. — Penny postage, established on July 1st, is affecting the postal revenues of the country.

The returns from the sale of stamps in the three months since the reduction went into affect, have not yet been received but the value of stamps issued by the Depa ment shows a decrease of $948,000 in July, August and September. It is apparent that maintenance of the drop letter rate in urban centres will help very materially to arrest the decline of revenue from the general letter rate reductions.

HOW DO YOU SAY IT?

(By C. N. Lurie.)

Common Errors in English and How To Avoid Them.

(Copyright, McClure Syndicate.)

"FORTY" or "FOURTY"

A correspondent wishes to know why we write "four," and not "fourty." He writes:

"Will you kindly publish the following question, with its answer: "If the word 'four' is a numeral and the word 'for' is a preposition, why is the numeral word 'forty' spelled with a preposition instead of being spelled 'fourty'?"

Of course, it need hardly be written that the preposition "for" has no connection with the numerals "four," "fourteen" and "forty."

As for "four" and "forty," they furnish an interesting example of the lack of logic in English spelling. While "four" was never formerly spelled with a "u" or "w," the word which we now spell "forty" was formerly spelled either with or without the "u" or the "w." In Middle English it was "forti," "fourti" or "fowerti." There seems to have been no reason for the dropping of the "u," save, perhaps, the general trend toward simplification of spelling.

FURY OF STORM IS DISCOVERED

Typhoon on China Coast Sent Waves Over Lighthouse.

COPING DAMAGED.

HONG KONG, October 2nd. — (Canadian Press). — Waves more than 140 feet above the normal high water mark with a force that twisted the steel jib and washed away Coping Stones at the summit of the tall lighthouse sixty miles south of Hong Kong evidenced the fury with which the elements lashed China's south coast last Monday. As the work of searching for survivors of the typhoon, which early reports indicated may have taken a toll of native life ranging as high as two thousand, continues, amazing stories of the strength of the great storm are brought to likght.

Lyrics Of Life

(By Douglas Malloch.)

RIGHT CANNOT LOSE

Do right to those who do you wrong,
And to the curt be kind,
For all that matters all along
Is your own heart and mind.
If rude another seems to be,
Then rudeness meet with courtesy.

And even in some large affair,
Whatever foes oppress,
The strongest armor one can wear
Is simple quietness,
A steel they cannot penetrate
With all the weapons of debate.

The jealous mind is never just,
The angry never wise.
With calmness meet the angry thrust
Until the anger dies.
You never lose with peace within,
And, if you lose not, who can win?

The gentle are the masters of
The world, and not the strong,
For, when they hate you, you can love,
Do right when they do wrong.
Though foes assault, though friends accuse,
Wrong cannot win, right cannot lose.

DR FRANK CRANE'S DAILY EDITORIAL.

HINDRANCES TO TRAVEL

By Dr. Frank Crane.

It ought to be commonly accepted that travel is good for a citizen and also good for the country in which he lives. A traveled man usually is a better citizen. He has a chance to observe the customs of foreign countries and it usually strengthens him in the love of his own and makes him more tolerant in his opinions about other nations.
